Marine Corps Uses Trask Coliseum for Exercise Southern Response

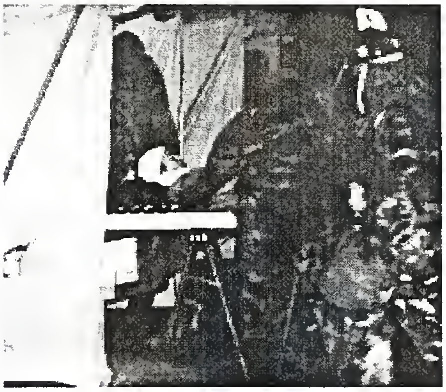
Trask Coliseum served as the primary site for Exercise Southern Response conducted June 29-30 by the Marine Corps' Chemical Biological Incident Response Force (CBIRF) from Camp Lejeune. The military unit is trained to respond to weapons of mass destruction involving chemical or biological agents and is the only unit of its kind in the world, said Sgt. Edward Harcher, public affairs chief for the two-year-old unit.

Approximately 280 Marines and sailors along with the U.S. Public Health Service, Wilmington Fire Department and university police and staff participated in the exercise. Sixty-five high school students on campus for the Summer Ventures in Science and Mathematics Institute were "victims" during the simulated explosion and release of nerve gas. Other victims included Jack Hall, earth sciences, his two children, Matt and Kristen, and Jennifer Hallman, an intern in university relations.

The exercise was conducted as if Trask Coliseum had been the scene of an actual chemical attack. "Victims" were positioned throughout Trask Coliseum under the premise of attending the Seahawk World Games, an international basketball contest. During the exercise rehearsal June 29, military personnel instructed participants how to simulate the effects of sarin, a nerve gas. For the actual exercise, military personnel applied makeup on participants to resemble injuries that would occur from the resulting pandemonium following a real gas attack.

When the exercise began around 6:15 p.m., university police and Wilmington Fire Department cordoned off the area around Trask Coliseum. The Wilmington Fire Department washed survivors who escaped from Trask Coliseum with decontamination solution and inspected the arena before briefing the military unit, which responded from positions at Roland-Grise Middle School and the National Guard Armory. The Marines set up two decontamination tents for survivors near the University Center. CBIRF members donned suits to protect them from all known chemical and biological units and began rescuing incapacitated "victims."

As part of the exercise, CBIRF members faced many unannounced obstacles including victims who spoke no English, were deaf or extremely uncooperative either screaming to be left alone or not be touched.



Left: CBIRF members in protective suits prepare to enter Trask Coliseum. Top: Marines set up two decontamination showers. Bottom: A survivor goes through the decontamination shower, designed for immobile victims, where the stretcher is pushed along rollers.

According to military officials, the purpose of the exercise was to enhance the response capability of participating agencies if faced with an incident involving a weapon of mass destruction. CBIRF has the capability to respond to a situation on the East Coast within a few hours, and Sgt. Harcher said, is a prototype for 128 similar forces to be created in as many U.S. cities.

A film crew from the History Channel recorded the rehearsal and exercise for a documentary tentatively titled "Clouds of Death" scheduled to air in December.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Executive Mansion Open to State Employees

All state employees are invited to visit the Executive Mansion located at 200 N. Blount Street in Raleigh. The mansion is open to state employees from noon to 1:30 p.m. Wednesdays in July. Built in 1891, the Executive Mansion is one of the oldest structures in America specifically built and continuously used as the home of governors and their families.

Division Hosts Groups and Conferences

As part of UNCW's mission, the Division for Public Service and Extended Education coordinates hosting of groups whose missions coincide with the UNC system. The division emphasizes recruiting non-profit groups for training or educational purposes. The following groups will be hosted this month: Coast Trek, July 12-17, July 19-24 and July 26-31; Ocean Lab, July 12-17 and July 19-24; Girls Teen Leadership Camp, July 12-18; Teacher Academy, July 12-17 and July 19-24; 4-H Electric Congress, July 13-15; AFL-CIO, July 19-24; Universal Cheerleaders, July 21-24 and July 31-Aug. 3, National Association of Social Workers, July 26-31 and Association of Junior League Area III, July 31-Aug. 2.

Political Science Has New Fax Number

The Department of Political Science has a new fax number, ext. 3286.

First Aid Training

The Safety Department is offering standard first training from 8 a.m. to noon July 14 and 15, 1 to 5 p.m. July 21 and 23, 6 to 10 p.m. Sept. 15 and 16 and 1 to 5 p.m. Sept. 22 and 24. The cost is $25. To register, call ext. 3057.

College of Arts and Science Name New Department Chairs

The College of Arts and Sciences announces the formation of the Departments of Computer Science and Social Work. Barbara Greim is the chair of the Computer Science Department, and Nelson Reid will chair the Department of Social Work.

The Computer Science Department's office is Bear Hall, Room 105, and Greim's telephone extension is 7192. The Computer Science Departmental secretary, Emma Kay Thorton, can be reached at ext. 7182.

The office for the Department of Social Work is Friday Hall, Room 239. To contact Reid, call ext. 7341 or e-mail reidn.

Joe Wilson has been named the new chair of the Department of Philosophy and Religion.

The Department of Mathematical Sciences will now be the Department of Mathematics and Statistics.

CAS Office Change

The offices of Associate Deans Rudi Keifer and Stephen Pullum are located in Bear Hall, Room 109.

Public Service Offers Chemistry Camp

The Division for Public Service and Extended Education is offering a hands-on chemistry camp that will feature concepts using everyday materials. The instructor is Kim Jones. The camp, which costs $120, is scheduled from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. July 27-31 on the campus. For more information, call ext. 3195.

Psychology Experiment Subjects Still Needed

Participants between the ages of 50 and 65 are still needed for an experiment in the Psychology Department. For more information, contact Becky at 254-4686.

Academic Advising Program Receives National Award

UNCW's academic advising program has been recognized as the 1998 Outstanding Institutional Advising Program by the National Academic Advising Association (NACADA). The university will be honored at the awards presentation Oct. 5 at the annual NACADA conference in San Diego.

"We are excited about the award," said Denis Carter, associate provost for enrollment affairs. "It gives national recognition to a program to which we are not only committed to, but take personal pride in being able to provide to our students."

The award recognizes innovative or exemplary practices that have resulted in the improvement of academic services. Freshman to sophomore retention rates for freshmen entering fall 1996 was 3 percent higher than four years ago. This was the second highest among similarly classified UNC institutions. In addition, the average GPA of freshmen increased to 2.6 from 2.3 from four years ago.

Academic advising is provided to freshmen and undeclared majors through the Student Academic Support Program. It includes 45 faculty advisors, four full-time and part-time advisors and support staff. The Learning Center, Writing and Reading Place and the Math Lab are also part of the academic support system.

Discount Coupons

Discount coupons for admission to Paramount's Kings Dominion and Carowinds theme parks are available in human resources. Valid dates are July 10, 11, 12, 17, 18, 19, 24, 25, 26.

Alumni Golf Tournament Scheduled for October

The 1998 Cape Fear Alumni Golf Classic is set for Oct. 23 at River Landing Golf Course. Participation will be open to all faculty, staff and students. For more information, contact Mike Arnold at ext. 2684.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Hurricane Season Returns, Time to Review Preparedness

It is more than a month into the 1998 hurricane season which means it is time to review the university's hurricane preparedness procedures.

When the area is under a hurricane watch, usually two to five days in advance of adverse weather, the university sets up its emergency operations center and begins daily briefings. When the hurricane watch changes to a hurricane warning, usually 24 hours before hurricane landfall, the emergency operations center is manned.

If New Hanover County issues a mandatory evacuation of Wrightsville and Carolina beaches, Chancellor James R. Leutze will close the campus. Classes will be dismissed until the campus is reopened. Faculty and staff will also be dismissed until the campus reopens. Students will be encouraged to return home or depart campus to stay with friends.

If the campus closes, Rose Avenue, Wood Dale Drive, MacMillan Avenue and Riegel Drive entrances will be blocked. If the campus loses power, all entrances will be closed; however, Randall Drive will be open for through traffic.

Faculty and staff will be encouraged to watch local media for updates or call ext. 3991 for the latest information.

Summer Kayak Tours

The Discover Outdoor Center is holding summer kayak tours. The trips cost $10 and includes equipment, transportation and guides. Register at the Discover Outdoor Center, University Center, Room 138. Family, friends and first-time kayak users are welcome. For more information, call ext. 4052.

Kayak tours will be conducted the following dates and locations: 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. July 11 Black River and noon to 5 p.m. July 24 Cape Fear River.

Fire Extinguisher Training

The Safety Department is offering portable fire extinguisher training at 3 p.m. July 15 and 10 a.m. July 22. The cost is $5. To register, call ext. 3057.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

David Webster, biological sciences, published the mammalian species account on Miller's long-tongued bat with Charles Handley, Jr., curator of mammals at the National Museum of Natural History (Smithsonian Institution), and Pascual J. Soriano, Department de Biología, Universidad de Los Andes in Mérida, Venezuala. This nectar- and fruit-eating bat, which is found throughout much of northern South America, is the major pollinator and seed disperser of many commercially important neotropical plants. Also, Webster gave the oral presentation "Systematics on the Northern Short-tailed Shrew, Blarina brevicauda" at the 78th annual meeting of the American Society of Mammalogists at Virginia Tech University. It was co-authored by Nancy Moncrief, Virginia Museum of Natural History; Hugh Genoways, Nebraska State Museum at the University of Nebraska; and Jerry Choate, Sternberg Museum of Fort Hays State University. At this same meeting biological sciences graduate student David Rabon co-authored the poster presentation "Ontogeny of Ultrasonic Vocalizations in Two Species of Mictrotus" with Kim Sawrey, psychology, and Webster.

Michael Durako, biological sciences and CMSR, presented the invited paper "Patterns of Change in the Florida Bay Hydroscape: Or How the West Was Lost" during a special session "Linkages Between Ecosystems: The South Florida Hydroscape" of the 1998 joint American Society of Oceanography and Limnology/ Ecological Society of America meeting in St. Louis.

William Cooper, chemistry, received $200,085 for his project "The Electron Beam Process in Drinking Water Treatment: Biological, Cryptosporidium and Giardia, Control and Contaminant Treatment."

Grace Burton, curricular studies, attended the seventh annual Family Reunion Conference at Vanderbilt University in Nashville. This by-invitation-only event is moderated each year by Vice President and Mrs. Al Gore. Special panelists addressing the topic "Families and Health" included President and Mrs. Bill Clinton.

Ron Johnson and Sue Cody, library services, had their article "Git It for Me on Interlibrary Loan: Patron-Initiated Electronic Requesting and Document Delivery on the INNOPAC Interlibrary Loan Module" published in the Journal of Interlibrary Loan, Document Delivery and Information Supply vol. 8 no. 4, 1998.

Laela Sayigh, Ann Pabst, Alex Bocconcelli, Bill McLellan and Chris Powell, biological sciences and CMSR, participated in the annual live capture and release of bottlenose dolphins at Mote Marine Lab in Sarasota, Fla. In addition, graduate students Guen Jones, Jessica Plant, Kim Urian, Mark Allen and Ari Friedlander and undergraduate Debi Koster participated. The project is the longest running marine mammal population study in the world with data collected for more than 25 years. UNCW gathered data on signature whistles, thermoregulation and health assessment to compare with ongoing studies in North Carolina.

James Walters, admissions, was elected chair of the Editorial Board of the Journal of College Admission, the journal of the National Association of College Admissions Counseling. In addition, he presented the papers "Enrollment Management: Becoming a Key Player" and "Becoming a Director of Admissions" at the Asheville Admissions Institute. He was also appointed a member of the advisory council in the guidebook "College Choice and Admissions: The Best Resources to Help You Get In" published by Resource Pathways Press.

John Taggart and Susan Lovelace, CMSR, received $4,947 for their project "FY 97 Education Program for the North Carolina National Estuarine Research Reserve."

OFFICIAL NOTICES

Title Changes in Business Affairs

Starting July 1, the following title changes in business affairs took effect: Tammy Blizzard is comptroller from director of accounting, Jan Lion Riemersma is associate comptroller from associate director of accounting and Dan Geddie is director of finance services from director of financial reporting. The changes more accurately reflect the scope and level of their positions and are more compatible with titles used by other UNC system institutions.

Shared Leave

Shared leave donations are needed for Jeanmarie "Teri" Meadowcroft, purchasing, to help avoid leave without pay during illness. Send vacation leave request forms to human resources. For more information, call Willina at ext. 3006.

Staff Training

- Americans with Disabilities Act, 2 to 4:30 p.m. July 30.
- Creating Web Pages Using Microsoft FrontPage, 2 to 4 p.m. July 29 and Aug. 4, 6.
- Diversity: Prejudice Reduction Workshop Overview, 2 to 4 p.m. July 21 or 9 to 11 a.m. July 22.
- Eudora, 2 to 4 p.m. July 23, 28 and 10 a.m. to noon July 29.
- Microsoft Excel, 10 a.m. to noon July 16 and 2 to 4 p.m. July 22.

CAMPUS COMMUNIQUE

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement | Vol. XXVIII, No. 2 July 16, 1998 | Phillip Brown, editor

UNCW Provost Marvin Moss to Return to Teaching July 1, 1999

Instrumental in the growth and increased recognition of UNCW's academic programs, Marvin K. Moss, provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs, has announced his intention to resign from his position and return to teaching at the end of the current academic year, effective July 1, 1999.

Moss, who has been in his position since 1992, said he has mixed feelings concerning his resignation, both sadness and happiness. "It is a demanding position to which I have always devoted the maximum effort possible, but I look forward to returning to teaching. I believe that it is a good time for a change, both for the university and for me."

Under Moss' leadership UNCW has implemented numerous new undergraduate and graduate programs including the new Departments of Computer Science, Social Work, Art and Theatre and Music. The university's new environmental science track in environmental studies has expanded with major thrusts in four different science disciplines. In addition, 33 new minors for students are now offered including African-American studies, women's studies and film studies. At the graduate level, new programs have been established in psychology, accountancy, school administration, marine science, nursing and creative writing, UNCW's first terminal degree program. Other graduate programs in liberal studies, educational technology and public administration are in late preparatory stages.

Also during Moss' leadership, both student populations and student retention rates have increased dramatically to the point where UNCW is now one of the top four in the UNC system. One of many reasons for the increased retention rates is the university's four-year-old Student Academic Support Program along with its Learning Center and free student tutoring services. UNCW's freshman-sophomore general college advising program recently won national honors for its effectiveness from the National Academic Advising Association.

In addition, the university's Honor Scholars Program, which also began four years ago, is approaching its goal of 400 students, and the number of students enrolled to study abroad in summer and semester programs is at an all-time high.

To grow UNCW's academic programs, Moss worked with Chancellor James R. Leutze to secure equity funding for UNC system institutions which brought an additional $2.6 million to UNCW. Moss also helped secure money for the new $17.5 million marine science building under construction at Myrtle Grove. Another funding source that has seen significant increase since 1991-92 is faculty research grants which are up more than 175 percent. Proposals for faculty research are also 140 percent higher than 1991-92 figures.

Prior to his positions at UNCW, Moss was associate vice chancellor for marine sciences at the University of California, San Diego, and deputy director of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography in La Jolla, Calif. He served as director of the Office of Naval Research from 1982-87 and worked in the U.S. State Department as an advisor for nuclear disarmament and proliferation from 1976-78.

A native of Burlington, N.C., Moss received his bachelor of science degree in mathematics and physics from Elon College in 1955. He earned a master of science degree in nuclear engineering and doctoral degree in physics from N.C. State University, where he was professor of physics from 1960-77.

Active in the scientific and oceanographic communities, Moss has frequently worked with federal agencies such as the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the Departments of Defense and Energy and the Environmental Protection Agency. He is a member and past chair of the Scientific Advisory Board of the Strategic Environmental Research and Development Program, which was started by Congress to help the U.S. Departments of Defense and Energy deal with environmental problems at federal governmental laboratories and defense installations.

Moss is a recipient of the U.S. Navy Distinguished Civilian Service Award, the navy's highest award given to civilians, and the Presidential Rank Meritorious Governmental Executive Award given by President Ronald Reagan.

UNCW Offers Engineering Opportunities

UNCW in partnership with N.C. State University has established the Two-Plus-Two Program to aid students seeking an engineering degree. Those who pursue the program can transfer to NCSU, UNC Charlotte or NCA&T to complete engineering degrees.

"One important aspect of the program is that it gives students in the region a chance to try engineering without having to leave the area," said Ken Diehl, program administrator.

He said his hope for the future was to be able to offer a four-year bachelor's degree in engineering at UNCW in cooperation with NCSU.

While UNCW has offered engineering courses in the past, the involvement of NCSU's College of Engineering signals a long-term commitment to provide a local avenue to the resources of engineering colleges in North Carolina. The program is being administered by UNCW's College of Arts and Sciences.

The Two-Plus-Two Program starts this fall and has around 30 students registered for classes. Diehl said the cooperation between UNCW and NCSU has been great. "That is what will make this program a success."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Alderman Renovations

Alderman Hall, Room 215, will be closed through July 24 due to renovations.

International Friendship Program Seeks Hosts for Students

Community members are invited to host international students who will be attending UNCW this fall. Approximately 50 new international students from countries including Australia, United Kingdom, Japan, Ecuador, Sweden, Finland and Cyprus are expected.

The International Friendship Program sponsored by the Office of International Programs is for individuals, couples or families who would like to offer friendship and assistance to an international student. Students will live on campus so the host could offer off-campus experiences such as meals, assisting with transportation or visiting local sights. For more information, contact Heather Smith, international programs, at ext. 7009.

Executive Mansion Open to State Employees

All state employees are invited to visit the Executive Mansion located at 200 N. Blount Street in Raleigh. The mansion is open to state employees from noon to 1:30 p.m. Wednesdays in July. Built in 1891, the Executive Mansion is one of the oldest structures in America specifically built and continuously used as the home of governors and their families.

Public Service Offers Chemistry Camp

The Division for Public Service and Extended Education is offering a hands-on chemistry camp that will teach concepts using everyday materials. The instructor is Kim Jones. The camp, which costs $120, is scheduled from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. July 27-31 on the campus. For more information, call ext. 3195.

Scuba Diving

An entry level scuba course for ages 15 and older will be offered from 6 to 9 p.m. August 10-21. It is designed for those interested in learning to dive or take a refresher course. Certification will be an additional option. For those registering by July 20, the cost of the course is $285. Students should be average swimmers and provide their own masks, fins and snorkels. For more information or registration forms, contact the Division for Public Service and Extended Education at ext. 3578.

Members Sought for UNCW Staff Bowling League

Recruitment is underway for this year's mixed bowling league which is open to UNCW staff, their spouses and adult family members. To aid in planning the league, interested bowlers should contact Linda Ferrell at ext. 3540, Brenda Teague at ext. 3132 or Phillip Brown at ext. 7223.

Spring 1999 Visiting Writer Publishes Novel

Pulitzer-prize winning author Alison Lurie, the English Department's visiting writer-in-residence for spring 1999, has published The Last Resort. This is Lurie's first novel published in more than 10 years. It received a full-page review in the July 12 NY Times "Book Review."

First Aid Training

The Safety Department is offering standard first training from 1 to 5 p.m. July 21 and 23, 6 to 10 p.m. Sept. 15 and 16 and 1 to 5 p.m. Sept. 22 and 24. The cost is $25. To register, call ext. 3057.

Convocation and Commencement Coordinator Selected

Mary Crookes has joined university advancement as coordinator for convocation and commencement. Her extension is 7231 or e-mail crookesm.

Psychology Experiment Subjects Still Needed

Participants between the ages of 50 and 65 are still needed for an experiment in the Psychology Department. For more information, contact Becky at 254-4686.

Discount Coupons

Discount coupons for admission to Paramount's Kings Dominion and Carowinds theme parks are available in human resources. Valid dates are July 17, 18, 19, 24, 25 and 26.

Watson School of Education to Provide Software Training Using Microsoft Grant

Thanks to a grant from Microsoft, teachers in southeastern North Carolina can now attend workshops offered by the Watson School of Education and learn how to integrate technology into their everyday teaching.

Wendy Marshall, technology outreach coordinator for the Watson School of Education, said workshops have already begun with training offered on several software titles including PowerPoint, Bookshelf '98, Encarta Reference Suite '98 and Scholastic's Magic School Bus.

"The software is geared for teachers from kindergarten through 12th grade," said Marshall. "These workshops will provide a familiarity of Microsoft products and access to technology that will allow teachers to plan strategies to adapt software to their individual curriculums."

In addition to offering workshops for in-service teachers, Marshall said the software training will be offered to pre-service teachers enrolled in the Watson School of Education. The grant provided UNCW with Microsoft-licensed software to equip two computer laboratories in King Hall and has a retail value of $30,000. In addition to the software, the Watson School of Education received training materials, lesson plans and instructional videos. Workshops are offered in both Windows and Macintosh platforms.

For more information about workshops, contact Wendy Marshall at ext. 7287.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

School of Nursing Given O.K. to Offer Master's of Science in Nursing

The School of Nursing received approval Friday from the UNC Board of Governors to establish a Master of Science Degree in Nursing and accept students beginning with the fall 1998 semester.

The master's program will prepare graduates to provide advanced primary health care to culturally diverse families in medically under-served rural and urban settings. In addition, graduates can apply to take the American Nurses Association Family Practitioner Certification Examination and apply for licensure as family nurse practitioners.

The curriculum will include 47 semester hours of graduate nursing courses, but will also include electives such as Spanish to provide culturally sensitive health care to the growing migrant Hispanic population.

While family nurse practitioners collaborate with physicians, many serve as the regular health care provider for families. Unlike registered nurses, family nurse practitioners diagnose and treat health problems such as infections and injuries; diagnose, treat and monitor chronic diseases, such as diabetes and high blood pressure; order, perform and interpret diagnostic studies, such as lab work and x-rays; and prescribe medication and other treatments. Also they often provide services related to health and wellness promotion, such as prenatal care, family planning and annual physicals.

The approval to begin offering the degree follows a year of planning. In July 1997, the School of Nursing received a three-year grant totaling $759,044 from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services to plan, develop and establish this graduate program.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

Joseph Pawlik, biological sciences, received $44,000 for his project "Collaborative Research Program with Novartis Inc."

Stephen Meinhold, political science, received $17,002 for his project "Pursuing a Legal Education, Pilot Study."

Eleanor Wright, curricular studies, received $5,700 for her project "North Carolina Distance Education Partnership in Special Education Subcontract."

Don Bushman, English, presented his paper "The Chicago Pragmatists and the Promise of an Ethical Rhetoric" at the biennial conference of the Rhetoric Society of America, which was held in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Ann Pabst and William McLellan, biological sciences, received $53,170 for their project involving observation of bottlenose dolphins, documentation of dolphin deaths due to commercial fishing operations and collection of tissues from stranded dolphins along the coasts of North and South Carolina.

Thomas Loftfield and David Jones, sociology and anthropology, received $22,408 to conduct archaeological testing and recover data from the proposed Island View Shores development in Newport, N.C.

Joan Willey and Robert Kieber, chemistry, received $64,065 for their study to define patterns of variation in concentrations of dissolved organic carbon in coastal rainwater.

Michael Mallin, CMSR, received $11,140 to investigate field conditions that allow Pfiesteria piscicida to proliferate. Sites in the New River estuary and the New Hanover County tidal creeks system will be investigated.

Philip Furia, English, lectured on the Gershwins at the inaugural "Summer Wind" Symposium on American Songwriting at the Johnny Mercer Archive at Georgia State University. His research on lyrics and lyricists was featured in an article in the May 16 New York Times on the significance of Frank Sinatra.

Tom Barth, political science, had the article "Fostering a Learning, Innovative Government: The Role of Academic/Practitioner Collaboration" published in The Public Manager.

Stephen Meinhold, political science, had his article "Policy Congruence Between the President and the Solicitor General" published in the June issue of Political Research Quarterly. The article is co-authored with Steve Shull of the University of New Orleans.

Mark Galizio and Carol Pilgrim, psychology, co-authored five symposium papers and four posters with seven graduate and three undergraduate students presented at Association for Behavior Analysis meeting in Orlando, Fla. Titles and authors were "Equivalence Classes Established Via Verbal Instructions" by L. K. Epting, Pilgrim and Galizio; "Variables Influencing the Sensitivity of Equivalence Patterns to Baseline Reversals I" by Galizio, J. Cole, H. OFFICIAL NOTICES

Bookstore Purchasing

When purchasing items from the bookstore using interdepartmental invoices, departments must present invoices signed by department heads.

Regalia Rental

Faculty who need to rent regalia for August convocation should contact Jessiebeth at ext. 3054 before Aug. 1.

Purchasing Opportunity

A desk that the purchasing department will use as a sample is available for sale. It is a new OFS executive desk with a right side return. In addition to the desk, there is a credenza and lateral file, all in mahogany finish. The items will be on display July 28-29 in the University Center. The price is $1,679 and must be picked up immediately after the display ends. For more information, contact Gail Batten at ext. 7058.

Travel Change

Effective July 7, US Airways in addition to other airlines have discontinued issuing advance boarding passes. While airlines are assigning seats in advance when reservations are made, boarding passes will be issued upon check-in, either at the airport ticket counter or boarding gate. Due to this change, travel agencies will be delivering tickets more quickly. Questions should be directed to travel agencies or Mary in purchasing at ext. 3154.

UNCW Hosts "Philippines Centennial Celebration Through the Arts"

UNCW and the Filipino-American Association of the Lower Cape Fear will host an evening of Philippine folk dances and music at 6:30 p.m. Aug. 9 in Kenan Auditorium.

The evening will feature performances by "Musikeros," a group of professional musicians which was started nearly five years ago by graduate students from Philippine universities who are currently studying at the Elisabeth University of Music in Japan. Their musicianship and performing excellence has spread throughout Hiroshima and beyond, including the Philippines and the United States. The diversity and dimension of their musical performances have earned them recognition and enabled them to promote and preserve the rich musical heritage and culture of the Filipino people.

The classical portion of songs and concert music depicts a rich and wide-ranging Philippine culture and heritage never before seen or heard in this area. Dances will be performed by the PAANC Performing Dance Group, a group of experienced Triangle-area dancers. Technical lighting and production will be provided by Kenan Auditorium.

Currently, the Musikeros are traveling, performing concerts in celebration of the Philippine's independence from Spain in 1898.

The presentation will portray the evolution of Islamic, Oriental, Spanish, and American cultural influences on the Philippine culture through the arts.

"This festival is very important because it will educate the public on the history of the United States and the Philippines," said Paz Bartolome, professor of curricular studies.

This musical arts program is free and open to the public. To reserve tickets, please call Knox Clinic Pediatrics during the day at 910/763-3378 or 910/458-4889 during the evenings.

New Archivist Has Exciting Plans Underway

by Jennifer Hallman, PR Intern

"The University of North Carolina at Wilmington has a rich history; there are so many exciting opportunities for creating archives," said Andrew Dutka, Randall Library's new archivist.

Dutka, who began his position in May, said his job is to preserve the university's history. To accomplish that task, he has three projects underway: creating a database of faculty scholarship, which will make it easier to research the faculty's collected works; cataloging serials produced by the university, which will allow patrons easier access to university publications by specifying their location; and making a video oral history of the university by interviewing UNCW's key founders. "This is a wonderful opportunity because the founders of the university are still available to tell us the history," said Dutka.

Archivist Andrew Dutka explores files in Randall Library's special collections. A new facility to house university archives is under construction on the library's second floor.

Dutka is originally from Buffalo, N.Y., where he received his bachelor of arts in communications studies from the University of Buffalo. Later, he returned to the university and earned his master's of library science in 1997.

He began his career as an archivist undertaking two internships. One was with the University of Buffalo archives where he processed a collection of women's studies, worked on New York Representative Jack Kemp's collection, and organized archival events. The other was with the Buffalo Museum of Science where he organized the photo collection and serials index. From the two internships, he realized that archival work was his interest and decided to pursue a career in the field. After graduation, he continued working at the University of Buffalo archives digitizing government documents.

Making archives "user-friendly" is Dutka's objective. "I feel it is important for the community to have easy access to the archives," said Dutka. He added, "Wilmington and UNCW have a unique sense of community; it is important for future generations to know the history of UNCW."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Volunteers Needed For Student Move-in

The Office of Housing and Residence Life is seeking volunteers to assist with Move-in '98, an effort to welcome new students to campus. Volunteers are needed from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Aug. 15 to greet arriving families, staff general information booths and residence hall check-in locations, unload vehicles and assist moving students' personal belongings into rooms. Shifts are available for morning, afternoon or all day. Volunteers will receive a Move-in '98 T-shirt. Lunch and dinner will be provided at Wagoner Hall. For more information, call ext. 3241.

Toplin Provides Commentary on Saving Private Ryan

Robert Toplin, history, provided commentary for an hour-long History Channel special on Steven Spielberg's movie Saving Private Ryan. In addition to Toplin, the special features interviews with actor Tom Hanks, one of the film's stars, a military historian and two veterans of WWII's D-Day invasion. The special is scheduled to air at 10 p.m. tonight. A rebroadcast of the program will air at 9 p.m. tomorrow.

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

Jeff Hill, HPER, and Rudi Kiefer, earth sciences, presented their paper "Hurricanes and Hypermedia: The Use of Satellite Images in the Study of Rain Characteristics" at ED-MEDIA 98: The Tenth World Conference on Educational Multimedia and Hypermedia in Freiburg, Germany. Hill also presented "Implications for Virtual Reality in Natural Resource Recreation Management Curricula." The co-authors of this paper were Bob Buerger and Jim Herstine, HPER.

Keith Newlin, English, had his book, Hamlin Garland, A Bibliography, with a Collection of Unpublished Letters published by Whitston Press.

Chris Dumas, economics and finance, presented his paper "Stochastic Frontier Estimates of Air Pollution Abatement Technology in the Los Angeles Basin" at the World Congress of Environmental and Resource Economists, Venice, Italy.

Joseph Pawlik, biological sciences and CMSR, attended the Fifth International Sponge Symposium at the Queensland Museum, Brisbane, Australia, along with three of his students. Student travel was provided by a grant from the NSF office of International Programs. Pawlik gave the presentation "Predation on Caribbean Sponges: the Importance of Chemical Defenses." Brian Chanas and Matt Dunlap, two of Pawlik's former graduate students, gave the presentations "Do Caribbean Sponges Have Physical Defenses?" and "Polly Want a Sponge?: Field Examination of Spongivory by Caribbean Parrotfishes in Reef and Mangrove Habitats," respectively. Rochelle Newbold, one of Pawlik's undergraduate students who graduated in May, presented "Antimicrobial Activity of Caribbean Sponge Extracts," work that earned her an Undergraduate Research Fellowship during her senior year. In addition, he attended the Ninth International Symposium on Marine Natural Products in Townsville, Australia, where he presented "Chemical Defense of the Caribbean Ascidian Didemnum Conchyliatum" co-authored by Helene Vervoort and Bill Fenical. He also chaired the session on marine chemical ecology.

Eleanor Covan, sociology and anthropology, received $29,948 for her project "Gerontology Curriculum Development Project, Summer 1998."

Steven Miller, CMSR, received $125,000 for research and monitoring support for the Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary and Aquarius 2000.

Administrative Procedures Update

Major revisions to the following policy for the Administrative Policies and Procedures Manual have been approved. Key revisions or additions are noted below.

INF 4.10 - Financial Records System Access.

Access to the Financial Records System (FRS) is restricted to employees whose official duties require such information.

The employee's department head is responsible for determining that FRS access is required to perform official duties and that FRS access is updated or terminated as needed.

Access requires a FRS user account. All requests for a new FRS user account require authorization from the employee's department head, dean or vice chancellor on the "Request to Establish New FRS User Account" form. If access is being requested for a department head, the department head's supervisor must sign the request.

Employees granted a FRS user account must abide by the computing resource use policy distributed to employees when their account is set up.

Refer to Appendix A for a contact list where additional assistance may be obtained for various FRS questions.

This policy may be viewed in its entirety on the World Wide Web. The Administrative Policies and Procedures Manual is linked of the UNCW home page under administration and is also accessible via the business affairs home page.

Schedule Change in Training Booklet

The workshop "Seven Habits of Highly Effective People" has been rescheduled for Oct. 21-22 and Nov. 3-4. For more information on this 24-hour workshop refer to page 11 in the Staff Training and Development Booklet.

AQUARIUS 2000 SCIENCE MISSIONS RESUME AUGUST 3 AT CONCH REEF

Science missions resume August 3 in Aquarius, the world's only underwater laboratory.

Sitting in 63 feet of water at Conch Reef in the Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary, Aquarius makes it possible for aquanaut-scientists to live and work underwater continuously during 7- to 10-day missions to study North America's largest living coral reef system. With eight science missions planned for this year, Aquarius is the centerpiece of NOAA's comprehensive environmental research program aimed at better understanding and preserving endangered coral reef ecosystems in U.S. waters.

The first science mission in the newly refurbished Aquarius, dubbed "Aquarius 2000," will be a week-long survey of conditions in the nearby coral reef system led by Steven Gittings, science director of NOAA's National Marine Sanctuary Program.

"This Aquarius mission will provide information about the condition of U.S. coral reefs in waters deeper than can be routinely reached using surface-based diving techniques. Marine scientists will live and work underwater for seven days to monitor and explore coral reefs first visited as part of baseline studies completed in 1994 at Conch Reef," said Steven Miller, associate director of the National Undersea Research Program at UNCW.

"It is well known that significant declines have occurred in recent years in shallow coral reef environments, in Florida and throughout the Caribbean," Miller explained. "However, deeper coral reefs between 60 and 120 feet, which comprise a significant amount of area within the sanctuary, remain largely unexplored and their condition is not well documented."

During upcoming science missions, teams of four scientists from various universities will spend up to nine hours a day diving to conduct environmental research to better understand factors that affect the condition of coral reefs in Florida in particular, and the health of the coastal oceans in general. Aquarius operations are planned at Conch Reef through 2001.

Following its first deployment on Conch Reef from September 1993 to May 1996, the Aquarius system was completely renovated by the Harris Corporation, Melbourne, Fla.; Harbor Branch Oceanographic Institution, Fort Pierce, Fla.; UNCW, which operates Aquarius; and NOAA, which owns Aquarius and funds its operations. Previously, operations were monitored 24 hours a day from a support barge moored above Aquarius. The new Aquarius 2000 instead operates using a stand-alone support buoy that uses microwave telemetry to provide live data, audio and video links from Aquarius to shore and to the Internet.

Computer and electronic capabilities in Aquarius, plus the extensive bottom time for aquanaut-scientists working from Aquarius, make it possible to conduct research that could not be done from the surface. Links to the Internet will provide other scientists and the public with a virtual window to Aquarius and Conch Reef while aquanauts conduct their studies.

For more information, visit the Aquarius World Wide Web site at http://www.uncwil.edu/nurc/aquarius/ or visit http://www.msnbc.com/news/183423.asp for the MSNBC feature on Aquarius.

UNCW to Host N.C. School for Alcohol & Drug Studies

UNCW will host the 21st annual North Carolina School for Alcohol and Drug Studies August 2-7 on the university campus. Working with UNCW's Division for Public Service and Extended Education, the school will welcome more than 500 chemical dependency professionals, educators and health care professionals. The intensive training curriculum features 22 track sessions, one plenary session and 12 mini-track sessions.

Check-in is 1-7 p.m. Sunday in Trask Coliseum. Events for the week include the opening session at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in Kenan Auditorium and an awards banquet featuring Laura McLamb Hamilton, a certified public speaker, at 7 p.m. Thursday.

The plenary session at 8 a.m. Monday in Kenan Auditorium will feature W. Mitchell, author of The Man Who Would Not Be Defeated, who will speak on "Taking Responsibility for Change."

He was the keynote speaker dedicating the symposium in honor and memory of Thomas Bowman, former curator of the Crustacea at the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D.C. George also presented the paper "Origin and Evolution of Deep Sea Crustacea with Emphasis on Aselote Isopods: Computer Model for Speciation." In addition, he attended the workshop "Migration of European and American Eels to the Depths of the Sargasso Sea for Reproduction" at the Goraleus Laboratories of the University of Leiden in the Netherlands.

Patricia Kelley, earth sciences, presented a paper in Basil, Switzerland, at the Panama Paleontology Project Molluscan Workshop at the Basel Naturhistorisches Museum. The title was "Naticid Gastropod Predation in the U.S. Coastal Plain and Central America: A Comparative Approach to Understanding the Role of Ecological Interactions and Extrinsic Factors in Evolution."

Michael Durako, biological sciences and CMSR, presented the paper "A Comparative Analysis of Quantitative Versus Qualitative Sampling for Landscape-Level Ecological Assessments of Seagrass Dominated Coastal Systems" at a symposium on landscape patterns and processes convened during the seventh International Congress of Ecology in Florence, Italy. Co-authors were M. O. Hall, J. R. Hall and G. McRae.

Raymond Pitts, psychology, had his article "Clocinnamox Antagonism of the Antinociceptive Effects of Mu Opioids in Squirrel Monkeys" published in the June issue of the Journal of Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics. The article was co-authored by Richard Allen, Ellen Walker and Linda Dykstra of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Mike Perko, HPER, gave an invited three-hour presentation July 22 titled "Maintaining Peak Performance" to national directors from the U.S. Chambers of Commerce at their annual training institute in Colorado Springs.

Mediation a Means of Settling Conflicts

The UNCW Mediation Program, jointly sponsored by UNCW's Faculty Senate, Division for Academic Affairs, Dean of Students Office, Department of Human Resources and the Dispute Settlement Center of Cape Fear, is a free and confidential means to settle conflicts of all kinds. Disputes between faculty, staff and students are suitable for mediation. In order for both parties to have a neutral environment, mediation will take place at the Dispute Settlement Center of Cape Fear, located at 4607 Franklin Ave., Suite 225. Mediation is a voluntary process that both disputants must agree to undertake. To schedule mediation, call the center at 350-2900.

Sierra Club President to Speak at Convocation

Sierra Club President Adam Werbach will be the featured speaker at University of North Carolina at Wilmington's annual convocation ceremony scheduled for 4 p.m. Aug. 18 in Trask Coliseum.

Werbach is the 46th president of the Sierra Club, a 104-year-old grassroots environmental organization, and at age 24, he is also the organization's youngest president. He is also the author of Act Now, Apologize Later, which is required reading for all of UNCW's entering freshmen.

As president of the Sierra Club, Werbach heads the club's board of directors and leads the lobbying and conservation organization which boasts a membership of more than 600,000 nationwide. He is currently leading the Sierra Club's efforts to clean up America's air and strengthen protection of national forests.

A native Californian, Werbach began his career as an environmental activist at the age of eight gathering signatures in his elementary school to help in an effort to unseat James Watt, secretary of the Department of Interior under President Ronald Reagan.

Werbach holds an advanced degree in Spanish from the Instituto Central America of Guatemala and received his bachelor's degree from Brown University.

Senator Faircloth to Hold Town Meeting on the Future of Social Security Aug. 14

U.S. Senator Lauch Faircloth will hold a town meeting on the future of social security from 10 a.m. to noon Aug. 14 in the new Science Building, Room 134.

"I want to begin a dialogue with North Carolinians on the future of social security," said Sen. Faircloth. "Social security was one of the most significant and successful programs of the New Deal. I am committed to preserving the program far into the 21st century which will allow our seniors to feel secure and to fulfill our promise to our children and grandchildren that social security will be there for their retirement."

Also attending the meeting will be North Carolina Treasurer Harlan E. Boyles and other policy experts who deal with social security including Tom Staples, associate commissioner for financial policy and operations of the Social Security Administration; Tom Rogers from the Concord Coalition, a citizens' group whose mission is to end deficit spending; Barbara Bovbjerg from the U.S. General Accounting Office; Eaddy Roe from Economic Security 2000, a nonpartisan grassroots, educational organization dedicated to saving and reforming social security; and Evelyn Morton from the American Association of Retired Persons, a nonprofit, nonpartisan association dedicated to enriching the aging experience for the organization's membership totaling more than 30 million.

Philippines Centennial Celebration Sunday in Kenan Auditorium

The Philippines Centennial Celebration Through the Arts sponsored by UNCW and the Filipino-American Association of the Lower Cape Fear will be at 6:30 p.m. Sunday in Kenan Auditorium.

The program will consist of Philippine folk dances performed by the PAANC Performing Dance Group and music by Musikeros, a performing group of professional musicians. The group was formed nearly five years ago by graduate students from Philippine universities who are currently studying at the Elisabeth University of Music in Japan. Their musicianship and performing excellence has spread throughout Hiroshima and beyond, including the Philippines and the United States. The diversity and dimension of their musical performances have earned them recognition and enabled them to promote and preserve the rich musical heritage and culture of the Filipino people.

Currently, the Musikeros are traveling, performing concerts in celebration of the Philippine's independence from Spain in 1898.

The presentation will portray the evolution of Islamic, Oriental, Spanish and American cultural influences on the Philippine culture through the arts.

This musical arts program is free and open to the public. To reserve tickets, please call Knox Clinic Pediatrics during the day at 910/763-3378 or 910/458-4889 during the evenings.

Administrative Procedures Update

Revisions to the following policies for the Administrative Policies and Procedures Manual have been approved. Key revisions or additions are noted below.

INF 4.30 - Student Information System Access.

Access to the Student Information System (SIS) is limited to the extent that an employee's official duties require such information.

The employee's department head is responsible for determining if an employee requires SIS access to perform official duties and that SIS access is updated or terminated as needed.

University offices having data ownership are responsible for approving user access to specific SIS screens.

Employee granted a SIS user account must abide by the computing resource use policy distributed to employees when their user account is set up.

TRA 1.10 - Travel by Non-state Employees.

Travel expenses for consultants or contractors may be reimbursed through the travel reimbursement process for non-state employees or may be included as part of the contracted services payment. If travel expenses are paid to an individual as part of the contracted services payment and not reimbursed through the travel reimbursement process, ensure that the consultant or contractor is informed of the tax liability.

Travel expenses for students involved in team travel for athletic sponsored events are subject to special documentation and reimbursement rules and require approval of the comptroller.

These policies may be viewed in the entirety on the World Wide Web. The Administrative Policies and Procedures Manual is linked off the UNCW home page under administration and is also accessible via the business affairs home page.

UNCW Hires Award-winning Independent Filmmaker Ellen Walters as Film Studies Coordinator

UNCW has hired award-winning independent filmmaker Ellen Walters of Laurinburg to be its first film studies coordinator and lecturer in communication studies. She began her duties Aug. 1.

Walters

Her most recent film, Firehouse Women: Faith, Food and Fellowship, premiered July 25 on UNC-TV. A second showing of the documentary will air at 2:30 p.m. Aug. 30. Her first work produced in 16 mm film, jessica, won first place for Best Short Overall in the 1995 N.C. Film and Video Festival in Raleigh and was also selected for the Director's Choice Award at the 1997 Black Maria Film and Video Festival in New Jersey. Aunt Magg & Me, which aired on UNC-TV's North Carolina Visions in 1997, was featured at the New York Women's Film Festival in New York City in April 1998 and at the Virginia Film Festival in Charlottesville in November 1997.

In addition to making films, Walters has helped produce "North Carolina Visions" for the past three years, including serving as chair in 1996-98. "N.C. Visions" is a co-production of the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television and N.C. Media Arts Alliance. The multi-part series, now in its fourth year, is designed to showcase independent films and to reach out to media artists and support their work. Visions 98 begins Aug. 22 and will air at 11 p.m. for seven consecutive Saturdays.

Beginning fall 1998, UNCW will offer a film studies minor in a multidisciplinary program that draws from courses in history, communication studies, English and theatre. It includes screening and lecture classes, hands-on production work and studio observation. Future goals of the program include developing a major in film studies, expanding internships in production and postproduction, implementing visiting artist seminars and workshops, designing projects in association with N.C. public television, and launching a film festival and summer film institute.

As the first film studies coordinator, Walters will work with UNCW faculty as well as Screen Gems studios and other commercial and independent film constituents to further develop the program as well as create broader opportunities for students and the wider community.

"I am very excited that Ellen will be developing this new program," said Jo Ann Seiple, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. "She has extensive knowledge of other film programs in North Carolina and elsewhere and is very familiar with other independent filmmakers in the state through her membership in the Association of Independent Video and Filmmakers. Her associations with the North Carolina Media Arts Alliance, of which she serves as president, as well as with UNC-TV, should also be helpful to us."

Walters said she decided to accept the position here "to be part of an emerging film studies program at a major university that has a strong commitment to film studies." She is also excited about being in Wilmington where so much film activity is taking place.

"The program has so much potential and Wilmington has such unique resources, from Screen Gems to commercial production to independent films and feature films. I like the idea of creating an interdisciplinary humanities-based program. Students need to learn to be good storytellers as well as technicians," she said.

A native of News Orleans, she earned a BA cum laude in anthropology and sociology from Rhodes College, Memphis, Tenn., in 1982 and a Master of Fine Arts in drama with a concentration in film and video from UNC Greensboro in 1997. In addition to her filmmaking, she worked from 1987-92 as an instructor at St. Andrews College in Laurinburg in film studies, expository writing and cultural anthropology.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UNCW Jazz Ensembles to Hold Fall Auditions

Auditions for the UNCW Jazz Ensembles will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Aug. 19-20 and 3 to 5 p.m. Aug. 21. Musicians interested in auditioning should make an appointment 24 hours in advance by calling the Music Department at ext. 3390. Previous jazz experience is helpful but not required.

Performing groups include a big band, jazz combos and a jazz fusion group. The UNCW Big Band has produced CD and video recordings and performed at various jazz festivals. In addition, the jazz ensembles perform with top jazz artists and the annual UNCW Guest Artist Jazz Festival.

Convocation Set for Tuesday

Former Sierra Club President Adam Werbach will be the featured speaker at UNCW's annual convocation ceremony scheduled for 4 p.m. Tuesday in Trask Coliseum.

Werbach

Werbach is the author of Act Now, Apologize Later, which is required reading for UNCW's entering freshmen. In the book, Werbach shares his thoughts on a variety of subjects in chapters such as "Ferns and Cougars: Why We Need Nature," "The California Desert Protection Act," "Eco-thugs" and "Solutions: Beyond 'Band-Aid' Environmentalism."

Following convocation, there will be a picnic for students, faculty and staff on the Campus Commons along with music from the band Caribbean Steel and Strings.

Bowling League to Meet

Anyone interested in joining the UNCW Staff Bowling League should attend an organizational meeting at 5:30 p.m. Aug. 20 at Cardinal Lanes on Shipyard Boulevard.

Purchasing Reminders

Issuing a requisition after a purchase has been made is contrary to university policy. With the exception of airline tickets, rental vehicles and lodging, the only purchase orders compliant with university policy that confirm a purchase are issued by the Purchasing Department, which may also authorize a departmental representative to place the order. If a department member orders anything that should have been requisitioned, there is a risk the university will not support the charge. Address the situation with a purchasing officer or pay the invoice with a check request and memo attachment explaining why the purchaser was non-compliant with university policy. These check requests can be sent directly to purchasing for approval prior to payment.

Departments needing to make a "same day" purchase should input a requisition and call purchasing with the requisition number. The purchasing officer will issue a PO number immediately.

Departments are not to accept personal gifts or gratuities from vendors. Avoid "backdoor selling," a common practice of suppliers to cultivate favors by giving gifts or even bribes. A sales representative will seek favors by being helpful, offering technical assistance or information. As a result, requisitions will reflect specifications that are unduly restrictive, requesting delivery or performance that only the favored supplier can meet, which interferes with fair competition.

Put phone and fax numbers on requisitions. The "date needed" is defined as the order's delivery date to arrive on campus, not the PO's requested processing date. Having the most recent phone and fax numbers will assist in processing orders more efficiently.

Comments and suggestions are welcome. Call Mary at ext. 3154 for individualized or departmental purchasing procedure training.

Scholarship Designed for Single Parents

The Seventh Son Scholarship is a new scholarship which is intended to help a single parent student. Preference will be given a single parent who has at least one child under the age of 10 living with him/her. For information on applying for this scholarship, contact Pat in financial aid at ext. 1119.

Subjects Sought for Psychology Experiment

Menopausal females are sought for a study on the effect of hormones on problem solving. Participants should be between the ages of 50 and 65. The experiment will take one hour and subjects will be paid. For more information contact Becky, a graduate student in psychology, at 254-4586.

Discount Coupons

Discount coupons for admission to Paramount's Kings Dominion and Carowinds theme parks are available in human resources. Valid dates are Aug. 14,15,16, 22, 23, 29 and 30.

UNCW's Campus Catholic Ministry to Hold First Mass

The Newman House Campus Catholic Ministry will hold its opening Mass at 4 p.m. Aug. 23 in the University Center, Ballroom 4. Following the service, there will be a backyard cookout at the Newman House located at 4802 College Acres Drive.

Beginning Aug. 30, a 7 p.m. weekly Sunday Mass will be celebrated at the Newman House. In addition, a weekly Catholic Bible study meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesdays starting Sept. 1 and communion service at noon Wednesdays starting Sept. 2.

For more information, contact Mary Pat Fourqurean, campus minister, at 792-0507.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Social Security Town Meeting

Sen. Lauch Faircloth will hold a town meeting from 10 a.m. to noon Friday in the new Science Building, Room 134, to discuss the future of Social Security.

Also attending the meeting will be North Carolina Treasurer Harlan E. Boyles and other policy experts who deal with Social Security including Tom Staples, associate commissioner for financial policy and operations of the Social Security Administration; Tom Rogers from the Concord Coalition, a citizens' group whose mission is to end deficit spending; Barbara Bovbjerg from the U.S. General Accounting Office; Eaddy Roe from Economic Security 2000, a nonpartisan grassroots educational organization dedicated to saving and reforming Social Security; and Evelyn Morton from the American Association of Retired Persons, a nonprofit, nonpartisan association dedicated to enriching the aging experience for their members which total more than 30 million.

The meeting is sponsored by the the UNCW Student Government Association and the Office of Human Resources.

Public Service Helps with Conferences

As part of the university mission, the Division for Public Service and Extended Education coordinates conference hosting of groups whose mission coincides with that of the UNC system. The division places special emphasis on recruiting nonprofit groups with a training or educational purpose. The following groups will be hosted through November: Assistant principals, Sept. 20-25 and Nov. 15-20; NCIH Stakeholders, Oct. 7-9; and Cape Fear Tomorrow, Nov. 5.

Medical Insurance Enrollment Period Underway

Medical insurance annual enrollment period is Aug. 1 to Sept. 4. This is the only opportunity during the year to change medical plans. The state is offering the State Health Plan (traditional), Blue Cross/Blue Shield of N.C. Personal Care Plan (PCP), Doctor's Health Plan and United HealthCare of North Carolina. Informational packets, including the 1998 "It's Your Choice" booklet with enrollment application, were mailed to employees' home addresses during the first two weeks of this month. Employees who elect to change medical plans must forward completed enrollment applications to human resources.

The following rate changes to the medical plans will go into effect Oct. 1.

	BCBS-PCP		Dr.'s Health
	Current Rate	New Rate	Current Rate	New Rate
Employee only	$35.76	$47.94	$32.40	$62.40
Emp/Child(ren)	$161.26	$181.90	$156.40	$207.40
Emp/Family	$327.94	$359.84	$319.40	$398.40

	State Health Plan		United Healthcare
	Current Rate	New Rate	Current Rate	New Rate
Employee only	$0	No change	$62.14	$82.60
Emp/Child(ren)	$90.12	No change	$206.88	$241.68
Emp/Family	$216.18	No change	$399.08	$457 .90

For more information, call ext. 3713.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

Antonio Puente, psychology, received $3,250 to fund an office assistant to assist with the quarterly scientific journal Neuropsychology Review of which Puente is editor.

Robert Tyndall, education, received $10,000 for his project "An Integrative Performance Evaluation Model for Effective Administrators."

Frederick Bingham, physics and physical oceanography, served as guest editor for the WOCE-Pacific section of the June 15 issue of Journal of Geophysical Research (Oceans). In addition, he presented the seminar "Intermediate Waters in the Western Equatorial Pacific" at Tohoku University in Sendai, Japan.

William McLellan and Ann Pabst, biological sciences, received $199,192 for their project "Marine Animal Aerial Survey."

Bill Johnston and Karen Wetherill, education, served as editors of the High School Journal special issue on alternative schools. Johnston, Laney High School Principal Rick Holliday and graduate students Megan Silvey and Leslie King had the article "Reinventing the Alternative School" published in the journal, vol. 81, 4 (1998).

Lynn Leonard, earth sciences, received $17,000 for the project "Hydrodynamics of Flows Through Vegetated Marsh Canopies: Chesapeake and Delaware Bay Tidal Marsh Systems."

Andy Shepard, NURC, is in Washington, D.C., on a one-year contract with NOAA. He was asked to serve on the Technical Advisory Panel of the Sustainable Seas Expeditions, a five-year program funded by the National Geographic Society, NOAA and the Goldman Foundation. Sylvia Earle and scientists from around the world will explore the national marine sanctuaries using diving, robots and submarines.

OFFICIAL NOTICES

Degree Audit Training Sessions

Computer training sessions on the On-Course degree audit and advising system will be held at 8:30 a.m., 10 a.m., 1:30 p.m. or 3 p.m. Sept. 23, 24 and 28 in Hoggard Hall, Room 212. These introductory sessions on the SIS and On-Course system are designed for any faculty member. To register, call Becky Fancher at ext. 3036.

Adminstrative Procedures Web Site Enhanced

The UNCW Administrative Policies and Procedures Manual is continually updated for new policies, revisions to published policies and deletions. Systems and procedures has developed a "What's New" page to assist World Wide Web users interested in staying up-to-date on changes in university policies and procedures. "What's New" lists UNCW administrative policies and procedures updated during 1998, along with the effective date and a brief summary of the important changes. The Administrative Policies and Procedures Manual is linked off the UNCW home page under administration and is also accessible via the business affairs home page.

Staff Vacancies

	Deadline
99-021 Grounds workers	Aug. 14
99-022 Maintenance Mech. II	Aug. 14
99-023 Processing Assistant IV	Aug. 14
99-025 Telecomm. Equip. Tech. I	Aug. 21
99-026 Admin. Secretary II	Aug. 21
99-027 Accounting Specialist II	Aug. 17

Call the Jobline at ext. 3791 or visit HR's web site for additional information or to download the state application.

Welcome

Please welcome the following new employees: Kay Pugh, nursing; Cara Sidman, campus recreation; and Susan Barco and Suzanne Zvalaren, biological sciences.

Undergraduate Student Employment

Departments hiring undergraduate students for the fall semester are reminded to follow the instructions provided in administrative procedure HR 1.60. Special attention should be given the following:

Departments must list all undergraduate federal work-study vacancies and all work-assistance vacancies with career services using job order form HR 1.62.

Once a student is hired, the department should initiate a HR 1.60 form. Note that a new HR 1.60 form must be submitted each academic year and/or summer period to hire a federal work-study student.

Pay rates should be established in accordance with appendix A.

Departments must notify career services and payroll when the employment or assignment of an undergraduate student is terminated.

This policy may be viewed on the World Wide Web. The Administrative Policies and Procedures Manual is linked off the UNCW home page under administration and is also accessible via the business affairs home page.

Laptop Computers Highly Vulnerable to Theft

The security of personal and university assets is a year-round concern. However, university police officials say the start of the new academic year is a good time for a reminder on the importance of securing one particularly vulnerable item - laptop computers.

Laptop computers are becoming very popular on campus, and their compact size and portability make them easy to conceal, said Officer Lisa Hedgecock, university police. "With all the accessories and programs installed, their value can easily climb into the several thousand dollar range, making laptop computers tempting targets for theft," said Hedgecock.

"It is importance for laptop owners to understand how quickly the computer could be stolen," Hedgecock continued, offering these safety tips:

- Never leave a laptop unattended. If not taking the laptop out of the office, lock it in a desk drawer, file cabinet or other secure location.
- Do not leave the computer in plain view if stored in an automobile. Lock it in the car's trunk.
- Don't place a laptop on the rest room floor. Hang it on a wall hook or hold it.
- Record serial numbers and register ethernet cards. In the event the computer is stolen, these numbers can be entered into the crime computer.

To protect personal laptop computers, university police have an engraving tool to record the owner's driver's license number on the outside case. Using the driver's license number instead of the Social Security number will enable police to easily locate the owner. For additional information on securing laptops or questions concerning other crime prevention, contact the university police at ext. 3184 or e-mail uncwpd.

Staff Training

- A Balanced Life Through Meditation, noon to 1 p.m. Thursdays through Dec. 10.
- The "Blue-eyed/Brown-eyed" Exercise, 9 a.m. to noon Aug. 26.

Refer to the Staff Training and Development Booklet for registration information or call ext. 3274. To register for computer training, call ext. 4357.

Shared Leave

Shared leave donations are needed for Kathleen Shallcross, accounting, and Karen Brunamonti, postal services. Send vacation leave requests to human resources. For more information, call Willina at ext. 3006.

This is recyclable.

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement Vol. XXVIII, No. 7 August 20, 1998 Phillip Brown, editor

UNCW Hires Internationally Known Husband-Wife Marine Scientists

UNCW has hired two internationally renowned marine scientists currently on the faculty of the Rosenstiel School of Marine and Atmospheric Science at the University of Miami.

At its meeting in Southern Pines Friday, the UNC Board of Governors approved the appointment of Daniel G. Baden as director of the UNCW Center for Marine Science Research. Baden is director and principal investigator of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences (NIEHS) Marine and Freshwater Biomedical Sciences Center at the University of Miami and past chair of the Division of Marine Biology and Fisheries at the Rosenstiel School of Marine and Atmospheric Science at the University of Miami.

Baden

Also appointed as professor of biological sciences was Alina M. Szmant, professor of marine biology and fisheries at the Rosenstiel School and Baden's wife. Szmant's research specialty is the physiological ecology of reef corals and nutrient dynamics in coastal ocean systems. She first identified the lunar and temperature keys that trigger coral spawning and has worked closely with UNCW's National Undersea Research Center program in Florida to assist in carrying out her coral reef research.

In his new role as director of UNCW's marine science research center, Baden will oversee the integration and expansion of the university's interdisciplinary marine science research and education programs, explained Provost Moss.

"Dr. Baden's permanent assignment here will coincide with the completion of UNCW's new $17.5 million marine science research center at Myrtle Grove in the spring of 1999," said Provost Moss. "With his academic reputation and international leadership in the problems of marine toxicology that impinge on public health, combined with our new state-of-the-art 81,400-square-foot facility, Dr. Baden's appointment signals a new plateau for the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

"Dr. Baden is a specialist in harmful algal bloom events and directs one of the five NIEHS marine and freshwater biomedical sciences centers in the country. He recently was one of about 28 scientists invited to participate in a panel of experts at the first ever National Oceans Conference chaired by Vice President Al Gore on June 11-12.

"With its more than 300 miles of coastline and more than 4,000 miles of estuarine shoreline, the University of North Carolina needs a voice in the scientific discussions that shape the marine science agenda. We expect Dr. Baden to bring together his extensive professional contacts at universities throughout the country, the National Institute of Environmental Health Science, and other federal agencies to assure North Carolina a major seat at the table," said Provost Moss.

"For UNCW to be able to attract such prominent marine scientists as Dr. Baden and Dr. Szmant indicates the high quality and the growth potential of our program here," he said. "We are excited about what we believe will bring international leadership for North Carolina and UNC Wilmington in marine science and use that prominence to positively impact North Carolina's coastal environment and the people who live there."

Baden, who earned his doctorate in biochemistry from the University of Miami in 1977, has worked there since 1977. He will be working at UNCW on a part-time basis until the new marine science facility at Myrtle Grove is completed when he will move here full-time.

He views the appointment at UNCW as an opportunity for personal growth, and he likes the environment of the campus and the Wilmington area. "It's energizing to see a university that is excited and enthusiastic about what they do, with excellent talent in the faculty and unanimous support of the administration," he said. "The new building and the opportunity to further develop the Center for Marine Science Research are also drawing cards.

"My goal for UNCW is to be pro-active in the state, to take the talent that UNCW has in a variety of research areas, and expand on the current interdisciplinary program so as a group of scientists working together, CMSR can attack the marine-related problems of North Carolina and the United States. In other words, I want to augment what exists to make UNCW an interdisciplinary powerhouse for environmentally related research on the state, national, and international level," he said.

Alina M. Szmant began her academic career in 1970 as a research associate in the Department of Marine Sciences at the University of Puerto Rico where she obtained the bachelor of science degree in biology and chemistry in 1966. She earned a master of science in marine biology in 1970 from Scripps Institution of Oceanography at the University of California, San Diego and the doctorate in biological oceanography from the University of Rhode Island in 1980. She has worked at the Rosenstiel School since 1983.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Adelaide Daniels Key Joins Watson School of Education Advisory Board

Adelaide Daniels Key has joined the Watson School of Education Board of Advisors, a newly formed advisory board created to ensure that the Watson School of Education will continue to serve as the preeminent education college in the region and beyond. Mrs. Key has lived most of her life in western North Carolina.

Mrs. Key grew up in Raleigh, next door to her mentor, Josephus Daniels, who was not only her grandfather, but also the founder of The News & Observer in 1894. She served on the Fontana Regional Library Board and the Macon County Library Board, where she was instrumental in helping build a library.

Since moving to Asheville in 1987, she has served on many boards focusing on health, education and children's issues. She was selected as one of 10 delegates to represent Asheville at the President's Summit in Philadelphia; was a Razor Walker Award winner in 1998 by the Watson School of Education; and was honored for her $200,000 Challenge Grant to the Boarder Memorial Folkmoot Foundation. She was also the driving force behind the Lewis Rothbun Wellness Center, a free lodging place for families traveling to Asheville for medical treatment. In 1989, she founded the Adelaide Worth Daniels Foundation that provide support for health, the arts, social services and education.

The Watson School of Education Board of Advisors is composed of distinguished civic-minded leaders who are committed to education and who are willing to support the goal of achieving excellence in teacher and administrator preparations.

Educational Lab Fall Tutoring

The Educational Lab will offer tutoring for children K-9 in reading/language arts and math from Sept. 8 to Nov. 20. UNCW education students will be paired one-on-one with a child for tutoring sessions. Children will attend one-hour sessions once or twice a week between 3 and 6 p.m. Mon.-Thurs. in King Hall, Room 203.

Tutoring fees are: 20 hours of elementary reading/language arts, $150; 25 hours elementary reading/language arts, $187.50; 10 hours elementary math, $75; and 10 hours of diagnostic testing, $75. For more information, call ext. 3633.

Photographic Display

"Coastal Beauty From the Air," a collection of photographs by Conrad Lowman will be on display through Oct. 9 in the Warwick Center Lobby Gallery. A "Meet the Artist" reception will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Sept. 3 in the Warwick Center lobby.

A graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design, Lowman said by photographing the coastal landscape from he air he hoped "the fresh perspective lets my audience see how fragile the ecosystem can be." For more information, call ext. 3827.

Experiment Subjects Sought

Menopausal females are sought for a study on the effect of hormones on problem solving. Participants should be between the ages of 50 and 65. The experiment will take one hour and subjects will be paid. For more information contact Becky, a graduate student in psychology, at 254-4686.

Ground Breaking Ceremony

The campus community is invited to a ground breaking ceremony honoring the Boseman family at 5 p.m. Aug. 27 at the new Boseman Field, formerly the UNCW softball field. Also, the Seahawk Club Campaign Kick-off Cookout will begin at 5:30 p.m. beside Trask Coliseum.

Thomas Third Graduate of UNCW-NCSU Joint Doctoral Program

Carrie Jo Thomas defended her doctoral dissertation "Individual Deposit-feeder, Community and Ecosystem Level Controls on Organic Matter Diagenesis in Marine Benthic Environments" Aug. 14 at N.C. State University. Thomas is the third graduate of the UNCW-NCSU joint doctoral program. Her dissertation work was co-supervised by Neal Blair of the Department of Marine, Earth and Atmospheric Sciences and Lawrence Cahoon, biological sciences. Doctoral thesis committee members included David DeMaster of MEAS-NCSU and Martin Posey, biological sciences. Thomas is planning to take a postdoctoral position with NASA in Palo Alto, Calif. this fall.

Aquarius Featured on Discovery News

Aquarius, UNCW/NURC's undersea laboratory stationed off the Florida coast, will be featured on the Discovery channel program "Discovery News." The segment will air during the 9 p.m. Friday broadcast and will be repeated at 1:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Saturday.

Parking Lot S Closed for Weekend Fundraiser

A mini grand prix fundraiser sponsored by the YWCA will be held Aug. 29 in Parking Lot S in front of Wagoner Hall. The parking lot will be closed from noon Aug. 28 until 9 a.m. Aug. 30 to set up and conduct the event.

Honors Scholars Reception

The campus community is invited to meet new and continuing honors scholars during a reception from 4 to 5:30 p.m. Sept. 2 at the University Commons amphitheater. In the event of rain, the reception will be held in the University Union Living Room. Refreshments will be served. For more information, call ext. 4181.

The Office of Information Technology presents Computer Based Training (CBT)

What is CBT?

OIT is excited to announce a new web-based computer training package called CBT. CBT (Computer based training) is a convenient and flexible way to learn new courses on your own, at your own pace. UNCW's CBT consists of 300 courses covering a range of topics from C++ Programming to the majority of Microsoft products. The courses vary in length from two to 12 hours and are modular so you can stop at any time and continue, at a later date, where you left off. You can also take quizzes, if you'd like, to test the knowledge you've gained.

In addition to the computer based training, OIT will continue to teach workshops. Check the Communique for dates.

Where can I use CBT?

CBT can currently be run from any PC on campus that has internet access. Off campus access will be available in the future – check the Communique for updates.
Note: CBT cannot be run from a Macintosh.

The OIT training room (HO 212) will be available for individuals that would like to learn away from their office and distractions. Check the schedule for open dates.

How do I get to CBT?

CBT can be accessed from the following web address:
http://training.uncwil.edu

You will notice three areas explaining CBT:
1) The Basics about CBT
2) Getting Started and
3) Available Courses

The Basics about CBT
explains a little about CBT. What it is, who can use it and where they can use it.

The Getting Started section discusses the two methods for using CBT (LivePlay and Download).

1) LivePlay allows you to use CBT interactively through the Web and does not require any files be copied to your hard drive.
2) Download requires you to download the course to your PC and run them from your hard drive. This will take up between 8-10 mb. Due to the size of the files, we recommend you delete the courses when you've completed them. Downloading will allow you to make copies of the courses onto diskettes if you would like to install them on another machine not hooked up to the UNCW network.
Note: Not all courses are available via LivePlay.

Available Courses lists all the courses available at UNCW. This list is broken down into five areas of interest: Applications, Operating Systems, Networking Concepts, Programming and Development and World Wide Web.
Note: If you would like a printed copy of the available courses, please call the Help Desk (ext. 4357) and we will send one to you.

Installing Player

Before using CBT, you will need to install a player on your computer. These files will enable your machine to run the courses.

From the Getting Started section, select how you will be using CBT – either LivePlay or Download. Click on the box (or link), at the bottom of the screen, that corresponds with your computer system (either Windows 95/NT or Window 3.1). A Save As dialog box will appear. Save the file to a location where you will be able to find it easily. Once the file has been saved onto your PC, close Netscape and locate the file (plyutil.exe). Make sure there are no programs running on your computer and then double click on the plyutil.exe file to begin the plug-in installation.
Note: There will be three separate files that are installed and after the installation of each there is a long pause. Make sure you wait until ALL three items have been installed.

You will be prompted to answer a series of dialog boxes - save each file in the default directory CBT lists. When you are asked for a proxy address or port number, leave these items blank and continue. You will also be asked for an FTP server address, username and password. Leave these items blank as well and continue. Once all the items have been installed, you can delete the plyutil.exe file.
Note: If you would like detailed instructions (including pictures) for the entire installation process, contact the Help Desk and we will send you a copy.

Beginning a Course using LivePlay

After selecting a course you will see an outline of what the course covers and the length of the course. Click on the LivePlay button (if available) and the course will begin. You will be prompted to register with an ID number. Enter 0 (zero) to begin the course.

Beginning a Course using Download

From the outline, click on the Download button. A window will appear telling you the system requirements necessary to download this file. Click the DOWNLOAD button and save the file to your computer. Locate the file and double click on it to install the course. Select OK (to install) or Diskette (to create a disk set to install on another PC). Save the course in c:\cbtlib and click on OK. Once the course has been installed, you can run it. Windows 95/NT users go to Start - Programs - CBT Systems Training. Windows 3.1 users will need to go into the CBT Program group. You will be prompted to register. Type self and complete the registration form to begin.

Demos

Special Note on the Microsoft Courses

In order to go through the majority of Microsoft courses, you MUST have that version of the software installed on your PC. If you do not, the course will not run. If you receive an error while trying to run one of the Microsoft courses, double check the version of the software you have as well as the version of the course you are trying to run.

Organizational Meeting for Staff Bowling League

An organizational meeting for the UNCW Staff Bowling League will be held at 5:45 p.m. tonight at Cardinal Lanes on Shipyard Boulevard. The planned mixed bowling league is open to UNCW staff, their spouses and adult family members. The league is scheduled to bowl Thursdays at 5:45 p.m. at Cardinal Lanes starting Aug. 27. For more information, contact Linda Ferrell at ext. 3540, Brenda Teague at ext. 3132 or Phillip Brown at ext. 7223.

Graduate Thesis Defense

Jessica Plant, biological sciences, will defend her thesis "Structure and Function of Signature Whistles in Free-ranging Bottlenose Dolphins" at 2 p.m. Friday in the new Science Building, Room 103.

Athletic Scholarship Fund-raiser

The annual Wilson's Golf Tournament, benefiting the UNCW Athletic Scholarship Fund, will be held at the Landfall Club Dye Course Sept. 1. The course opens at 7 a.m. with a shotgun start at 10 a.m. The format is Captain's Choice and individual entry is $160, which includes green fees, cart rental, continental breakfast, tee gifts, box lunch and cookout. Contact the Seahawk Club at ext. 3571 for an entry form or additional information.

Alumni Golf Tournament Scheduled

The 1998 Cape Fear Alumni Golf Classic is set for Oct. 23 at River Landing Golf Course. Participation will be open to all faculty, staff and students. For more information, contact Mike Arnold at ext. 2684.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

William Overman, psychology, received first-year funding of $149,739 for his three-year project "Hormones and Social Factors in Gender-specific Cognition."

Perri Bomar, nursing, received $1,999 for her project "Trainership - Rural and Urban Family Nurse Practitioner Program."

Philip Furia, English, lectured on the Gershwins and Irving Berlin at the Chicago Humanities Festival. In addition, he wrote the liner notes for "Love is Good for Anything That Ails You: Songs of the 1930s," a new CD by New Orleans jazz singer Banu Gibson.

Ron Sizemore, biological sciences, and former graduate student Cartier Esham had the article "Evaluation of Two Techniques: mFC and mTEC for the Determining Distributions of Fecal Pollution in Small North Carolina Tidal Creeks" published in the August issue of Water, Air and Soil Pollution.

Mike Mallin, CMSR, represented North Carolina at the NOAA National Estuarine Eutrophication Workshop held in Silver Spring, Md.

Joanne Nottingham, education, discussed the book An Introduction to the Profession of Teaching: Critical Thinking Approaches with Genevieve Barker during a noon WECT-TV broadcast.

Joanne Rockness, Chuck Earney and Bill Mayew, business, had their article "Developing Core Competencies in the Financial Accounting Course: The UNCW Model Lab Course" accepted for presentation and publication at the southeast Informs meeting in October.

The chancellor will hold student hours from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. Aug. 25 and 9:30 to 10:30 a.m Aug. 31 in Alderman Hall, Room 110.

Fall Enrollment Information

Fall 1998 enrollment information provided by the Office of Institutional Research is updated daily and available on the World Wide Web at http://www.uncwil.edu/oir/factsheet_folder.

Randall Library Fall Schedule

Randall Library will observe the following schedule during the fall semester: 7:30 a.m. to midnight, Mon.-Thurs., 7:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. to midnight Sunday. For the Labor Day holiday, the library will be closed Sept. 6 and open from 1 p.m. to midnight Sept. 7.

Long-Term Care Seminar

The N.C. Teachers' and State Employees' Comprehensive Major Medical Plan and MedAmerica Insurance Company invite active state employees to the second enrollment seminar to introduce a new program for long-term care benefits. The seminar will be held Aug. 25 in the University Union, Room 100. Question-and-answer sessions will be conducted from 10 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. A presentation will be given from noon to 1p.m. For more information, contact Elizabeth at ext. 3713.

Degree Audit Training

Computer training sessions on the On-Course degree audit and advising system will be held at 8:30 a.m., 10 a.m., 1:30 p.m. or 3 p.m. Sept. 23, 24 and 28 in Hoggard Hall, Room 212. These introductory sessions on the SIS and On-Course system are designed for any faculty member. To register, call Becky Fancher at ext. 3036.

Medical Insurance Enrollment Period Underway

Medical insurance annual enrollment period is Aug. 1 to Sept. 4. This is the only opportunity during the year to change medical plans. The state is offering the State Health Plan (traditional), Blue Cross/Blue Shield of N.C. Personal Care Plan (PCP), Doctor's Health Plan and United HealthCare of North Carolina. Informational packets, including the 1998 "It's Your Choice" booklet with enrollment application, were mailed to employees' home addresses during the first two weeks of this month. Employees who elect to change medical plans must forward completed enrollment applications to human resources.

The following rate changes to the medical plans will go into effect Oct. 1.

CAMPUS COMMUNIQUE

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement | Vol. XXVIII, No. 8 September 3, 1998 | Phillip Brown, editor

UNCW Suffers Minor Damage From Long-winded Hurricane Bonnie

Despite her lingering, unwelcome presence Hurricane Bonnie left the UNCW campus with minimal damage, according to Dick Scott, assistant vice chancellor for business affairs and UNCW's emergency center director.

"UNCW weathered the storm very well. The university's policies and procedures on hurricanes worked well, and the cooperation from the campus community contributed to the university getting through the storm with minimal aftereffects. The university suffered minor roof damage, but there was no serious structural damage," said Scott.

Galloway Hall, the new Science Building and Kenan Hall suffered the most water damage which was caused from roof vents lost during the storm. The campus also lost between 50 and 75 trees. "We were very fortunate that the ground was not saturated prior to the storm," said Scott. "Otherwise the number of trees lost would probably have been much higher."

Power was restored to the campus at 11 p.m. Aug. 27 with the campus reopened to staff at noon Aug. 28. Residential students were able to return at 3 p.m. Aug. 30.

"The return of students to the residence halls went very smoothly," said Scott. "Evidently students received and observed the information from the hotline." Scott emphasized that while some residence halls reported leaks, damage to students' personal belongings was minimal, "a credit to students' preparation efforts prior to departing campus."

Damage estimates have not been finalized, said Scott who is waiting on final reports concerning the two residence halls under construction. "One of the residence halls suffered water damage, but the extent of the damage or the delay to the project, if any, has not been determined." The Center for Marine Science Research construction site at Myrtle Grove also suffered minor damage.

"About 15 trees were lost between the dock and the building and the road has debris which must be removed. There is also a significant amount of floating debris left from overwash by the Intracoastal Waterway."

In addition to the damage to campus, the storm wiped out three days of classes. University officials are meeting to decide how to rearrange the semester schedule.

"The administration is considering which approach to take," said Melton McLaurin, associate vice chancellor for academic affairs. "There are a variety of options that are available, and we are meeting to determine the best solution."

Campus Input Sought for University Plan

Input from faculty, staff and students is needed to update the Chancellor's five-year campus plan, said Robert Fry, assistant to the chancellor and director of the Office of Institutional Research.

Fry said the campus community can visit university planning's World Wide Web site at http://www.uncwil.edu/oir/planning_folder to view and comment on updated concise and expanded mission statements of the university as well as campus-wide goals.

"Faculty, staff and students are being given an opportunity to address the strengths and weaknesses of these documents and to review the comments of others," said Fry. "This interaction and feedback was not available during previous planning cycles and should reduce the time needed to complete the revision process, which will be completed during the fall semester." He added that a Web-based survey was under design to deal with a variety of issues including questions of campus size, quality levels of entering students and academic program emphasis.

Adopted in 1991, the plan focuses attention on UNCW's strengths in undergraduate education and the marine sciences, expanding graduate educational opportunities in selected academic fields, increasing services to the region, greater participation in a changing world community and studying the coastal region's unique environmental problems, said Fry.

"Results of the plan have been an increase in the numbers of higher ability students, greater national and international recognition of the marine science program, expanding graduate programs and more UNCW students attending universities worldwide on exchange agreements," said Chancellor James R. Leutze. He added that these successes have received national attention pointing to US News & World Report's recent guidebook ranking UNCW as one of the top 10 public regional universities in the South.

"It is now time to plan for the future and discuss important opportunities that were not addressed in the original document," said Chancellor Leutze. "The needs and expectations of the university's service population are changing. Not one of the university's eight planning goals from 1991 mentions technology and its impact on instructional delivery both on- and off-campus. In addition, the plan does not include any reference to distance education."

According to Fry, UNC General Administration, as part of the state's new performance-based budgeting process, will be looking at each university's progress toward meeting its campus plan to determine future growth and funding for each institution. "Because of the link between General Administration surveys, campus missions and goals and planning and budgeting, input from the campus community is critical to mapping the campus' future," said Fry. He said all comments to the Internet site will be consolidated, posted for public review and used by the University Planning and Quality Council and other appropriate university committees as a resource during the development of the new planning document. In addition to the Web site, comments may also be sent to Fry via e-mail at fryb or to his attention at Alderman Hall, Room 110.

UNCW

Fall Faculty Meeting

The fall faculty meeting will be held at 4 p.m. Sept. 10 in Cameron Hall auditorium, Room 105. All faculty members are encouraged to attend.

Fulbright Deadlines

Nov. 1 is the deadline to apply for the Fulbright Scholar in Residence Program, Fulbright International Education Administrators Program and the Fulbright German Studies Seminar. Jan. 1 is the deadline to apply for the 1999-2000 NATO-Euro Atlantic Partnership Council Fellowship Program. For more information, contact Gary Faulkner at ext. 3795.

Chemistry Seminar

Eli Breuer, distinguished visiting professor of chemistry, will present "Acylphosphonate Derivatives: Structure, Reactivity and Biological Activity" at 3 p.m. Friday in the new Science Building, Room 132. It is the Chemistry Department's first lecture of its fall seminar series.

Poetry Collection Commemorates UNCW's 50th Anniversary

In honor of its golden anniversary, UNCW has published a collection of poems entitled Celebration. The collection features works from 52 poets including UNCW students, faculty, staff and authors from the Wilmington community as well as other universities.

The collection's editor, Maurice Martinez, specialty studies, will host a book party at 7 p.m. Sept. 16 in the King Hall auditorium. PAJOMA, a percussion and dance troupe along with the UNCW Brass Quintet will provide entertainment, and 200 copies of Celebration will be given away at the party. Following the book party at 8:30 p.m., published poets will read their work at the Water Street Restaurant, 5 Water Street. John Rice, specialty studies, will provide blues guitar entertainment.

Post-tenure Review Session for Faculty

Faculty are invited to attend the information session "Post-Tenure Review at UNCW" at 3 p.m. Sept. 9 in Morton Hall's Bryan Auditorium.

Two years ago, the UNC system mandated that each campus develop a policy for the periodic review of faculty with tenure. UNCW's policy was approved by the Faculty Senate, Provost Marvin Moss and UNC General Administration, and it goes into effect this year. The first reviews will take place during the spring semester.

Faculty Senate President Richard Veit, who chaired the faculty committee that drafted UNCW's post-tenure-review policy, will explain the specifics of the policy and its implications for faculty. Veit and Associate Provost Melton McLaurin, who represented UNCW on the system-wide UNC Committee on Post-Tenure Review, will answer questions.

Walters' Film on UNC-TV

Ellen Walters' documentary Teach Me to... which is part of the UNC-TV series "N.C. Visions" will air at 11 p.m. Saturday.

Department Selling Oven

Student Development Services has a four-burner, glass and ceramic, self-cleaning Kenmore oven with Nautilus stainless steel hood for sale. It is three or four years old and in excellent condition. For more information, call Dianne Matthews at ext. 3065.

Standardized Tests

The National Testing Program is administering CLEP Spanish, German and French exams to UNCW students. There is a multiple-choice and listening section for each of these exams. Students may call ext. 3746 to schedule an individual appointment.

Study Abroad Orientation

The Office of International Programs will conduct an orientation from 3:15 to 5 p.m. Sept. 11 in the University Union, Room 103 for faculty interested in proposing a study abroad program for summer 1999. Applications, as well as advice on procedures, budgets, marketing and timetables, will be available. For more information, call ext. 3685.

Lamont Leads UNCW Alumni Board

Tom Lamont '80 of Wilmington is the 1998-99 chair of the UNCW Alumni Association. Serving with him are John Wilson '98, vice chair; Caroline Pollard '73, secretary; and Tommy Bancroft '58, '69, treasurer.

Re-elected to the core board for three-year terms were Bancroft, Gia Todd Long, '91, Lee Pearson '70, Paula Williams-James '61 and Jessiebeth Geddie '63. Ray Cockrell '88, '96, who was an alternate, was elected to the core board, along with former board chair, Jim Stasios '70.

The following chapter representatives were named alternates, who will serve one-year, non-voting terms: Richard Edens, '94, MBA Chapter; Becky Fancher '78, Watson School of Education Chapter; and Alex Smith '86, Triangle Chapter. Also serving as alternates are Sandy Saburn '89, Bill Lloyd '88, Don Betz '81 and Jennifer Kinlaw '95.

Ground Breaking Ceremony

The campus community is invited to a ground breaking ceremony honoring the Boseman family at 5 p.m. Sept. 9 at the new Boseman Field, formerly the UNCW softball field. Also, the Seahawk Club campaign kick-off cookout will begin at 5:30 p.m. beside Trask Coliseum.

CONVOCATION 1998

UNCW Recognizes Outstanding Teachers During Fall Convocation

Sixteen awards for teaching excellence were presented during UNCW's 1998 Convocation at Aug. 18 in Trask Coliseum. Author and former Sierra Club President Adam Werbach was the featured speaker for the ceremony marking the start of the university's 51st year.

Receiving Distinguished Teaching Professorships were Sue Combs, HPER, Fritz Kaupran, biological sciences, and James McGowan, philosophy and religion. The distinguished professorships recognize faculty who make outstanding contributions to teaching at UNCW and come with a three-year $5,000 stipend and Distinguished Teaching medallion. Nominations were solicited from each department or school, and all full-time tenured professors were eligible.

In addition to his Distinguished Teaching Professorship, McGowan received the UNCW Board of Trustees Teaching Excellence Award in recognition of his significant contributions to higher education through dedication and service to students. First presented in 1978, the award is designed to exemplify the university's commitment to teaching excellence with the recipient receiving a one-time stipend of $1,500 and a Distinguished Teaching medallion.

In addition to these awards, five individuals were presented the Chancellor's Teaching Excellence Award: John Bennett, HPER; Ned Martin, chemistry; Susan McCaffray, history; Roy Harkin, Watson School of Education; and Tammy Hunt, Cameron School of Business. The award, established in 1991, recognizes faculty who demonstrate outstanding teaching in the classroom. Each recipient received a $750 award and a Distinguished Teaching medallion.

William Overman, psychology, received the Award for Faculty Scholarship which is given to a member of the faculty to recognize significant contributions to the university and the academic community through commitment to scholarship, research and creativity. Current full-time UNCW faculty are nominated for this award by their peers and receive a $1,500 award and a medallion.

Graduate Teaching Excellence Awards were given to graduate students serving as teaching assistants. The recipients were Lisa Burch, English; Francine Coblentz, biology; Jennifer Falvev, MFA creative writing; Deborah Fauble, Watson School of Education, Elizabeth Moundalexis, earth sciences; and Deborah Pierce, biology. Each graduate teaching assistant received a $250 award.

UNCW Fostering Student Involvement

While on campus two days following his convocation address, Adam Werbach, former Sierra Club president and author of Act Now, Apologize Later, said UNCW has taken steps in the right direction to foster student involvement.

"While university administrators and faculty should not demand student activism, they should be ready to facilitate it successfully if it exists. Faculty should act as guardrails keeping students safe and productive, but not telling them where to go," he said.

One avenue the university is using to build student involvement is the Leadership and Activities Center, which organizes volunteer opportunities in the community. Werbach called the center "an exciting initiative for a university to undertake. It signals to UNCW students that the administration trusts them to lead. Young people think their role is to follow, not lead."

Giving 18- ,19- and 20-year olds the power to lead can be a dangerous thing because of the uncertainity in the direction of their leadership, said Werbach. However, providing leadership skills and trust will be beneficial in nurturing student activism. He challenged the university "to continue to build the relationship between the community and students."

Werback added another way to promote student involvement is to encourage diversity of thought. "Every citizen is passionate about some cause. Often those in authority seek to limit what people should feel passionate about," said Werbach.

While diversity is frightening, teachers who believe in the importance of student development will encourage a student's passion, whatever the cause, therefore encouraging diversity of thought and diversity of opinion.

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement Vol. XXVIII, No. 9 September 10, 1998 Phillip Brown, editor

Revised Fall Semester Schedule Announced

Closure of the university due to Hurricane Bonnie resulted in the loss of three full class days and a portion of a fourth. In order to meet the required number of class days for the semester, university officials have made the following revisions to the fall semester schedule:

October 3 will be the makeup day for classes cancelled on August 25 after 3 p.m.
November 14 will be the makeup day for classes missed August 26.
December 10 will be the makeup day for classes missed August 27.
December 11 will be the makeup day for classes missed August 28.

The class changes have led to the revised exam schedule below:

Exam Times	8-11 a.m.	11:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m.	3-6 p.m.	7-10 p.m.
Dec. 12	9 a.m. MWF	12 p.m. MWF	2 p.m. MWF	7:30 p.m. TR
Dec. 13		*PED 101 (begins at 1 p.m.)	*ENG 101	6 p.m. TR
Dec. 14	10 a.m. MWF	8 a.m. TR	2 p.m. TR	*MAT 111

Alumni Association Lecture Series Explores Theatre

UNCW alumnus Tony Rivenbark '70 will be the guest speaker for the first program of 1998-99 UNCW Alumni Lecture Series on Sept. 24. Rivenbark is the executive director of the Thalian Hall Center for the Performing Arts, Inc. in Wilmington. Also featured will be Tom Macie, associate professor of art and theatre, who will discuss computer imaging for scene design models.

The two-part lecture will begin at 3 p.m. in the Center Stage Cafe in the Warwick Center (formerly the University Center). There is no charge for admission, and refreshments will be served.

Rivenbark, who worked with the City of Wilmington in the development, design, capital campaign and construction of the $5.5 million renovation and expansion of the Thalian Hall complex, holds a bachelor of arts in history with a theatre minor from UNCW.

Following Rivenbark's talk, Macie will explore the use of computer-generated images in today's theatre productions. He has designed scenery and lighting for the Baltimore Opera, Detroit's Attic Theatre, Wilmington's Thalian Association, Cape Fear Shakespeare and more than 50 productions for the UNCW University Theatre. His commercial work includes architectural models and computer animations as courtroom exhibits for construction litigation. He is currently working on models for Wilmington's Bellamy Mansion Museum.

The first UNCW Alumni Lecture Series program is co-sponsored by the UNCW Alumni Association and the Department of Art and Theatre. For more information, call ext. 2682.

Former Polish Prime Minister to Lecture at UNCW Sept. 17

Former Polish Prime Minister Wlodzimierz Cimoszewicz will discuss the consequences of Poland's membership in NATO at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 17 in the University Union, Room 100. This free event is sponsored by the Chancellor's Office and is open to the public. Cimoszewicz will also speak to political science classes on Sept. 18.

"This is quite an honor for UNCW to host such a distinguished international leader," said Melton McLaurin, associate vice chancellor for academic affairs. "His topic should be very enlightening and timely as Poland seeks both political and economic affiliation with Western Europe, thus challenging nearly 300 years of Russia's dominance in Polish affairs. We invite the public to take advantage of this opportunity to learn firsthand about developments in Poland."

Cimoszewicz, who graduated from the Law Department of Warsaw University in 1972 with Ph.D. in international public law, became Poland's deputy prime minister and minister of justice in October 1993. In February 1996 he took over as prime minister and the chairman of the Committee for European Integration, resigning at the end of 1997.

He was also a member of the Polish United Workers Party and the Council of Europe's Parliamentary Assembly. He has also worked extensively on the economic development in Poland.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Cape Fear International Film Festival Set for Sept. 14-17 in Thalian Hall

UNCW is sponsoring the inaugural Cape Fear International Film Festival Sept. 14-17 at Thalian Hall Center for the Performing Arts.

The festival will feature award-winning European films which will be screened nightly at 6 and 9 p.m. Tickets are $5 per show and are available at the Thalian Hall box office.

Sept. 14

Opening the festival Monday at 6 p.m. will be Underground, a "flamboyant, slapstick" comedy about life underground amidst the traumas of three wars in Yugoslavia. The 9 p.m. showing will feature Mendel, a Norwegian film about a young Holocaust survivor coming to terms with himself and history in post-war Norway. Critics have called Mendel a kind of "Norwegian Huck Finn" combining childish adventure with memories of the Holocaust.

Sept. 15

The Belgian film La Promesse, which tells the story of African immigrants struggling to survive in the economic warfare of the new Europe, will be shown at 6 p.m. Tuesday. The 9 p.m. showing will feature the Ukrainian thriller Friend of the Deceased, which depicts an unhappy intellectual from Kiev who hires a hit-man to kill him, only to decide later that life is worth living after all.

Sept. 16

Ukrainian thriller Friend of the Deceased will be shown at 6 p.m., Wednesday, followed by the Belgian film La Promesse at 9 p.m.

Sept. 17

The festival concludes Thursday with Mendel at 6 p.m. followed by Underground at 9 p.m.

The Cape Fear International Film Festival is sponsored by the College of Arts and Sciences, Office of International Programs and the Departments of History, Political Science, English, Foreign Languages and Literatures and Art and Theatre.

For more information about the films, call Thalian Hall at 910/343-3660.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

Bruce McKinney, communication studies, presented the lecture "Mediation and Conflict Management: An American Perspective, a Vietnamese Possibility" to businessmen from the Hanoi School of Business, Vietnam National University who were in the United States as part of the Vietnamese Executive Study Tour (VEST) held at James Madison University. Participants in the VEST program toured small businesses in the Harrisonburg, Va., area in addition to attending classes covering entrepreneurship, banking, finance, marketing and conflict management. Pham Hung from the Hanoi School of Business invited McKinney to lecture at that institution next March. Two books authored by McKinney, Mediator Communication Competencies and Communication Skills for Surviving Conflicts at Work, will be used at Vietnam National University next spring.

Lou Buttino and Frank P. Trimble, communication studies, served as invited judges for the competitive portion of the University Film and Video Association (UFVA) conference held at the N.C. School of the Arts in Winston-Salem. They were members of a panel evaluating documentaries created by UFVA members.

Frank P. Trimble, communication studies, had Act I of his operetta Fly Wright!: The Story of Two Brothers performed in concert by The Lost Colony outdoor drama choir at the Festival Park theatre complex in Manteo.

Amy Zeng, production and decision science, had the paper "The Performance of Two Popular Service Measures on Management Effectiveness in Inventory Control" accepted for publication in International Journal of Production Economics. Her paper "Single or Multiple Sourcing? An Integrated Optimization Framework for Sustaining Time-based Competitiveness" will be published in Journal of Marketing Theory and Practice: Special Issue on Supply Chain Management.

James J. Kiddle, chemistry, and two former undergraduate students, Ashley A. Davis and Jennifer J. Rosen, had their article "A New Bisphosphonate Reagent for the Synthesis of (Z)-Olefins and Bis(trifluoroethyl) Phosphonates" published in Tetrahedron Letters.

Caroline Clements, psychology, had the paper "Hopelessness Theory of Depression: Tests of the Symptom Component" published as the lead article in the August issue of Cognitive Therapy and Research. It was co-authored by Lauren Alloy of Temple University.

Rebecca Jones and James Reeves, chemistry, presented papers at the 15th Biennial Chemical Education Conference in Waterloo, Ontario. Jones's presentation was "Life Before and After Computers in the General Chemistry Laboratory." Reeves presented two papers representing ongoing work with Charles Ward, "Teaching General Chemistry on the WWW" and "The Lab/Recitation Model for Introducing Cooperative Learning in Large General Chemistry Sections."

Marlene M. Rosenkoetter, nursing, and Michelle Howard-Vital, public service, gave the plenary session address "Distance Education: Pragmatics and Realities" at the World Association for Case Method Research and Application, 15th International Conference in Marseilles, France. Rosenkoetter also presented her paper "Teaching Nursing Research Via Distance Education and Computer Technology."

Paula Kamenish, English, was a resident fellow in July at the Fondation Maison des Sciences de l'Homme in Paris. Her project focused on women of the European avant-garde. She also published the article "The Theory of Games and Dramatic Behavior: Uncovering Patterns of Dominance in Les Bonnes" in Studies in the Humanities, vol. 24.

OFFICIAL NOTICES

SIS Shutdown

The Student Information System (SIS) will be down Friday through Monday to install a new software release related to the university's year 2000 compliance. Direct any questions to Liz Hosier at ext. 3557 or e-mail at hosiere.

CAMPUS COMMUNIQUE

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement Vol. XXVIII, No. 10 September 17, 1998 Phillip Brown, editor

Steven Miller Named New Director of NURC

Provost Marvin Moss has announced that Steven Miller has been named the new director for the National Undersea Research Center (NURC) at UNCW.

Miller is currently associate director of the UNCW/NURC Florida program, where he has worked extensively with Aquarius, the world's only underwater research laboratory. Aquarius is administered by UNCW/NURC and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. It is in this habitat that aquanauts live and study the world of underwater science, particularly coral reefs.

"Under Dr. Miller's leadership, the Florida Program has overseen cutting-edge research about the health of coral reefs," said Provost Moss. "He has personally participated in two refurbishments of the state-of-the-art research habitat Aquarius and has raised the visibility of the national imperative to learn more about the oceans. Dr. Miller brings an excellent scientific background and extensive experience in managing research. We expect him to take the overall UNCW National Undersea Research Program to a new level."

NURC is funded by a grant from the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration. This funding is part of NOAA's National Undersea Research Program, headquartered at Silver Spring, Md. The UNCW/NURC program, one of six in the nation, supports undersea research of the southeastern United States, extending from North Carolina to Texas.

"I look forward to new challenges and the continued growth of the NURC program," said Miller. "UNCW is taking major steps to enhance its marine science programs both in education and research, so I expect exciting years ahead. Working as a marine scientist and being part of developing new programs is a dream come true."

Along with teaching and research credentials, Miller has 14 scientific publications and an active research program studying coral reefs in the Florida Keys.

Miller's honors include being elected a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1997. He was twice elected as the recording secretary for the International Society for Reef Studies, for which he recently published a homepage, hosted by UNCW. He also is a courtesy biology professor at Florida International University.

He received his bachelor of arts degree in biology from Brown University in 1976 and his doctorate in botany in 1988 from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He has published an extensive array of scientific research papers.

Alumni Lecture Series

The first program of the 1998-99 Alumni Lecture Series will be at 3 p.m. Wednesday in the Center Stage Cafe in the Warwick Center (formerly the University Center).

The two-part lecture will be presented by Tony Rivenbark '70, executive director of Thalian Hall Center for the Performing Arts, Inc., and Tom Macie, art and theatre, who will discuss computer imaging for scene design models.

Kansas Replaces KC and the Sunshine Band for Family Weekend Concert Saturday

The 1970s musical group Kansas will replace KC and the Sunshine Band for the UNCW Family Weekend concert at 8 p.m. Saturday in Trask Coliseum. KC and the Sunshine Band canceled due to an injury, said Karla Carney, UNCW's director of orientation.

One of the most popular bands of the '70s, Kansas is best known for the hit records "Dust in the Wind" and "Carry on Wayward Son." Formed in 1970 in Topeka, founding members were guitarist Kerry Livgren, bassist Dave Hope and drummer Phil Ehart. The trio added vocalist/keyboardist Steve Walsh and guitarist Richard Williams in 1972. Group membership changed over the years and following their 1983 album Drastic Measures, the group disbanded. However, in 1986 Kansas re-formed around Ehart, Willams and Walsh, adding guitarist Steve Morris and bassist Billy Greer. The group's latest recording Always Never the Same was released this year.

Purchased tickets will be honored for the concert; cash refunds will be given Saturday only, starting at 7 p.m. in Trask Coliseum. Tickets returned Sept. 21-Oct. 9 will be refunded by check within approximately 14 days. Return tickets, along with full name, address and Social Security number to the Kenan Auditorium box office for processing.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Business School Forms Transatlantic Alliance

The Cameron School of Business has formed a transatlantic alliance with four European Union business schools and two United States business schools to develop and implement a model international business education program that will permit students to study and work two years at home and two years abroad and receive degrees from both schools.

The U.S. program is to be funded in part by a $206,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education. Funding for the European Union schools will come from a Euro 100,000 grant (approximately $80,000) from the European Union, supplemented by local country education grants. The program is made possible at UNCW through the support of the Office of International Programs.

The European members of this alliance are the Centre d'Etudes Superieures Europeenes Management Mediterrannee in Marseilles, France; the Hochschule Bremen in Bremen, Germany; the University of Westminister's Harrow Business School in London, England; and the Universidad de Valencia in Valencia, Spain. In addition to the Cameron School of Business, the U.S. members are the East Tennessee State University and the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

The program will be developed in consultation with the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, the leading accreditation agency for business schools.

Typewriter Available

The Office of Research Administration has an IBM WheelWriter 6 typewriter in good working condition available for transfer to another office. Interested departments should contact MJ Carver at ext. 3809.

Biology Seminar

Ron Sizemore, biology, will present "Marine Microbiology, Ancient but Interesting?" at 2 p.m. Friday in the new Science Building, Room 103.

FEATURES

KC and the Sunshine Band to Perform at UNCW Family Weekend

During UNCW Family Weekend Sept. 18-20 the university will host the families of UNCW students and provide two days of activities. Headlining the weekend event will be KC and the Sunshine Band performing at 8 p.m. Sept. 19 in Trask Coliseum.

"Family Weekend puts an emphasis on the importance of parents, siblings and spouses of our UNCW students," said Karla C. Carney, director of orientation who expects more than 1,500 participants for the weekend.

Carney said the selection of the cross-generational KC and the Sunshine Band, known for such hits as "Boogie Nights," "That's the Way (I Like It)" and "Get Down Tonight," "will bring families to their feet and keep them applauding for more." Tickets are on sale at the University Union Information Desk and the Kenan Auditorium Box Office. Prices are $10 for UNCW students, parents, faculty and staff (maximum of four per UNCW ID) and $13.50 for the general public.

In addition to the concert, Family Weekend activities include a Friday evening sunset cruise on the Cape Fear River aboard the Lady Lumina. The cost of the cruise is $6 per person. There will be informational sessions on Saturday morning followed by a family fun feast on the University Commons with music by the UNCW Jazz Band. On Saturday afternoon families may participate in a scramble golf tournament at St. James Plantation in Southport. The cost is $40 per person and limited to 48 entries. Families can also play volleyball and softball on campus or go to the beach. Weekend activities will conclude Sunday with brunch at 10:30 a.m. in Wagoner Dining Hall.

Family Weekend sponsors are the Seahawk Parent Association, UNCW's Offices of Orientation Programs, Auxiliary Services, Housing and Residence Life and Campus Recreation, the Campus Activities and Leadership Center and the Division of Student Affairs.

Pulitzer Prize-winning Poet to Read at UNCW

Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Jorie Graham will read from her works at 8 p.m. Sept. 17 in Kenan Auditorium with a book signing and reception to follow. She will also conduct a question-and-answer forum at 2 p.m. Sept. 18 in Cameron Hall auditorium. These events are sponsored by the Buckner Lecture Series and the UNCW English Department and are free and open to the public.

Graham is the author of seven collections of poetry, including The Dream of the Unified Field: Selected Poems 1974-1994 which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1996.

A recipient of numerous awards, including fellowships from the NEA and from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, Graham teaches and directs the poetry program at the University of Iowa Writers' Workshop. She also edited the anthologies The Best American Poetry 1990 and Earth Took of Earth: 100 Great Poems of the English Language.

The Buckner Lecture Series was established by Charles F. Green III to fund appearances by distinguished guest presenters at the university and in honor of his friend, Katherine K. Buckner.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

International Student Reception

Faculty, staff and students are invited to a reception from 4 to 5:30 p.m. Sept. 15 in the University Union Living Room to welcome UNCW's approximately 100 new and returning international students representing 35 countries. Refreshments will be served.

Chancellor's Human Relations Advisory Committee

Anyone interested in serving on the Chancellor's Human Relations Advisory Committee should contact Chris Kaberline at ext. 3573 or e-mail kaberlinec.

The committee is planning a diversity month as well as a contest to develop a diversity poster for UNCW. Prizes will be awarded to the winning and two runner-up designs.

The charge of the committee is: to continually assess the level of awareness, understanding and tolerance for the differences of people and determine how the university can promote a better understanding of cultural and ethnic differences in university programs and activities; review and recommend to the chancellor educational programming and policies deemed necessary to increase positive human relations efforts on campus; and to serve as a "working" body in collaboration with other university groups, especially the Department of Human Resources, to seek sponsorship of programs, forums, activities and functions determined essential and appropriate to educate, enlighten and inform the university community in the area of human relations.

First Aid Training

The Safety Department is offering standard first aid training from 6 to 10 p.m. Sept. 15 and 16 and 1 to 5 p.m. Sept. 22 and 24. The cost is $25. To register, call ext. 3057.

First Cape Fear International Film Festival Scheduled

UNCW is sponsoring the inaugural Cape Fear International Film Festival Sept. 14-17 at Thalian Hall Center for the Performing Arts.

The Cape Fear International Film Festival is an effort to increase awareness of UNCW's film studies program and international events among university students and the Wilmington community," said Lisa Pollard, assistant professor of history and one of the festival organizers.

The festival will feature award-winning European films which will be screened nightly at 6 and 9 p.m. Tickets are $5 per night and are available at the Thalian Hall box office.

Opening the festival Monday will be Underground, a "flamboyant, slapstick" comedy about life underground amidst the traumas of three wars in Yugoslavia. The Belgian film La Promesse, which tells the story of African immigrants struggling to survive in the economic warfare of the new Europe, will be shown Tuesday. The Ukrainian thriller Friend of the Deceased, scheduled for Wednesday, depicts an unhappy intellectual from Kiev who hires a hit-man to kill him, only to decide later that life is worth living after all. The festival concludes Thursday with Mendel, a Norwegian film about a young Holocaust survivor coming to terms with himself and history in post-war Norway. Critics have called Mendel a kind of "Norwegian Huck Finn" combining childish adventure with memories of the Holocaust.

The Cape Fear International Film Festival is sponsored by UNCW's College of Arts and Sciences, Office of International Programs and the Departments of History, Political Science, English, Foreign Languages and Literatures and Art and Theatre.

For more information about the films, call Thalian Hall at 343-3660.

Cameron School of Business Partner in Year 2000 Survey

Surveys conducted by the Cameron School of Business and Tangram Enterprise Solutions Inc. revealed that major U.S. companies have focused on centralized and mainframe computer applications largely ignoring desktop software applications in the concern over year 2000 compliance. Also, 30 percent of the 449 respondents representing senior managers at Fortune 1,000 companies said they do not conduct hardware or software inventories of their assets, making it difficult to identify which desktops need updating. Tangram is a software development firm in Cary. Additional survey information can be accessed on the World Wide Web at http://www.tangram.com/news/y2ksurvy.html.

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement Vol. XXVIII, No. 11 September 24, 1998 Phillip Brown, editor

Partners in Giving: UNCW and the State Employees Combined Campaign

One of the themes of this year's annual State Employees Combined Campaign (SECC), the only authorized charitable giving program that state employees can contribute to through payroll deduction, is "Because of You." Because of UNCW employees and contributors from other state agencies, the SECC raised $3.44 million last year benefitting more than 1,200 charitable organizations that provide personal health care and legal services, strengthen diversity, strive to end domestic violence and preserve the environment. This year, Gov. James Hunt set the state's goal at $3.6 million.

"UNCW's goal is to build upon last year's increased participation," said Nikki Howard, director of internal audit and 1998 UNCW SECC chair. "Last year, the campaign targeted 1,113 UNCW employees which resulted in a participation rate of 38 percent." She said even though last year's participation rate exceeded the statewide average of 36 percent, three state universities had at least 50 percent participation.

"This year UNCW's campaign coordinators are going to reach out to 2,100 faculty and staff with an appeal to participate," said Howard. "Giving at all levels is encouraged, and every employee can make a difference. This year's theme 'Because of You' emphasizes the power of one employee who decides to become a partner with fellow state employees to make a difference in the community."

Howard said UNCW employees should remember that contributions can be designated to a specific organization. "Employees should give to an agency they care about. If that agency is on the SECC list, I encourage employees to use this campaign as an opportunity to designate their contribution," she said.

Chancellor James R. Leutze called the annual drive "an opportunity to return to the Cape Fear community some of the good fortune it has shown the university. We have experienced good economic times during the past year, and we will experience good economic times again this year because raises are anticipated - whenever the legislators decide to go home! So, please join with me as a partner in giving."

Increasing UNCW's participation rate will illustrate the university's commitment to be outstanding in every way and remain competitive within the UNC system, added Chancellor Leutze.

During the three-week campaign, university employees will be contacted by the following coordinators within their division: Bev Stouffer, information technology and management information support; Earla Pope, nursing; Kate Bruce, graduate school and research; Gloria Crowell, Center for Marine Science Research; Tammie Haynes, Randall Library; Deborah Haywood, student affairs; Greg Dalton and Dave Allen, athletics; Sharon Boyd, business affairs; Pat Kline, physical plant; Nancy Martin, public service; Willena Mitchell, chancellor's office; Jack Baker, Cameron School of Business; Ron Whittaker, enrollment affairs; Jutta Lovas, College of Arts and Sciences; Frank Ainsley, earth sciences; Lisa Pollard, history; Ned Martin, chemistry; Emma Kay Thornton, computer sciences; Debbie Cronin, biological sciences; Pat Joseph, mathematics; Laura Hardaway, HPER; Frank Trimble, communication studies; Lewis Walker III, English; Mary Browning, music and art and theatre; P.J. LaPaire, foreign languages and literatures; Clyde McDaniel, sociology and anthropology; Christie Prentice, academic affairs; Patton McDowell, advancement; and Sandie Moore and Saul Bachner, Watson School of Education.

Jane Smith Patterson to Present Technology Study Results Monday in Madeline Suite

While North Carolina has the most manufacturing-intensive economy in the U.S. and is attracting more new manufacturing plants than most states, there is concern with the state's ability to shift research and development to meet changing demands, according to the study "At the Crossroads: North Carolina's Place in the Knowledge Economy of the 21st Century" conducted by the N.C. Board of Science and Technology and the N.C. Alliance for Competitive Technologies.

Jane Smith Patterson, senior advisor to the governor for science and technology, and Mike Luger, director of the Office of Economic Development at UNC-Chapel Hill, will discuss the study from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Monday at Wagoner Hall, Madeline Suite. The study looked at research and development investment and spending in North Carolina and will be used to make policy recommendations. Following the presentation, there will be a discussion of policies that can be implemented to improve North Carolina's ability to attract research and development money and to move technologies into the marketplace. Faculty and staff are invited to attend and participate in the discussion.

North Carolina's economy is at a crossroads, according to the study. Increasingly, manufacturing is venturing in emerging sectors, notably in software development, health and pharmaceuticals. A growing complex of knowledge resources such as universities, medical centers and research institutes has induced considerable high-tech growth, including a sizable number of new start-up and spin-off companies. Unemployment is at a low 4 percent statewide, and general economic growth has pushed personal income up, rising by 6.6 percent between 1995 and 1996 for the state as a whole.

While these trends are positive, the report said the state must not be lulled into a false sense of security about its economic future. "At the Crossroads" considers North Carolina's economic prospects by assessing its research strengths in industry and the academy as well as its likely ability to respond to shifting R&D funding priorities in Washington. The focus on R&D recognizes that successful economies in the early 21st century will be those with a strong knowledge base. In particular, the competitive position of North Carolina in the global economy of the future likely will rest on the ability of businesses and universities to work together to create and commercialize new products and processes.

Former Hostage Negotiator Terry Waite to Speak in Kenan Auditorium

Terry Waite, former hostage negotiator who was himself taken captive in Beirut for 1,760, days, will present the lecture "Resolving Conflict: The Test of Humanity" at 7 p.m. Oct. 19 in Kenan Auditorium. This lecture is a part of the Leadership Lecture Series sponsored by the chancellor's office and the Leadership Center.

Born in the county of Cheshire, England, Waite received his formal education in London. Upon college graduation, he was appointed as education advisor to the Anglican Bishop of Bristol, England. In 1969, he and his family moved to Uganda where he escaped death several times while witnessing the Amin coup. During this time, he established the Southern Sudan Project as well as other aid and development programs. He moved to Rome, Italy, in 1972 to serve as an international consultant to a Roman Catholic medical order traveling worldwide to conduct programs based on various development issues. After eight years of service in Rome, Waite was recruited by the Archbishop of Canterbury to join his private staff at Lambeth Palace in London.

In the 1980's Waite received international attention for his successful negotiations that led to release of hostages from Iran and British hostages held in Libya. While negotiating the release of Western hostages in Lebanon, Waite was taken hostage in January 1987, where he remained in captivity for 1,760 days.

After being released in September 1991, Waite was elected a Fellow Commoner at Trinity Hall Cambridge, England, where he wrote Taken on Trust, an account of his time in Beirut. He also has published a second book Footfalls in Memory, a collection of excerpts from books, poems and prayers that were in his thoughts during his captivity. Published in England in 1995, Footfalls in Memory debuted in the U.S. in the fall of 1997. Waite has also been featured in many journals and periodicals including Reader's Digest and The Kipling Journal as well as contributing articles and forwards to several books. He is now in the process of writing three more books.

Tickets are $3 for faculty and staff, $6 for the general public and free to UNCW students and are on sale at the Kenan Auditorium box office. For more information, contact Julie Owen at the Leadership Center at ext. 3797.

Cameron Business School Professor Wins International Award

Richard G. Morrison, professor in marketing and management, helped a startup Bulgarian pharmaceutical distributor, Sanita Trading Ltd., double its sales in two years to $10 million. His efforts earned the Frank Pace Award presented by the International Executive Service Corps (IESC), an organization which recruits retired business executives who volunteer time assisting private enterprises in lesser developed countries and emerging democracies. IESC co-founder David Rockefeller presented the award. The late Frank Pace Jr. was former CEO of General Dynamics and Secretary of the Army. He served as the first president of the IESC founded in 1964 by Rockefeller and Sol Linowitz.

"I was pleased to be a recipient of this award," said Morrison. "It's a good feeling to know that I helped a very good small business become a major influence in the economic setting of Bulgaria."

Morrison's work with the Varna-based company was one of 1,100 IESC projects completed worldwide in 1997. "Expanding global opportunities for North Carolina and the United States is the IESC's goal," said Morrison. "There is a need in developing countries to understand free-market economies. Helping this education process and business growth will benefit not only North Carolina and U.S. exports but the global economy."

In 1995, on his first IESC project with Sanita, Morrison found the company was just getting started. Tatyana Drakulova, a pharmacist, was president, and her husband Dragomir was executive director. The company, started with $12,000 in startup capital, was holding its own, said Morrison, a retired executive at Eli Lilly and Company. Using his knowledge of U.S. Drug Administration procedures and local and international business management, Morrison helped the couple design a business plan. During the next two years, Sanita met nearly every performance and expansion goal set. The company also hired 50 new employees.

Morrison returned to Sanista in 1997 and helped the Drakulovas create a long-term business plan. Morrison, along with his wife Belinda, helped Sanita locate business opportunities and sales with U.S. pharmaceutical companies, such as Eli Lilly and Shering AG. The Morrisons also helped with an expansion proposal presented to the Bulgarian-American Enterprise Fund, which provided $750,000 for a new warehouse distribution center. Morrison and his wife remain in contact with the Drakulovs via e-mail and telephone.

CAMPUS COMMUNIQUE

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement Vol. XXVIII, No. 13 October 8, 1998 Phillip Brown, editor

John Hope Franklin to Deliver Keynote Address

Legacy of 1898 Wilmington Coup Focus of Oct. 23-24 Symposium

UNCW will host scholars from across the country who will explore the truth about a bloody political coup that influenced Wilmington's history until the present day.

The scholars, some of the most noted authorities on race relations in North Carolina and the United States, will present their views at the centennial symposium "The 1898 Wilmington Racial Violence and its Legacy on Wilmington" which is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Oct. 23 and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 24. The 1898 coup led to the death of a number of African-Americans and the exile of several politically unacceptable whites and blacks. Among the exiled was Alex Manly, the editor and publisher of The Daily Record, the city's only black-owned newspaper of the time.

The conference begins Oct. 23 with the unveiling of a highway historical marker recognizing Manly followed by the opening session "The Roots of Conflict" moderated by Chancellor James R. Leutze.

The scheduled presenters during the two-day symposium include Laura F. Edwards, UCLA, who will speak on "Captives of Wilmington: The Riot and Historical Memories of Conflict, 1865-1898." Lisa Adams, prosecutor for the City of Newark and great-granddaughter of a black attorney expelled from the city during the 1898 violence, will reveal her grandfather's diary for the first time when she discusses "The 1898 Exile of William E. Henderson, Attorney at Law, From His Diary." Another scholar, Lee Ann Whites, University of Missouri at Columbia, will discuss "Rebecca Felton and the Wilmington Race Riot," and Raymond Gavins, Duke University, will discuss "Racial Violence and the Building of Black Community Institutions in Wilmington, 1898-1930."

John Hope Franklin, one of America's most recognized and noted African-American scholars and chair of President Bill Clinton's advisory panel on race relations, will deliver the keynote address at 8 p.m. Oct. 23 in the Warwick Center. His talk comes within weeks of delivering the advisory panel's report to President Clinton.

Franklin, a pre-eminent historian and Duke University professor, is the author of the highly acclaimed book From Slavery to Freedom, widely viewed as the definitive account of the African-American experience. His last appearance at UNCW was in 1993 when he was awarded an honorary doctor of letters and addressed the graduating class.

Franklin

A native of Oklahoma, Franklin earned his bachelor's degree from Fisk University and an M.A. and Ph.D. from Harvard University. He has taught at St. Augustine's College and North Carolina College, now known as North Carolina Central University. He has held faculty positions at Fisk University, Howard University, Brooklyn College, the University of Chicago and Duke.

The symposium is cosponsored by North Carolina Division of Archives and History and the University of North Carolina at Wilmington with support from the North Carolina Humanities Council and North Carolina Literary and Historical Association.

Random House Executive to Speak Oct. 21

Peter Gethers, vice president for Random House, will present "The Insider's View of Publishing and Writing for TV and Film" at 8 p.m. Oct. 21 in Cameron Hall auditorium. A reception and booksigning will follow.

As vice president and editor-at-large of Random House Publishing Inc., Gethers has edited and published authors such as Roy Blount, Jr., Nicholas Cage and Jimmy Carter.

Before joining Random House, Gethers worked as a staff writer for the television program Kate and Allie, head writer/producer for Working It Out and cocreator coproducer for Land's End. He served as "script doctor" for the film Frantic starring Harrison Ford and for Say When It Hurts, a future release by Castle Rock Entertainment.

Gethers is also the author of four novels, The Dandy, Getting Blue, The Cat Who Went to Paris and A Cat Abroad. His fifth novel, Gideon, will be published in May 1999.

In 1980, Gethers joined Random House as executive editor for both Random House and Ballantine Books. In 1983, he founded Villard Books for Random House and became its editor-in-chief and publisher. Gethers was also executive editor at Bantam Books, where he started Bantam's hardcover line.

This event, which is free and open to the public, is sponsored by the English Department. For more information, call ext. 3320.

Announcements

Planning Input Still Sought

The Office of Institutional Research continues to seek input in its effort to update the university's strategic plan. For the first time, the office is using a series of web instruments to collect information from the university community. The web address is: http://www.uncwil.edu/local/oir/planning_update/

Faculty and staff are encouraged to review this web site and provide information that will aid the planning council. Institutional research is particularly interested in collecting responses related to views on growth, quality and a number of other key issues pertinent to determining UNCW's future. Survey responses are anonymous, and a summary will be posted on the web after the Oct. 15 deadline. The planning forms were developed in Microsoft Frontpage and tested on both the Netscape and Explorer browsers. A problem encountered on the Explorer version can be bypassed by pressing the OK button. For more information or to report any access problems, contact Bob Fry at fryb.

At the Hawk's Nest

Due to fall break, the faculty and staff dining room will not offer a buffet lunch tomorrow.

Tuesday's menu will include seafood-stuffed tilapia, eggplant and squash casserole, ranch potatoes, assorted vegetables, desserts and beverages. The cost of the lunch is $4.50.

Faculty Front Forum

The "Faculty Front" forum "What You Should Know If Stopped by Police While Driving" will be held at 7 p.m. Oct. 15 in Morton Hall's Bryan Auditorium. Panelists will be William Wolak, Wilmington's assistant city attorney, and Frank Jones, a criminal defense attorney. The moderator will be Deborah Brunson, communication studies. "Faculty Front" forums are sponsored by the Office of Minority Affairs.

Mathematics Placement Test

The mathematics placement test will be given at 8 p.m. Nov. 3 and 10 and 2 p.m. Nov. 13 during preregistration for spring 1999. Students interested in taking the test must schedule an appointment at the Math Lab and review all levels of algebra and trigonometry if placement beyond MAT 111 is desired. The Math Lab can provide algebra and trigonometry review problems.

Faculty/Staff Golf Tournament

The annual faculty/staff golf tournament will be held Wednesday at Olde Point Golf and Country Club. The tournament will begin with a shotgun start at 1 p.m. and consist of four-player teams, captain's choice. The cost is $29 per person, and checks should be made out to Jim Harris, housing and residence life. Qualified participants will have an opportunity to putt for $10,000. Registration forms are available from Jim Harris by calling ext. 3405 or e-mail harrisj. Completed forms must be returned to Harris by Monday.

NCIH Stakeholder's Conference

More than 150 participants are on campus today and tomorrow attending the North Carolina Information Highway Stakeholder's Conference. Keynote speaker Robert Woods from Florida State University will speak on "True Success: A New Philosophy of Excellence," based upon the bestselling book of the same name by Tom Morris at 12:30 p.m. in Wagoner Hall. Woods is administrative director of the Morris Institute for Human Values.

The conference will address issues of technology in today's changing world through sessions that include "Information Technology Services," "New Options in Extended Education," "Building Partnerships Through Technology Outreach" and "The Future of Research and Education Networking in North Carolina." For a complete agenda, contact Hunter Thompson at ext. 3138 or visit the World Wide Web at http://www.uncwil.edu/dpsee/ncih/.

Focus on Faculty and Staff

Gail York-Scimeca, advancement, had her poem "Options" published in Celebration, a book of poetry celebrating UNCW's 50th anniversary.

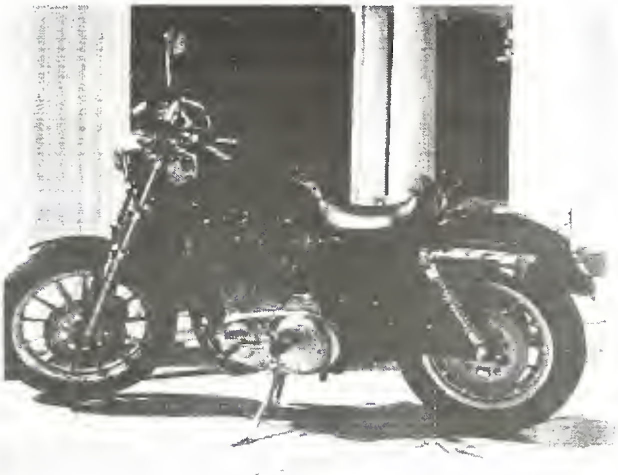
Hog Wild for the Hawks Fund-raising Effort by Alumni Association



Alumni at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington are going "HOG Wild for the Hawks" this fall with help from Cape Fear Harley-Davidson in Fayetteville.

In its efforts to raise money for programs and outreach, the UNCW Alumni Association is raffling off a 1999 Harley-Davidson Sportster XLH 883. The motorcycle was donated by Bob Williams '78, a business administration graduate who now owns Cape Fear Harley-Davidson.

Tickets for the Harley-Davidson are $5 each and are on sale at the following locations: University Union Information Center, Wise Alumni House, 1713 Market Street, or from any alumni board member.

The Harley Sportster will be awarded during the UNCW Seahawks Homecoming Celebration Jan. 30 at the Wilmington Hilton.

For more information contact alumni relations at ext. 2682.

English Professors to Give Reading

"Folie à Deux: A Fiction Reading with Wendy Brenner and Bekki Lee" will be presented at 8 p.m. Oct. 27 in Cameron Hall auditorium followed by a reception and book signing. This event, sponsored by the Buckner Lecture Series and the UNCW English Department, is free and open to the public.

Brenner and Lee, who teach in the English Department's Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing Program, specialize in short fiction. Brenner's 1996 book of short stories, Large Animals in Everyday Life, won the Flannery O'Connor Award.

Brenner's other awards include the Associated Writers Program Intro. Award and the Henfield Foundation's Transatlantic Review Award. Her stories and essays have appeared in Travel & Leisure, The Oxford American Story and The New England Review.

Lee is the 1998 recipient of the James Michener Fellowship. Three of her short stories, "Min," "Shatland" and "The Banks of the Vistula," were published in Atlantic Monthly. The latter story received a highly praised performance on National Public Radio's "Selected Shorts" in 1997. A graduate of the Iowa Writers' Workshop, Lee previously taught at the University of Wisconsin and University of Iowa.

The Buckner Lecture Series, established by Charles F. Green III to bring distinguished guest presenters to UNCW, is named in honor of his friend, Katherine K. Buckner.

For more information, contact the UNCW Buckner Committee at ext. 3320.

"Sacred Spaces" Lectures

"Sacred Spaces: Religion and Architecture" is a series of free lectures discussing the cultural, historical and theological significance of religious architecture from various civilizations.

The individual lectures, which will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Kenan Hall, Room 121, are "Churches of the South: Region and Religion" presented by Peter Williams from Miami University of Ohio, Friday; "The Greek Temple as Religious and Civic Monument" by Mary Ellen Soles from the N.C. Museum of Art, Oct. 22; "The Japanese Temple: Mirror of Change" by Paula Haller, Oct. 29; "Classical and Gothic: Sacred and Profane" by Anthony Janson, art and theatre, Nov. 12; and "Temples of the Maya: Kingship and Cosmology" by Dorie Reents-Budet from the Smithsonian Institution, Nov. 19. A reception will follow each lecture.

This lecture series is sponsored by the Departments of Art and Theatre and Philosophy and Religion with support from the North Carolina Humanities Council, the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and the Office of International Programs.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Health and Aging Class to Feature Swing Music

Mike Perko's Health and Aging class (HEA 325) will host the four-piece band Nik's Orchette Tuesday. The band, led by Nick Ponos, features members who are in their 70's and 80's. Perko said he wanted to invite the group to perform for the class "to break the stereotypes and myths concerning senior citizens. Nick has a passion for life that hasn't diminished with age." In addition, John Bennett's dance class will practice and demonstrate swing dance techniques. The class meets at 11 a.m. and will be held in Hanover Gym for this demonstration. Faculty and staff are invited to attend.

Subjects Needed for Experiment

Participants between the ages of 50 and 65 are needed for a psychology study on the effect of hormones on problem solving. The experiment takes about one hour, and participants will be paid. For more information, contact Becky, a graduate student in psychology, at 254-4686.

Phone Book Corrections

The correct extension for Eileen Sahlin, development director for the College of Arts and Sciences, is 7235. Nanette White, interim coordinator for the Learning Center, should be listed at ext. 4194.

Art Exhibit

"Stephen LeQuire: A One Man Show" is on display through Oct. 31 in Kenan Hall's Claude Howell Gallery. A reception for the artist will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Oct. 22 at the gallery.

Counseling Center Reaccredited

Moscow Ballet Special Seating

A limited number of gold circle and balcony seats are available for the Moscow Ballet's performance of The Nutcracker Nov. 6 at a cost of $50 and $30, respectively. Purchasers of gold circle tickets will be invited to a reception hosted by Chancellor James R. Leutze following the performance. The reception's guests of honor will be members of the ballet company. Proceeds from the sale of these tickets will benefit the Departments of Music and Art and Theatre. To purchase tickets, contact the Kenan Auditorium box office at ext. 3500.

Food and History

Peter Coclanis, chair of the History Department at UNC Chapel Hill, will present the lecture "Food and History" at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 22 in Cameron Hall auditorium. Coclanis, the George and Alice Welsh Professor of History, has published widely in the fields of economic and business history. According to Coclanis, today's historians neglect the vital importance of food and agriculture in history because farmers and farming have become less visible in modern life.

"Midnite Madness"

"Midnite Madness," the annual kickoff of pre-season drills for the Seahawk men's and women's basketball teams will be tomorrow night in Trask Coliseum. Doors open at 10:15 p.m. and admission is free. Popcorn, soft drinks and pizza will be give away while supplies last. In addition, shooting contests will be held for $10,000 and a new automobile.

Flu Shots

Student Health Services will offer flu vaccinations for faculty and staff from 3:30 to 7 p.m. Oct. 20 and 22 and from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Oct. 21 and 23 on the second floor of Westside Hall. The cost is $10. No appointment is necessary, but the supply is limited. For more information, call ext. 3280.

Parking Lot S Closed for Weekend Fund-raiser

A mini grand prix fund-raiser sponsored by the YWCA will be held Oct. 24 in Parking Lot S in front of Wagoner Hall. The parking lot will be closed from noon Oct. 23 until 9 a.m. Oct. 25 to set up and conduct the event. In the event of rain, the race will be held Oct. 25.

Chancellor Will Be Guest Speaker at Forest Hills Elementary School

Chancellor James R. Leutze will be the guest speaker at Forest Hills Elementary School's implementation of its new Global Studies Program at 7 p.m. Oct. 27. As the only coastal North Carolina school participating in the Global Studies Program, Forest Hills Elementary School's mission is to provide a high quality education that prepares students to be productive citizens of a global society.

Newman House Lecture

Tom Barth, political science and certified Myers-Briggs instructor, will present "Understanding Your Personality Type in Order to Better Relate to Others" at 7 p.m. Oct. 21 at the UNCW Newman House Catholic Campus Ministry. Attendees will be able to take the self-scorable test.

Mathematics Lecture

Nigel Kalton from the University of Missouri will lecture on "The Role of Idle Curiosity in Mathematics" at 3:30 p.m. Oct. 22 in Friday Hall, Room 225.

Fulbright Deadlines

Nov. 1 is the deadline to apply for the Fulbright Scholar in Residence Program, Fulbright International Education Administrators Program and the Fulbright German Studies Seminar. The deadline to apply for the 1999-2000 NATO-Euro Atlantic Partnership Council Fellowship Program is Jan. 1. For more information, contact Gary Faulkner at ext. 3795.

1999 Orientation Dates

The following dates have been set for freshman and transfer orientation:

Spring transfers, Jan. 4; spring freshmen, Jan. 4-5; summer and fall transfers, May 18; fall freshmen and parents, June 6-7, 9-10, 13-14, 16-17, 21-22 and Aug. 15-16; summer session II and fall transfers, June 24; and transfers, August 13.

Information about the January orientation will be mailed to students in mid-November with a reservation deadline of Dec. 14.

Direct questions to Karla Carney, director of orientation programs, at ext. 3089 or e-mail carneyk.

1999 Orientation Leaders Needed

The Office of Orientation Programs is seeking undergraduate students to be orientation leaders. Faculty should encourage top undergraduates to apply for membership on the 1999 orientation team.

The deadline for applications is Oct. 30, and applications are available in the University Union, Room 202 or the Union Information Center. Faculty and staff interested in nominating students to be contacted by orientation should call ext. 3089 or e-mail orientation.

The stipend for summer and August orientations is $1,200 plus housing and meals during orientation. Students must live on campus with the orientation participants and cannot be enrolled in Summer Session I classes due to time restraints.

For more information, contact Karla Carney, director of orientation, at ext. 3089 or e-mail carneyk.

Randall Library Book Sale

Randall Library will hold a used book and record sale Nov. 16-17. The sale will feature duplicate book and record titles, and proceeds will be used to purchase new materials. Anyone who would like to donate books and sound or video recordings should contact Beth Roberts, Randall Library Administrative Office. For more information, call ext. 3270.

Nomination Forms

The Honors Program has nomination forms for the 1999 USA Today All-USA College Academic Team. The 20 students selected for the first team will receive a three-day weekend in Washington, D.C., a trophy and a check for $2,500.

Faculty may nominate any full-time undergraduate student. A panel of judges will evaluate the nominees on academic achievement, leadership roles on and off campus, and the student's description of his or her "outstanding original academic or intellectual product." Nominations are due Nov. 30. For more information, contact Diane Levy, honors program, at ext. 4181.

UNCW Cheerleaders Selling BBQ Dinners

The UNCW cheerleaders will sell barbeque plates from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday at First Citizens Bank on South College Road. Dinners will cost $6 and include BBQ, baked beans, cole slaw and hush puppies. Proceeds will be used to fund the cheerleaders' trip to the UCA National Cheerleading Competition in January. Last year the Seahawk cheerleaders placed third in their division. For more information, call 793-0320.

Art Exhibits

"Realms of Color," an exhibit featuring the work of artists Linda Kerlin, Kay Bilosoly and Pat Murphy Carrasco, will be displayed Oct. 20 through Dec. 18 in the Warwick Center Lobby Gallery. A "Meet the Artists" reception will be held at 3 p.m. Oct. 25 in the Warwick Center.

"Three Visions," featuring the work of artists Dolores Gallant, Joanna Hancock and Ruth Hodges, will be displayed Oct. 19 through Dec. 19 in the University Union Living Room. A "Meet the Artists" reception will be held at 3 p.m. Oct. 25 in the University Union. Both exhibitions are sponsored by UNCW Arts in Action.

Faculty Front Forum

The "Faculty Front" forum "What You Should Know If Stopped by Police While Driving" will be held at 7 p.m. tonight in Morton Hall's Bryan Auditorium. Panelists will be William Wolak, Wilmington's assistant city attorney, and Frank Jones, a criminal defense attorney. The moderator will be Deborah Brunson, communication studies. "Faculty Front" forums are sponsored by the Office of Minority Affairs.

The Safety Department is offering fire extinguisher training at 9 a.m. Oct. 20 and 2 p.m. Oct. 27 and Nov. 5. The cost is $5. For more information, call ext. 4287.

Earth Sciences Seminar

Patricia Kelley, chair of the Department of Earth Sciences, will present "The Arms Race from a Snail's Perspective: Evolution of the Naticid Gastropod Predator-Prey System" at 2 p.m. Friday in DeLoach Hall, Room 114.

The Architecture of Art

"The Architecture of Art: Presentation of the Design for Southeastern North Carolina's New Art Museum" will air at 8 p.m. Oct. 20 and 27 on UNCW-TV, Time Warner cable channel 5.

The hour-long documentary features internationally-known architect Charles Gwathmey's discussion of the design for St. John's Museum of Art's new facility. Gwathmey also discusses his previous art museum projects such as the renovation and addition to the Guggenheim Museum in New York. The documentary also features Chris Fonvielle, history, discussing the Battle of Forks Road, which took place following the fall of Ft. Fisher on what is now the location for the new museum. St. John's Museum of Art plans to preserve and commemorate several of the last remaining Confederate defensive mounds on the site.

William Overman, psychology, gave an invited presentation about his research on the development of children's cognition to a joint meeting of the James F. McDonnell Foundation and the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation Research Network on Psychopathology and Development.

Richard D. Dixon, sociology and anthropology, presented "Bridging the Distance in Distance Learning Versions of Introductory Sociology and Social Demography" at the IN-TELE (Internet-based Teaching and Learning) Conference workshop "Learning With Hypermedia" held at the Universite Louis Pasteur, Strasbourg, France.

Nathaniel Samuel Murrell, philosophy and religion, was appointed external examiner for the Master of Arts in Religion at the University of West Indies, Cave Hill campus, Barbados. In this largely honorary position, Murrell will be the second reader on final examination papers, arbitrator for grade disputes (British system) and consultant on matters related to the university's master's degree in religion.

John Nasuti, social work, had the paper "Risk Assessment in Child Protective Services: Challenges in Measuring Child Well-Being" published in the Journal of Family Social Work. He also authored the chapter "Role Perceptions of Kinship and Other Foster Parents in Family Foster Care" in the book Kinship Foster Care: Policy, Practice, and Research (Oxford Press).

Darrell Irwin, criminal justice, will have his article "The Straight Edge Subculture: Examining the Youths' Drug-Free Way" published in the Journal of Drug Issues.

Sally Sullivan, English, won a $1,300 award for a one-month writer in residence at the Vermont Studio Center based upon a portfolio of her poetry.

Jack Baker, Randy Hanson, and James Smith, accountancy and business law, had their article "Are Accountants Practicing Law?" published in National Public Accountant.

The 1898 Wilmington Racial Violence and its Legacy on Wilmington

UNCW will host scholars from across the country who will explore the truth about a bloody political coup that influenced Wilmington's history until the present day.

The scholars, some of the most noted authorities on race relations in North Carolina and the United States, will present their views at the centennial symposium "The 1898 Wilmington Racial Violence and its Legacy on Wilmington" which is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Oct. 23 and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 24 in the Warwick Center. The 1898 coup led to the death of a number of African-Americans and the exile of several politically unacceptable whites and blacks. Among the exiled was Alex Manly, the editor and publisher of The Daily Record, the city's only black-owned newspaper of the time.

John Hope Franklin, one of America's most recognized and noted African-American scholars and chair of President Bill Clinton's advisory panel on race relations, will deliver the keynote address at 8 p.m. Oct. 23 in the Warwick Center. His talk comes within weeks of delivering the advisory panel's report to President Clinton.

Franklin, a pre-eminent historian and Duke University professor, is the author of the highly acclaimed book From Slavery to Freedom, widely viewed as the definitive account of the African-American experience.

A native of Oklahoma, Franklin earned his bachelor's degree from Fisk University and an M.A. and Ph.D. from Harvard University. He has taught at St. Augustine's College and North Carolina College, now known as North Carolina Central University. He has held faculty positions at Fisk University, Howard University, Brooklyn College, the University of Chicago and Duke.

The symposium is cosponsored by North Carolina Division of Archives and History and the University of North Carolina at Wilmington with support from the North Carolina Humanities Council and North Carolina Literary and Historical Association.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Former Hostage Negotiator Terry Waite to Speak Monday

Terry Waite, former hostage negotiator who was himself taken captive in Beirut for 1,760 days, will present the lecture "Resolving Conflict: The Test of Humanity" at 7 p.m. Monday in Kenan Auditorium. This lecture is a part of the Leadership Lecture Series sponsored by the chancellor's office and the Leadership Center.

Born in the county of Cheshire, England, Waite received his formal education in London. Upon college graduation, he was appointed as education advisor to the Anglican Bishop of Bristol, England. In 1969, he and his family moved to Uganda where he escaped death several times while witnessing the Amin coup. During this time, he established the Southern Sudan Project as well as other aid and development programs. He moved to Rome, Italy, in 1972 to serve as an international consultant to a Roman Catholic medical order traveling worldwide to conduct programs based on various development issues. After eight years of service in Rome, Waite was recruited by the Archbishop of Canterbury to join his private staff at Lambeth Palace in London.

In the 1980's Waite received international attention for his successful negotiations that led to release of hostages from Iran and British hostages held in Libya. While negotiating the release of Western hostages in Lebanon, Waite was taken hostage in January 1987 and held captive for 1,760 days.

After his release in September 1991, Waite was elected a Fellow Commoner at Trinity Hall Cambridge, England, where he wrote Taken on Trust, an account of his time in Beirut. He also has published a second book Footfalls in Memory, a collection of excerpts from books, poems and prayers that were in his thoughts during his captivity. Published in England in 1995, Footfalls in Memory debuted in the U.S. in the fall of 1997. Waite has also been featured in many journals and periodicals including Reader's Digest and The Kipling Journal as well as contributing articles and forwards to several books. He is now in the process of writing three more books.

Tickets are $3 for faculty and staff, $6 for the general public and free to UNCW students and are on sale at the Kenan Auditorium box office. For more information, contact Julie Owen at the Leadership Center at ext. 3797.

Georgia Sea Island Singers Performing Saturday

The Georgia Sea Island Singers will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday in Kenan Auditorium. Using Gullah, the Creole language of the American Sea Islands, this musical couple tells stories and sings songs that paint a captivating history of the black culture of these coastal islands. General admission tickets are $10, $5 for faculty and staff and are available from the Kenan Auditorium box office and the University Union information center. The concert is sponsored by the Tapestry Theatre Company, UNCW Arts in Action Series and Kathleen and Michael Glancy.

Random House Executive to Speak Wednesday

Peter Gethers will present "The Insider's View of Publishing and Writing for TV and Film" at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Cameron Hall auditorium. A reception and booksigning will follow.

As vice president and editor-at-large of Random House Publishing Inc., Gethers has edited and published authors such as Roy Blount, Jr., Nicholas Cage and Jimmy Carter.

Before joining Random House, Gethers worked as a staff writer for the television program Kate and Allie, head writer/producer for Working It Out and cocreator coproducer for Land's End. He served as "script doctor" for the film Frantic starring Harrison Ford and for Say When It Hurts, a future release by Castle Rock Entertainment.

Gethers is also the author of four novels, The Dandy, Getting Blue, The Cat Who Went to Paris and A Cat Abroad. His fifth novel, Gideon, will be published in May 1999.

This event, which is free and open to the public, is sponsored by the English Department. For more information, call ext. 3320.

FACULTY/STAFF PROFILE

Jim McGowan: We Must Constantly Strive to Begin Anew!

by Linda Grattafiori

Recipient of the 1998 Board of Trustees Teaching Excellence Award plus one of the three Distinguished Teaching Professorship awards presented during convocation, Jim McGowan has asked himself what these rewards mean from a symbolic point of view.

"I've decided they're a call for commitment to take these last years of my university career and pour them as generously as possible into teaching philosophy," McGowan said. "It would be fantastic if we had a model from a group of professors in their last decade of teaching who really turned themselves completely toward the classroom and gave it everything they've got!"

Joe Wilson, chair of the Department of Philosophy and Religion, is grateful that McGowan has been recognized.

"Jim has such excellent rapport with the students," Wilson said, "that we feel he should receive the award every year."

The feeling is mutual.

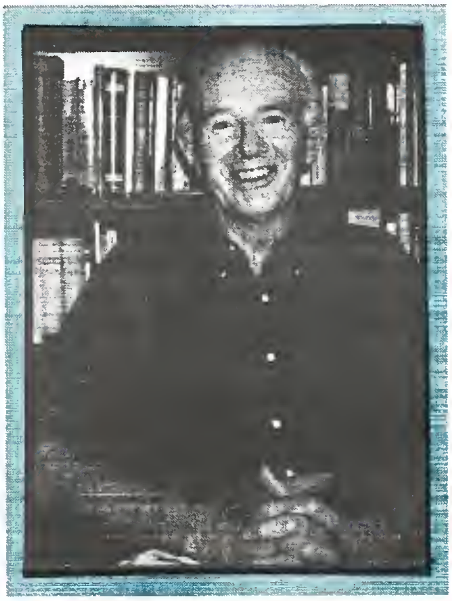
"Everybody in the Philosophy Department loves to teach. It's a very friendly group of people," McGowan said. "We have a marvelous faculty - an unbelievably high number of people who want to teach well. Teaching is easy when you work in this kind of atmosphere. And our administration is deeply, deeply committed to supporting that teaching spirit of excellence."

McGowan began his career in the early 1960s at "one of the most excellent schools of philosophy," the University of Louvain in Belgium. He received his doctorate in medieval philosophy at this center famous for its wealth of medieval manuscripts.

During a summer session in Poitiers, France, he met his wife Odile, who has a degree in the history of medieval architecture.

Known for his scholarship in existentialism, McGowan still gets a thrill from teaching introduction to philosophy.

"I really love that! I like to get them coming in the door," McGowan said. "I believe the introductory course is the most important course taught in any field. It gives me an opportunity to welcome students into my world and show them what I'm doing with my life from a philosophical point of view."



That point of view takes us back to existentialism.

Emerging from the intellectual rubble of two world wars, the existentialist philosophers were the first to demand that we constantly begin anew by questioning the meaning of existence.

"Anyone who's starting out with a career and wants to keep it alive for 30 years - wants to have a significant role in the intellectual process of the university - must have the spirit of beginning anew," McGowan said. "The students, by their simple presence, invite the professor not to be deceived by 'x' amount of knowing, but rather to go back to zero. This theme of beginning anew never allows us in philosophy to assume that we have the answers."

To those who demand practical answers, demand results and awards, McGowan offers this model of service for reflection.

"Take whatever talents you have and place them at the disposal of others without calling for anything in return," he said. "I challenge students to get the concept of reward out of their heads."

McGowan sites two models for handling life. The most common model is that we stay in tension with one another, have fears and feel that's what it means to be human. In the alternative model, we're trying to begin anew without looking at another person with a set of expectations.

"If we're always worried about being rewarded for what we do," McGowan said, "it blocks our ability to see and grow.

"If a student grows well in a philosophy formation," McGowan said, "He or she will figure out how to commit themselves to whatever they're doing - the thinking skills, logical skills, questioning skills - will be of tremendous value in any field combined with spin-offs of philosophy such as writing."

The medieval world offered laughter as the uniquely human capacity to purify tensions from our minds. "Laughing at the tensions that block our abilities to begin anew is an incredibly freeing process. As I move through my day, I try to stay tuned into students as fully as possible," said McGowan. "Our task is to be the humble beginner. We must make a run for this with our whole lives for clearing out all biases, assumptions and prejudgements. To the degree we can tune these out, we can welcome each other into our lives with less fear."

Linda Grattafiori is a freelance writer who lives in Wilmington. She has written for the Wilmington Morning Star and Our State magazine.

Weyerhaeuser Foundation Gives $25,000 for Neuse River Documentary

Rodger Anger, vice president/mill manager of Weyerhaeuser's New Bern pulp mill and chair of the company's external affairs council, presented to Chancellor James R. Leutze a check for $25,000 at a ceremony Oct. 16 at Union Point Park in downtown New Bern.

With the contribution from the Weyerhaesuer Company Foundation, Weyerhaeuser has signed on as a major sponsor of the UNCW documentary about the Neuse River currently under production titled "River of Peace: Reclaiming the Neuse." Filming done in the New Bern area in June included several interviews shot at Union Point. The documentary is expected to air in spring 1999 on UNC-TV.

"The Weyerhaeuser Foundation is pleased to support 'River of Peace' because we believe it will provide the people of North Carolina with compelling information about the Neuse River," said Anger. "Weyerhaeuser shares this wonderful resource and feels strongly that we should acknowledge the historical significance of the Neuse and publicly discuss the issues that confront the river."

College Students and Alcohol, Drugs and Sex

David Hunnicutt, president of the Wellness Councils of America (WELCOA), will lecture on the health behaviors of college students focusing on alcohol, drugs and sex at 7 p.m. Nov. 2 in Kenan Auditorium.

"If there ever was an individual who has his finger on the pulse of the health of Americans, it is Dr. Hunnicutt," said Mike Perko, assistant professor in the HPER Department and acting health coordinator. "I can honestly say I have never seen a presenter on health topics make an audience not only sit up and listen, but literally ask for more."

The Wellness Councils of America is a national membership organization whose network encompasses 14 locally-affiliated Wellness Councils across the United States accommodating more than 3,200 corporate members and nearly 2.5 million employees. Hunnicutt earned his Ph.D. from the University of New Mexico and is on the faculty at the University of Nebraska serving in the Department of Health and Human Performance. While at the University of Nebraska, Hunnicutt developed an alcohol education program which is in high demand, prompting him to take a leave of absence from the university to devote more time to alcohol education.

This free public event is part of the Healthy People Lecture Series, which brings national speakers to campus to address current and future health issues facing Americans. It is sponsored by the Health, Physical Education, and Recreation Department and the office of the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. For more information, contact Mike Perko at ext. 3258 or e-mail perkom.

UNCW First with On-line Application and Payment

UNCW is taking the lead as the first university in the UNC system to offer a full-function electronic on-line application via the World Wide Web at http://www.uncwil.edu/admissions/.

"UNCW is the first campus in the system to offer prospective students the chance to complete an electronic application and pay the application fee via the Internet," said Jim Walters, director of admissions. Payment via the World Wide Web requires a credit card; however, on-line applicants have the option to pay the fee using a check or money. In order to maintain the privacy of students' personal and financial information, the software uses four levels of security, including data encryption, said Eddy Cavenaugh, a computer analyst.

While the capability to offer Internet payment began last week, Liz Hosier, student information manager

DIVISION OF Student Affairs

Newsbreak – Fall 1998 "Creating Experiences for Life" http://www.uncwil.edu/stuaff/divsa

The purpose of this publication is to introduce university faculty and staff to the services and programs provided by the Division of Student Affairs. We have identified those individuals responsible for major departments within the division. The division continues to work toward the development of the whole student body while supporting the overall mission of the university. We look forward to working with you in this effort.

Vision

The Division of Student Affairs intentionally creates a proud community to promote students' well-being, personal development, and commitment to the common good through transforming experiences. Staff and students are passionate about enriching campus life. Our community actively and reflectively engages in healthy interactions that respect the diversity of individuals and groups. We use emerging developmental theories, resources, and technology to thoroughly understand our students and their cultures. The Division of Student Affairs is a valued and integral partner in the academic process. We are a unique educational community fostering creativity and excellence.

Mission

The Division of Student Affairs at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington strives to cultivate a campus community where students can achieve success and become responsible citizens. Our purpose is to support the university's mission by providing services and programs, encouraging student learning in and out of the classroom, and developing a diverse community which is educationally purposeful, open, just, disciplined, caring, and celebrative.

Vice Chancellor

Patricia L.Leonard, M.S.
Alderman Hall, Room 101 • 962-3117

The vice chancellor for student affairs is a spokesperson for students services, student needs, and the quality of life and education outside the classroom. The office is also responsible for policy development, long-range planning, budget, personnel, and coordination of the departments which together comprise the Division of Student Affairs.

Dean of Students

Terrence M. Curran, Ed.D
Alderman Hall, Room 101 • 962-7250
Office of the Dean of Students
University Union, Room 209 • 962-3119

The Office of the Dean of Students serves as the primary advocate for students in addressing needs, issues, and concerns. The central goal is to serve as a resource and referral office for all faculty, staff, and students. The dean of students is responsible for representing the student perspective to the university community. The Office of the Dean of Students provides consultation, initiates new program development, and assists the vice chancellor for student affairs with special projects. Specifically, the Office of the Dean of Students oversees off-campus student services; Greek affairs; non-traditional student services; the university student judicial system, including violations of the Academic Honor Code; Student Media Board; educational programs and services on sexual assault and sexual harassment awareness and prevention; and human relations. The Office of the Dean of Students serves as the liaison to the Council of Ministries; coordinates with University Police all crisis intervention and emergency response strategies; assists the affirmative action officer in cases of discriminatory conduct (i.e. sexual harassment); and publishes the Student Handbook/Code of Student Life.

The dean also oversees the areas of Orientation, University Union and Warwick Center, and the Activities & Leadership Center.

The Departments

Campus Recreation

Hanover Gym, Room 202
962–3261

The Office of Campus Recreation organizes and administers a variety of recreational services that are either structured or self–directed, and enhance the overall wellness of the university community. The primary goal of the program is to provide quality recreational experiences within the university environment and direct these toward the individual's physical, cognitive, and social life thus enhancing the educational experience. This goal is accomplished by offering a variety of recreational activities, conducting educational workshops, and providing professional training.

Programs available through the Campus Recreation office include:

- Heart and Sole Fitness
  Aerobics
  Fitness Center
  Recreational Swim
- Intramurals
- Discover Outdoor Programs
  Adventure Trips
  Challenge "Ropes" Course
  Resource Center & Rentals
- Special Events
- Club Sports

University Union

Carolyn Farley, M.S., director
University Union, Room 202 • 962–3285

The University Union and Activities & Leadership Center staff is committed to providing facilities and programs designed to enhance student development. The University Union is a 53,000–square–foot facility that houses student organizations, student government, conference rooms, lounges, the University Information Center, the Hawk's Nest, the Union Station coffee bar, assorted student service offices, and art exhibits. The Warwick Center is a 43,000–square foot facility which houses the post office, game room, Discover Outdoor Center, Center Stage, Ballroom, and automatic teller machines. The union staff provides equipment and personnel with technical expertise to produce a wide variety of programs. Students are actively engaged in the planning and operation of both the University Union and Warwick Center.

The Activities & Leadership Center is the community's connection to entertainment, involvement, leadership, and service. The staff provides support and advising to over 125 student organizations, the Association for Campus Entertainment, UNCW Volunteers, the Student Government Association, and Arts in Action. The Activities & Leadership Center staff help students become involved in campus life, and create opportunities for students to develop leadership skills, as well as a positive attitude toward lifelong learning.

Career Services

Thom Rakes, M.Ed., director
University Union, Room 106

The central purpose of Career Services is to help students prepare for academic and career success. Freshmen and sophomores are assisted with career assessment, values clarification, and occupational data to help them make informed choices of academic majors. Students also are provided opportunities for experiential learning and discovering the relationship of skills acquired to the broader work world. Career Services helps prepare graduating seniors to be successful candidates by helping them translate their academic and co–curricular experiences into successful job campaigns or graduate school applications.

Specific services include: a computerized career exploration program, Choices; the Self–Directed Search, a career interest inventory; UNCW Career Registration, an electronic registration second resumé program for all students; internship resources; workshops on a wide range of topics from choosing an academic major to job search strategies; a career resource library; job listings that include part–time jobs, Work Study employment, internships, summer jobs and full–time employment opportunities; on–campus recruiting; an annual Career Day and Graduate School Day; and a home page on the World Wide Web with a directory of helpful career and employment sites.

Orientation Programs

Karla Carney, M.S., director
University Union,
Room 202 • 962–3089

The UNCW new student orientation program provides a comprehensive program which assists new students in their transition to the institution. Specifically, the program exposes new students to UNCW educational opportunities, orients new students into the academic and co–curricular life of the institution, and assists parents of new students in their understanding of the UNCW environment and services. The director also serves as an instructor for the Freshman Seminar and an advisor to the Seahawk Parent Association, including Family Weekend responsibilities.

Housing and Residence Life

William L. McCartney, M.A., director
Residence Life Activity Center • 962-3241

The Office of Housing and Residence Life is located directly east of Schwartz Hall. This office is responsible for the overall administration and supervision of all campus-owned housing: seven residence halls, thirteen apartment buildings, and seven suite-style buildings housing over 2,100 students. The purpose of Housing and Residence Life goes beyond providing a clean, safe, and well-maintained living environment; it also includes fostering an atmosphere that is conducive to each resident student's personal growth and academic success. Co-curricular learning opportunities are provided through educational, cultural, and social programs; leadership positions in self-governance; peer advising; and various volunteer and student employment positions. Housing and Residence Life administers the National Student Exchange program, which allows UNCW students to attend any of 150 colleges and universities in the United States on a semester or full-year exchange.

Student Health Center

Westside Hall, Second Floor • 962-3280

The Student Health Center provides confidential personal health services to the students of the university community. These services are designed to promote and maintain health and wellness, and include a preventive, diagnostic, therapeutic, and rehabilitative focus. Services are provided with attention to quality, access, satisfaction, and cost. The staff is sensitive to the special needs of college students and strives at all times to provide the best possible treatment and care.

Student Life Studies

Li-Shing Wang, M.A., director
Alderman Hall, Room 101 • 962-3735

The Office of Student Life Studies conducts student affairs research as well as departmental and program evaluations for the purpose of better meeting the needs of students and to ensure effective resource management. Both programs and students are periodically assessed to determine the degree to which programs and services are necessary and successful in terms of encouraging student growth and development. Assessment data are used to make decisions about the continuation, modification, or termination of programs and/or services.

Student Development Services

F. James Dragna, Ph.D., executive director
Westside Hall, Second Floor • 962-3280

The Counseling Center provides free, confidential counseling to students experiencing social and emotional problems as well as concerns with self-acceptance, relationships, depression, anxiety, sexuality, and family. In addition, students may be concerned about substance abuse, eating disorders, or sexual abuse/assault. Specially trained profesionals can consult, assess, intervene, and support recovery for these issues.

CROSSROADS-Substance Abuse Prevention and Education Program has extensive and up-to-date resource materials available to students about alcohol, tobacco, and other drugs and their effects, as well as information about how to help themselves or someone else who may have a problem with substance abuse. CROSSROADS provides educational sessions to faculty and staff, students, clubs, organizations, and residence life groups conducted by program staff and peer educators.

Disability Services is an informational source and link between the student and the university while encouraging self-advocacy. Since each student has a unique set of special needs, Disability Services works with the student, academic advising, tutors, adminsitration, and faculty to find ways to enable the student to master the content of his or her course.

The National Testing Program coordinates the administration of national certification and admissions exams for such programs as TOEFL, GMAT, GRE, PRAXIS, and many others. Both computerized and paper-based tests are offered to the university community.

The UNCW Pharmacy is staffed by a licensed pharmacist and provides direct service for prescriptions as well as non-prescription items including crutches. Counseling is provided for all new prescriptions including screening for drug interactions. (See Student Health Center.)

The Student Health Center provides confidential quality health care on an outpatient basis to UNCW students. Services include diagnosis and treatment of general and acute medical problems and referrals for specialized care. (See Student Health Center.)

The Wellness Services provides personal consultations on specific health issues or concerns and strives to create a campus environment that affirms and expands the awareness, understanding, and commitment of the wellness philosophy.

Alumni Association Seeks 1999 Award Nominees

The UNCW Alumni Association sponsors two awards which are presented during homecoming festivities. The Alumnus/Alumna of the Year Award is open to all who attended and/or graduated from Wilmington College or UNCW. The Distinguished Citizen Award is open to anyone for notable service to the university and the community.

Nominations for 1999 awards can be made by writing a letter of recommendation to the UNCW Alumni Association Board of Directors. Specify the award category and describe why you think the nominee merits the award. Include the nominee's name, address, daytime telephone number and work place. The deadline is Dec. 1.

Letters should be mailed to Patricia Corcoran, alumni relations director, Wise Alumni House, 1713 Market Street, Wilmington, N.C. 28403. Additional information can be obtained by calling the alumni office at ext. 2682.

The winners will be recognized at a formal awards dinner Jan. 29 in the Warwick Center Ballroom.

UNCW First with On-line Application and Payment

in the Office of Management and Information Support, said the university has offered on-line applications using Plus2000 for Students since September.

Additional software enhancements to the university's web site allow enrolled students access to class schedules and the capability to view grades and financial aid information via the Internet. The university's goal is to enable students to register for classes using Plus2000 for Students, said Hosier. A similar software package, Web for Faculty/Advisor Faculty, is also on-line and will allow academic advisors to view students' information, said Hosier.

The two products which combine to form SEAWEB are from SCT Education Systems and complement the university's existing Student Information System, a computerized database that maintains student records.

Currently, students register via telephone using SEALINE. Advantages to using the World Wide Web for registration over telephone registration include the ability to print schedules and view information. SEAWEB will not replace SEALINE, but it will offer students another method for accessing their information, said Hosier.

"SEAWEB will be a valuable visual aid for students," said Ron Whittaker, registrar. "Students will have their academic careers at their fingertips. Using personal access codes to insure privacy, students can access their information from any computer with the World Wide Web."

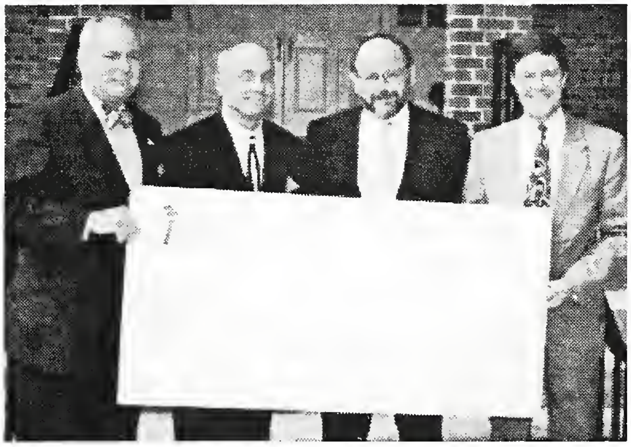
Insurance Agents Give $50,000 to UNCW

Independent Insurance Agents of North Carolina (IIANC) – a professional trade association representing over 850 independent insurance agencies across North Carolina – presented a scholarship endowment check to UNCW Chancellor James R. Leutze in the amount of $50,000. Also attending the presentation were several local independent agents.



Dean Howard Rockness, second from right, along with IIANC representatives and $50,000 check.

"In the last eight years, UNCW's Cameron School of Business has grown to boast a proud 1,450 undergraduates, of which 80 percent work while attending school. With this scholarship endowment, some of our students will be able to cut back on their hours of work and concentrate more on their studies," said Howard Rockness, dean of the Cameron School of Business. "Not only does this gift represent support for our business program, but it raises the visibility of risk management and insurance as a career opportunity."

Donald C. Evans, member of the board of directors of IIANC and vice president and office manager of Coastal Insurance Agency in Shallotte, presented the scholarship endowment check. "On behalf of our board of directors, members and staff, we are pleased to be able to provide this lasting endowment to the University of North Carolina at Wilmington which contributes so greatly to our state through its support and development of higher education."

The funds for the endowment were made possible through the North Carolina Association of Insurance Agents (NCAIA), a wholly owned subsidiary of IIANC. The subsidiary company, utilizing the expertise of member independent agents, helps identify risks and place insurance coverage to protect assets of the state of North Carolina.

At the end of each year, NCAIA, a nonprofit corporation, is charged with dispersing its profits to benefit the people of North Carolina. During the past 20 years, NCAIA has contributed approximately $3 million to benefit North Carolina citizens. Grants are made in four areas: fire and safety projects, education, scholarships and arts endowments.

CROSSROADS Program Receives $40,000 Grant

Due to the increasing use of alcohol and other drugs by students of younger ages, UNCW has developed the "CROSSROADS Co-op: Peer Education Program" for substance abuse prevention and education in cooperation with New Hanover High School.

The proposed pilot program at New Hanover High School will be modeled on UNCW's CROSSROADS Program, which is a peer-based program that involves university students serving as role models and substance abuse educators. Suzanne "Sam" Shover, substance abuse and prevention coordinator, said university volunteers will recruit and educate students at New Hanover High Schools to become peer educators.

"Peers listen to peers," said Shover. "Sometimes, being able to communicate from the same point of view makes it easier to assist someone with a drug or alcohol problem. I believe this initiative will be a valuable, complementary program to supplement the current substance abuse prevention activities already occurring at NHHS."

The "CROSSROADS Co-op: Peer Education Program" resulted from a grant proposal by Shover. It is being funded by a $40,000 endowment from the Cape Fear Memorial Foundation which is being matched by the Division for Student Affairs.

"I feel very privileged and excited to have received this grant. With alcohol and other drug use beginning at younger ages, we have to address the problem earlier in the educational process to have an impact on students' decisions and behaviors," said Shover, adding she envisioned the CROSSROADS program being implemented at other county high schools as well as middle and elementary schools.

WHO HIRES LIBERAL ARTS GRADS?

If your major falls into the liberal arts category, you're probably used to people say rude things to you like. "What are you going to do with a degree in that?"– as if by majoring in history or English or some other liberal arts discipline you've committed a career faux pas from which you'll never recover.

The truth is, millions of liberal arts grads are leading productive lives. They are gainfully employed. They own cars and homes. They can afford to take vacations, buy clothes, eat out.

What is also true is that liberal arts students often have a tougher time articulating their career goals than those studying something that corresponds pretty readily to a specific career, such as accounting or nursing. Consequently, liberal arts students often have trouble answering questions about how they're going to use their degree.

So who hires liberal arts grads? The answer is, all types of employers. On the right are listed the top five employers who made the most job offers to selected liberal arts disciplines.

Communications: Top employers– merchandising, communication services, advertising, consulting services, and transportation. Top jobs– sales, management trainee, customer service, and public relations.

History: Top employers– education, merchandising, consulting, hospitality, legal services. Top jobs– teaching, sales management trainee, consultant, and customer service.

English: Top employers– education, publishing, merchandising, communication services, consulting services. Top jobs– teaching, writing/editing, management trainee, sales, and customer service.

Political Science: Top employers– consulting services, merchandising, local/state government, finance, federal government. Top jobs– management trainee, sales, consulting, and financial/treasury analysis.

Psychology: Top employers– education, social services, health services, merchandising, insurance, other services. Top jobs– sales, management trainee, counseling, social work, and customer service.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Lecture Features Ecuadorian Anthropologist

Juan Garcia Salazar, Ecuadorian anthropologist and historian, will give a talk on the history of the African presence in his native province of Esmeraldas at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 9 in Cameron Hall, Room 105. Salazar will also discuss his efforts to establish an international organization of Afro-Latin communities in the coastal regions of Ecuador and Colombia. This free lecture is sponsored by the College of Arts and Sciences, the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures, the Office of Minority Affairs, the Office of International Programs and the Association for Campus Entertainment Cultural Arts Committee.

Fire Extinguisher Training

The Safety Department is offering fire extinguisher training at 2 p.m. Nov. 5. The cost is $5. For more information, call ext. 4287.

Students and Alcohol, Drugs and Sex

Are On-line Courses Better?

"Are On-line Courses Better?," a discussion by the 1998 Web course development team will be held at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 5 in the new Science Building, Room 134. The event, sponsored by the Center for Teaching Excellence and the Technology College, is an opportunity for those interested to provide input on the use of the World Wide Web to teach courses. Refreshments will be served following the discussion. For more information, contact the CTE at ext. 3034.

Nomination Forms

The Honors Program has nomination forms for the 1999 USA Today All-USA College Academic Team. The 20 students selected for the first team will receive a three-day weekend in Washington, D.C., trophy and a check for $2,500.

Faculty may nominate any full-time undergraduate student. A panel of judges will evaluate the nominees on academic achievement, leadership roles on and off campus, and the student's description of his or her "outstanding original academic or intellectual product."

Nominations are due by Nov. 30. For more information, contact Diane Levy, honors program, at ext. 4181.

Carolina History Through Music

"A History of the Carolinas Through Music" featuring singers and guitarists John Golden, Rob Nathanson and John Curry, will be held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in King Hall auditorium. The program is sponsored by the History Department.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Sally Sullivan, English, published the essay "Irony and Allegory in I Am One of You Forever (by Fred Chappell): How Fantasy and the Ideal Become the Real" in the North Carolina Literary Review. In addition, Sullivan's interview with Chappell "Citizens Who Observe: A Conversation with Fred Chappell" is in the same issue.

Dianne Matthews, student development services, attended the Professional Affiliates in College Testing (PACT) in Atlanta, Ga. She was one of 15 people nationwide invited to a special pre-PACT conference discussing the future of computer-based testing with educational testing services and Sylvan prometric, providers of national admissions and certification exams.

Andrew Shepard, CMSR/NURC, participated in submersible pilot training for the Sustainable Seas Expeditions (www.nationalgeographic.com/seas), headed by Sylvia Earle, National Geographic's explorer-in-residence. For the next five years, the DeepWorker research subs will be used to explore and monitor the health of the nation's national marine sanctuaries. Shepard will assist in the evaluation of these new subs for scientific research and help plan for the missions.

Lee Schweninger, English, had his book The Writings of Celia Parker Woolley, Literary Activist published by Edwin Mellen Press. Woolley was a turn-of-the-century novelist, women's rights activist and Unitarian minister. Research for the book was funded in part by the UNCW Faculty Research and Development Fund and by an NEH Travel to Collections Award.

Khoon Koh, HPER, presented the paper "Constraints to Entrepreneurship in the Tourism Industry: The Case of African-Americans in Wilmington, N.C." at the annual conference of the Southeastern Council of Hospitality, Restaurant and Institutional Education held in Hilton Head Island, S.C.

Michael Mallin and James Merritt, CMSR, received $65,000 from the City of Wilmington for their project "Stormwater Runoff and Water Quality of Wilmington Watersheds." In addition, they received $10,000 from the Northeast New Hanover Conservancy for "An Environmental Analysis of Futch and Howe Creeks" and $20,000 for "Water Quality Analysis of New Hanover Tidal Creeks."

Ron Johnson, Randall Library computing systems, presented a program on the Innopac Library System's Web Access Management module at the Carolina Innovative Users Group meeting at Winthrop University, Rock Hill, S.C. This software performs patron verification of users who are off campus, and, if validated, allows students and employees to connect to electronic reserves and remote databases, such as Lexis-Nexis, as if they were on campus. Ruth Roazen, cataloging services, presented a program on cataloging Internet resources using the Innopac Library System in a library consortium environment. Cataloging Internet resources allows library users to access Web sites, books, videos and other library materials all from one author, title, subject, or keyword search in the library catalog. Also attending the conference were Joyce Johnson, circulation; Sophie Williams, interlibrary loans; Carolyn Andrews, reserves; Tammie Haines, acquisitions; Annie Wu, cataloger; Debbie Packer, cataloging; and Lucille Mills, serials.

Ethics Policy: Conflict of Interest

Administrative Procedure MSC 1.50 is designed to assist employees in avoiding situations where conflict of interest may arise. Conflict of interest situations could arise, for example, whenever:

- university resources are utilized for personal gain.
- an employee utilizes the influence of his or her position within the university to profit personally.
- an employee knowingly fails to uphold the trust of the state or agency by which he or she is employed.

This procedure also identifies specific areas where conflict of interest situations would more likely occur. Examples include:

- vendor relationships, secondary and dual employment, use of university resources (supplies, equipment, and facilities), contractual arrangements, political activities, management of contracts and grants or management and use of financial resources.

Faculty employees may find additional guidance in the Faculty Handbook and in guidelines provided by UNC General Administration.

SPA Salary Increases and Bonuses

October 30 paychecks for SPA employees who were in permanent status on June 30 will reflect cost of living and career growth adjustments and performance bonuses. The cost of living and career growth adjustments are retroactive to July 1. The performance bonus is a one-time bonus based on June 30 annual salary. SPA employees with a performance rating of "below good" and above will receive a 1 percent cost of living adjustment. SPA employees whose last performance rating was "good" or better will also receive a 2 percent career growth adjustment. SPA employees receiving a "very good" or "outstanding" performance evaluation will receive a one-time 1 percent performance bonus based on June salary.

EPA Salary Increases and Bonuses

October 30 paychecks for permanent EPA employees will reflect salary increases retroactive to July 1 and a one-time bonus based on June 30 salary. These increases and bonuses have been approved by the deans and the provost.

Travel Expo

The purchasing office is sponsoring its annual Travel Expo at 10 a.m. Nov. 6 in the University Union, Room 100. Representative from Allen Travel and In Travel will be in attendance as well as local hotel and car rental agencies representatives. Prizes will be awarded, including the grand prize of two USAirways tickets.

CAMPUS COMMUNIQUE

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement | Vol. XXVIII, No. 17 November 5, 1998 | Phillip Brown, editor

UNCW Student Loan Default Rate Lowest in UNC System

The University of North Carolina at Wilmington student loan default rate for FY 1996 is 1.5 percent, the lowest among the 16 institutions of the UNC system.

Mark Williams, director of financial aid, called the 1.5 percent extremely low compared to the national average. The national average default rate for FY 1996 is 9.6 percent and represents the group of borrowers whose first loan repayments came due in FY96 and who defaulted sometime before Oct. 1, 1997. This is the most current data available from the U.S. Department of Education.

"One reason students default on loans is their inability to find jobs," said Williams. "UNCW's low loan default rate indicates the quality of our graduates, the education which they received and their ability to find good jobs."

UNCW's 1997 graduates carried the third lightest average debt load among graduates of Southern regional universities according to U.S. News and World Report's 12th annual "America's Best Colleges" guidebook. While 64 percent of graduates left in debt, the amount averaged just $4,129, slightly more than Alcorn State University and Northern Kentucky University.

Assisting students to avoid incurring unnecessary debt is important, said Denis Carter, associate provost for enrollment affairs. "Our financial aid counselors work closely with students to introduce them to principles of sound money management," said Carter, adding that students have the same assigned financial aid counselors throughout their college careers at UNCW.

This year, as part of the counseling process, UNCW's Financial Aid Office initiated a new process giving students with loans an annual statement of their account detailing the amount owed and a monthly repayment schedule, said Williams.

"We wanted to give students a reality check," said Williams. "Students can see how much they owe and decide how much additional money is needed to continue or complete their college careers."

Commentator Fred Barnes to Speak Sunday

Fred Barnes, nationally known political commentator, will give the free presentation "Election '98 and the Clinton Presidency: What It Means for North Carolina" at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Kenan Auditorium.

Barnes

Joined by Chancellor James R. Leutze and a panel of state and local media and faculty, Barnes will discuss the impact of the 1998 midterm elections, with a focus on what it all means to North Carolinians and in particular Cape Fear residents. The panel members will consist of Lee Johnston, professor of political science, moderator; Rhonda Bellamy, news director, Coast/WGNI; Jon Evans, managing editor and news anchor, WWAY-TV3; and Kirsten Mitchell, N.Y. Times Regional Office Raleigh bureau chief.

Barnes is executive director of The Weekly Standard, the first weekly opinion magazine on politics to be launched in 40 years. He is also moderator of the Voice of America Show, Issues in the News, and hosts a weekly radio show on the media, What's the Story? He has appeared on The McLaughlin Group, Nightline, Meet the Press, Face the Nation and The MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour. He has also written for Reader's Digest, The Public Interest, The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal.

Davie Poplar Tree Planting Tomorrow

Chancellor James R. Leutze and Provost Dick Richardson from UNC Chapel Hill will plant an offspring of the Davie Poplar at 3 p.m. tomorrow on the east side of Hinton James Hall. The planting is to commemorate UNCW's 50th anniversary.

The Davie Poplar was planted on the UNCCH campus at the time of its bicentennial celebration. According to southern oral tradition, the original tulip poplar, located near the Morehead Building, marks the spot William R. Davie selected as the site for the Chapel Hill campus.

The location for the planting was selected so that Hoggard Hall, in the northeast position of the tree, will provide protection from sustained hurricane winds. The location is also appropriate as Hinton James, a New Hanover County native, was the first student to attend UNC Chapel Hill.

In addition, he will sign copies of Palma Cathedral, his new book of poems which won the 1998 Colorado Prize. In addition to White, MFA student Sally McMillan will read from her works. The event is cosponsored by the English Department and Bristol Books.

Claude Howell Gallery Dedicated in Kenan Hall

Frank Block, chair of the UNCW Board of Trustees, and Chancellor James R. Leutze dedicated the Claude Howell Gallery in Kenan Hall during a brief ceremony Oct. 29.

"The university is very pleased to honor Claude Howell's memory with the dedication of this gallery," said Chancellor Leutze. "By establishing this gallery in the name of Claude Howell, the university is acknowledging this man as a principal contributor to UNCW and the community. He represented his passion for the arts by his selfless devotion to the establishment of our art program."

St. John's Museum of Art provided UNCW with a bust of Claude Howell that was unveiled by Chancellor Leutze and Rebecca Layman, president of the board of directors at St. John's Museum.

Cameron Business School Adds Two Members to Executive Board

The UNCW Cameron School of Business Executive Board has elected Mary Gornto and Ronald Isyk to the board, bringing its membership to 17. Gornto is the Wilmington city manager. Isyk is a national director for Deloitte & Touche, a global accounting and consulting firm.

The executive board regularly meets with Dean Howard Rockness to advise him on issues dealing with the quality of the school's business education and to provide input on trends in business and their impact on the curriculum. In addition, these executives provide wide-ranging support to the business school with internships, job placements and interaction with students, and help in meeting its financial needs.

"We are extremely pleased to have on our board Mary Gornto, a public sector business executive, and Ron Isyk, a business leader with extensive national experience," commented Dean Rockness. "They will help us move our business school to the next level of excellence required to meet the increasingly complex needs of our regional business community."

Mary Gornto is a Wilmington native who has served as Wilmington city manager since 1993, previously being deputy manager for New Hanover County. She received her undergraduate degree from Sweet Briar College and has done extensive advanced studies at UNC's Institute of Government and the University of Virginia Center for Public Policy. She is active in community affairs and serves on the board of directors of the J.W. Murchison Company Inc.

Ronald Isyk lives in Wilmington but maintains an office in Atlanta where he serves as a national practice director for Deloitte & Touche, a global accounting and consulting firm. Prior to moving to Wilmington five years ago, he was a senior financial executive for Sears, Roebuck & Co. at its headquarters in Chicago, Ill. Isyk has been active with the Cameron School of Business as a speaker at various programs, a member of the Department of Accountancy & Business Law Advisory Board, and was instrumental in setting up the Deloitte & Touche recruiting program at the university.

Edgerton to Give Reading in December

Novelist Clyde Edgerton will give a reading with musical interludes at 8 p.m. Dec. 2 in the Warwick Center Ballroom, followed by a reception and booksigning.

A banjo player and member of the Tarwater Band, Edgerton plans to include music from his novels interspersed with his readings from The Floatplane Notebooks (1988), Killer Diller (1992), In Memory of Junior (1992), Where Trouble Sleeps (1997), and his new novel, a sequel to Killer Diller.

Edgerton, who holds a Ph.D. in curriculum and instruction from UNC Chapel Hill, is currently teaching a novel-writing workshop in the English Department's Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing program. During spring 1999, he will teach the graduate novel-writing workshop and a contemporary short story course. He has previously taught literature and creative writing at UNC Chapel Hill, Campbell University, St. Andrews College, Duke University, Agnes Scott College and Millsaps College.

Several of Edgerton's novels have been adapted for the stage including Raney (1985), Walking Across Egypt (1987) and The Floatplane Notebooks. A screen version of Walking Across Egypt has begun filming.

This event is sponsored by the Katherine K. Buckner Distinguished Lecture Series and the English Department. The Buckner Distinguished Lecture Series was established by Charles F. Green III to bring distinguished scholars and writers to the university and is named in honor of his friend, Katherine K. Buckner.

For more information, contact the Department of English at ext. 3320.

A Christmas Heritage at Kenan Auditorium

"A Christmas Heritage," featuring masters of string music, is set for 8 p.m. Nov. 19 in Kenan Auditorium. The concert is sponsored by UNCW Arts in Action.

A lively showcase of ensemble and solo performances, "A Christmas Heritage" will spotlight six premiere recording artists: Philip Aaberg, Darol Anger, Alison Brown, Mike Marshall, Tim O'Brien and Todd Phillips.

Tickets are $16 for the general public, $8 for faculty and staff and $4 for students with a valid UNCW ID and are available at Kenan Auditorium box office or the University Union information center. Eight-page Communique

The Nov. 19 edition of the Campus Communique will be eight pages with a deadline of 5 p.m. Monday. This will be the last issue published prior to the Thanksgiving holiday.

Year 2000 Information

UNCW's Year 2000 Committee has published information related to the year 2000 at the World Wide Web http://www.uncwil.edu/mis/year2000.html.

Refer comments or questions to the OIT help desk at ext. 4357. Microcomputer owners should test their system hardware for year 2000 compliance by following the instructions found under the microcomputer strategies (hardware) link. There is a TF 200 program that provides a patch to correct problems. The software link provides connections to vendor web pages regarding year 2000 information.

Also, the committee is seeking assistance identifying computer chips in equipment that may not be year 2000 compliant. An estimated 2 to 4 percent of embedded chips may cause equipment failures in the year 2000. The committee is reviewing equipment such as fume hoods, heating and air conditioning equipment and security systems for the campus. Anyone aware of equipment containing chips that might present safety risks should contact one of the following committee members, Nikki Howard, Sharon Boyd, Bobby Miller or Bill Pate.

Low Cost Health Program

The N.C. Health Choice for Children program offers comprehensive benefits, including doctor visits, hospital care, hearing, vision and some dental services. Eligibility is determined by the family size and income, such as a family of two with an income of $21,700 or a family of three with an income of $27,300. For more information, contact the Department of Social Services at 341-4716.

AFLAC Supplemental Health Plans

November is open enrollment period for supplemental health coverage through AFLAC. Detailed information was distributed to all employees. For more information, contact Elizabeth at ext. 3713.

Deadline Nears For N.C. FLEX Enrollment

The deadline for N.C. FLEX enrollment is tomorrow. The program includes a pre-tax traditional dental plan, accidental death and dismemberment, vision, health care spending and dependent daycare spending accounts. All employees should have received information on N.C. FLEX. Read the material carefully to see the benefits of participation in N.C. FLEX. Direct questions to ext. 3006 or 3713.

University Police Brochure Has Tips to Avoid Carjacking

An automobile offers mobility and freedom. However, it is also an attractive target for criminals, according to Lisa Hedgecock, university police.

"Carjacking is a crime of opportunity that is on the increase. With more cars equipped with alarms and theft-deterrent devices, thieves are looking for an easier target such as a car with the keys already in the ignition, even if the driver is present," said Hedgecock.

Tips for dealing with carjacking are in a Radio Shack "United Against Crime" brochure available from university police.

The brochure points out that carjackers look for "windows of opportunity" to steal an automobile. Danger areas include intersections, parking garages, shopping malls, grocery stores, self-service gas stations, car washes and ATMs.

In an effort to decrease the risk of a carjacking, the brochure states that before getting into a car, pay attention to the surroundings. If someone is loitering near the car, keep walking until the person leaves. Have car keys in hand prior to reaching the automobile and check the back seat before entering. Be cautious of people handing out flyers or asking for directions.

Once in the car, keep the windows up and the doors locked. When stopping at intersections, leave enough space to be able to drive around other cars if necessary. If a suspicious-looking person approaches the car, carefully drive away. Drive in the inside lane, which makes it more difficult for would-be carjackers to approach the car. Do not stop to assist someone who has broken down; use a car phone to notify police or drive to the nearest phone to call for help. Park in well-lit areas and avoid parking near dumpsters, woods, large vans or objects that might limit visibility.

If threatened, give up your car; property can be replaced. Get away from the area as quickly as possible and report the crime to the police. Try to remember a description of the carjacker, including such details as sex, race, age, hair and eye color, clothing and any unusual characteristics that may help the police apprehend the suspect. If you have any questions or would like to schedule a personal safety program, contact Lisa Hedgecock, university police, at ext. 3184 or e-mail uncwpd@uncwil.edu.

50th Anniversary of United Nations Universal Human Rights Declaration Focus of B. Frank Hall Lecture December 10

Schabas

William A. Schabas, international human rights scholar and professor of law at the University of Montreal, Quebec, will present UNCW's B. Frank Hall Lecture at 8 p.m. Dec. 10 in the Cameron Hall auditorium. The lecture, "The Universal Declaration of Human Rights: After 50 Years, Still a Common Standard of Achievement," coincides with the actual 50th anniversary of the United Nations' Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

As a practicing attorney in Montreal, Schabas specialized in constitutional, human rights, international, criminal, administrative, labor and social law. He joined the law faculty of the University of Montreal in 1991, serving as its chair from 1994 to 1998. Currently chair of the Coalition for the 50th Anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in Montreal, Schabas is also a member of the Amnesty International-sponsored human rights observation mission to Rwanda and the Canadian delegation to the U.N. Commission on Human Rights.

To promote and encourage respect for "human rights and fundamental freedoms," the United Nations General Assembly issued its proclamation The Universal Declaration of Human Rights on Dec. 10, 1948, a date now celebrated internationally as Human Rights Day. The document's 30 articles set forth basic civil, economic, political and social freedoms entitled to every person.

"The declaration was clearly a reaction to the Holocaust and the carnage of World War II," said James Megivern, philosophy and religion. "For the United Nations to declare a respect for the rights of everyone was extremely important, particularly because the organization was formed to find a way to secure world peace."

The B. Frank Hall Lecture is free and open to the public. It is co-sponsored by the Department of Philosophy and Religion, the Office of the Chancellor, the UNCW chapter of the honor society Phi Kappa Phi and the Wilmington chapter of the United Nations Association-USA.

Technology Council Recommends Computer Standardization

UNCW will begin restricting microcomputer hardware and software replacements to platforms using Windows 98 and Windows NT operating systems this year, based on recommendations from a newly appointed Interim Information Technology Standards Council.

According to the council's interim chair, Dean Jo Ann Seiple, "Based on all evidence we've reviewed, such standardization will make replacements and upgrades both more cost-effective and more efficient than is possible when multiple platforms are used within and across departments and offices on campus."

At the same time, the council recognizes that not all users of other platforms can adapt quickly to the new standards, and some will require special training, Seiple said. Moreover, non-standard platforms, such as Macintosh and Unix, will continue to be needed by some faculty and in some classroom laboratories for the forseeable future because needed software is currently unavailable for use on Windows systems, she added. For that reason, the standardization will be phased in over a three-year period. An appeals procedure has been established to permit the purchase and support of non-standard technology.

Under this procedure a department chair or office supervisor will submit an appeal form for consideration by the council, which consists of representatives of the faculty, computing services and administration. A copy of the appeal form, along with a list of minimal hardware and software requirements, has been given to heads of each university division for distribution to appropriate offices.

Faculty and staff are encouraged to inform students of the university's plans to standardize computer platforms, as well as to examine a Windows 98 or Windows NT platform themselves if

Faculty Advisory Committee Meeting

The Chancellor's Faculty Advisory Committee will meet at noon Dec. 1 in Alderman Hall, Room 215.

Committee members are: Patricia Buerger, HPER; Sally Cummings, School of Nursing; Mark Galizio, psychology; Randy Hanson, accountancy and business law; James Hunt, management and marketing; James Kiddle, chemistry; Rebecca Lee, English; Sandra McLaurin, mathematical sciences; Mahnaz Moallem, Watson School of Education; Sam Murrell, philosophy and religion; Robert Nathanson, music; Joseph Pawlik, biological sciences; Laura Rogers, specialty studies; Lynn Snowden, sociology and anthropology; and Richard Veit, English.

Faculty are encouraged to share comments and suggestions with committee members.

Nomination Deadlines for Teaching Awards

January 22 is the deadline for nominations for the Chancellor's Teaching Excellence Awards, the Distinguished Teaching Professorship Awards and the Board of Trustees' Teaching Excellence Award.

Designed to recognize all aspects of excellence in teaching and related activities, up to six Chancellor's Teaching Excellence Awards are presented annually consisting of three to the College of Arts and Sciences and one each to the Cameron School of Business, Watson School of Education and the School of Nursing. Nominations should be submitted to the respective dean's office.

Distinguished Teaching Professorship Awards exemplify UNCW's commitment to excellence in teaching and related activities by recognizing faculty who have made a profound contribution to higher education through their dedication and service to students. Nominations should be submitted to the Office of the Provost.

All award winners will be announced at fall 1999 convocation.

Scholarship Established

UNCW has established the Betty Ann Sanders Nursing Scholarship to assist undergraduate or graduate students pursuing a degree from the university's School of Nursing.

The scholarship's namesake and donor, Betty Ann Sanders, is chair of the UNCW Foundation Board and member of the School of Nursing's Advocate Board. The scholarship was established in honor of Marie Sanders Davies, R.N., in recognition and appreciation of her long and outstanding nursing career in Baltimore, Md.

Stephanie Lee Donaton, graduate student in biological sciences, will defend her thesis "The Barn Swallow in an Urban-Maritime Environment" at 2 p.m. Friday in the new Science Building, Room 103.

Christopher M. Terry, graduate student in chemistry, will defend his thesis "The Porewater Geochemistry of Dissolved Titantium in Estuarine and Coastal Sediments" at 2 p.m. Monday in the new Science Building, Room 132.

Otton Rutten, graduate student in biological sciences, will defend his thesis "Size and Shape of Juvenile Gag, Mycteroperca Micropelis, at Egress from Estuary to Offshore Hardbottom in North Carolina" at 2 p.m. Monday in the new Science Building, Room 103.

Participants Needed for Psychology Experiment

Females who have had a hysterectomy are needed for an experiment in the Psychology Department. Participants will be paid for the one-hour experiment which deals with hormones and learning. If interested, call Becky at 254-4686.

Concert Band Performance

The UNCW Concert Band, under Harry McLamb's direction, will perform at 8 p.m. Monday in Kenan Auditorium.

Admission is $4 for the general public and $2 for faculty and staff. For more information, call the Music Department at ext. 3390.

U.S. Highway 17 Traffic Shift

Starting today, the North Carolina Department of Transportation will shift traffic on U.S. Highway 17 in Onslow County. Weather permitting, traffic will shift onto newly constructed northbound lanes of U.S. 17 in a two-lane, two-way pattern beginning north of Holly Ridge and ending approximately one mile south of Verona. Motorists should use caution while driving in this area. Be prepared to stop earlier at intersections and take note of new traffic patterns at the following intersections: N.C. Highways 210 and 172 and Folkstone and Old Folkstone roads.

Holiday Stamps

Registration Deadline for Adult Scholars Leadership Program

December 1 is the deadline to register for UNCW's Adult Scholars Leadership Program, an educational opportunity for retired and semi-retired adults. This program provides participants with an opportunity to interact with community leaders and hear about regional problems and solutions. With this knowledge, participants are encouraged to become actively involved in the enhancement of their community through volunteer and entrepreneurial services.

The seven-week session begins on Feb. 4 and will meet from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Thursdays on the campus. A graduation ceremony will be held March 23.

Cost is $225 and includes seven sessions, graduation reception, program and resource materials, speaker honoraria, continental breakfasts, refreshments and lunches.

The program is limited to 40 participants. Interested persons should contact Annette Coneglio Anderson at ext. 3547 to receive an application.

Chancellor Attends International Forum

Chancellor James R. Leutze attended the Digital Communities International Forum in Tokyo Tuesday where he discussed "Educational Models for the 21st Century: Technological Initiatives at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington."

Approximately 500 persons, including ambassadors from the United States, France and Germany and other international representatives, attended the forum designed to explore how people are adapting to global technological advances.

Chancellor Leutze discussed distance learning, the North Carolina Information Highway (NCIH) and other aspects of UNCW's Virtual University that provide new and emerging information technologies and global learning resources to students who previously traveled to campus or extension sites at specific times.

UNCW is one of the leaders in global learning using two-way interactive video classrooms, asynchronous discussion forums, digital library resources, interactive Web pages and Internet-based streaming audio and video technologies.

"Our virtual university is a developing learning community . . . an international and global learning community," Chancellor Leutze emphasized. "In the virtual university, students are employing information technology tools to gain new knowledge, to interact with teachers and other students and to apply new knowledge."

This year, more than 200 students are pursuing degrees using the NCIH and Internet. UNCW currently offers 15 online courses accessible from any personal computer with an Internet connection. Additional online offerings are planned for next semester. UNCW expects to add 2,500 students to its program within the next five years.

E-mail submissions to COMMUNIQUE, by noon Tuesdays unless otherwise notified

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

Nancy Grindlay, earth sciences and CMSR, had the research paper "A Different Pattern of Ridge Segmentation and Mantle Bouguer Gravity Anomalies Along the Ultra-slow Spreading Southwest Indian Ridge" published in the September issue of Earth and Planetary Science Letters.

Jim Walters, admissions, conducted college admissions workshops for high school guidance counselors in Fayetteville, Greenville and Wilmington. The workshops were sponsored by the College Board. He also served as an expert resource for the annual CASE/USA Today admissions hotline in Arlington, Va.

Andrea Deagon, foreign languages and literatures, had her article "The Twelve Double Hours of Night: Insomnia and Transformation in Gilgamesh" accepted for publication in Soundings: An Interdisciplinary Journal.

Richard Huber, curricular studies, was invited by the National Science Foundation to serve on the national advisory committee for the NSF-funded Project "Water on the Web." The group meets annually in Minneapolis to review Web-based water education projects. Huber presented "Students as Scientists," a Web-based project he and Karen Shafer developed, at an October meeting.

Patricia Comeaux and Frank Trimble, communication studies, presented papers for a panel on "Communicating and Learning using Interactive Technologies" at the Carolinas Communication Association Convention. Comeaux's paper was entitled "Interactive Strategies for Overcoming the Distance in Video Classrooms," and Trimble's paper was entitled "Presentational Dynamics and Camera Techniques for Video Classrooms."

Karen Wetherill, specialty studies, received $5,000 from Public Schools of North Carolina for her project "Mentor Teacher Development Program."

D. Ann Pabst and William A. McLellan, biological sciences and CMSR, along with S. A. Rommel were co-authors on the paper "Reproductive Thermoregulation in Marine Mammals" in the Sept./Oct. issue of American Scientist.

Anthony F. Janson, art and theatre, had "Art as Experience: Works by Vietnam Veterans" published in Vietnam, Reflexes and Reflections edited and co-authored by Eve Sinaiko. His exhibition "Barbara Chase-Riboud: The Monument Drawings" will go on tour from St. John's Museum of Art, spending summer 1999 at the Print Gallery of the Metropolitan Museum of Art - the first exhibition from North Carolina to be shown in that museum. The catalog essay will be included in a monograph about the artist, co-authored by Peter Selz of the University of Berkeley, to be published next spring.

David Berman, computer science, attended OOPSLA '98 (Object-Oriented Programming, Systems, Languages, and Applications) in Vancouver, British Columbia. His trip was partially funded by an educators' scholarship from the Association of Computing Machinery.

John Austin, Laronda Brewer, Pete Blutreich, Stephanie Helmers, Chris Kaberline and Eddie Lovett, housing and residence life, attended the 25th annual North Carolina Housing Officers' Conference in Asheville. Brewer and Helmers won an award for best new professional case study. Blutreich and Lovett won Best of NCHO for their diversity training program "Leaves from the Same Tree." Austin and Kaberline gave two presentations.

Rick Dixon, sociology and anthropology, gave the full-session presentation "Web-based Teaching of Social Demography" at the 29th annual meeting of the Southern Demographic Association conference in Annapolis, Md.

Khoon Koh, HPER, and Craig Galbraith, management and marketing, presented their paper "Validating the Tourism Entrepreneurial Process: A Multiple Case Study Approach" at the World Leisure and Recreation Association's conference in Sao Paulo, Brazil.

Chris Powell, CMSR, presented a poster on the RV Cape Fear at the Southeastern Estuarine Research Society conference in Georgetown, S.C. The poster was co-authored by Alessandro Bocconcelli, CMSR.

Sheila Adams, management and marketing, received $13,813 from East Tennessee State University for her project "The Transatlantic Business School Project."

Chris E. Fonvielle, Jr., history, presented the paper "Closing Down the Kingdom: The Fall of Wilmington, North Carolina" at a conference on the final days of the Civil War at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C.

Warren Gulko, SBTDC, received $697 from SBTDC/U.S. Small Business Administration for his project "SBTDC."

Mary Moser, CMSR, received $61,210 from CZR Inc. for her project "Caging Experiments for Blast Effect Mitigation Tests" and $88,776 for "Monitoring of Sturgeon for Blast Effect Mitigation Tests."

Nancy Grindlay, earth sciences, received $9,516 from the University of Puerto Rico, Mayaguez, for her project "Investigation of the Potential Tsunami Hazard on the North Coast of Puerto Rico Due to Submarine Slides Along the Puerto Rico Trench."

Sridhar Narayan, computer science, presented the paper "On Signal Processing, Wavelets, and Neural Networks" at the Third International Conference on Computational Intelligence and Neurosciences held in Research Triangle Park. The paper was published in the conference proceedings.

Lee Schweninger, English, presented the paper "Reconstructing Frontiers and Other Myths of the Indian West" at the Western Literature Association conference on "Crossing the Wests" in Banff, Alberta.

Lavonne J. Adams, English, has the short story "Trading Up" in the current issue of the Potatoeaters Quarterly.

Karen Tobiassen, landscape services, has received certification as an arborist and horticulturist by the International Society of Aboriculture, a scientific and educational organization devoted to the dissemination of information about the care and preservation of shade and ornamental trees.

Amy Campbell and Jamie Craft, landscape services, received North Carolina Pesticide Licenses.

Perry W. Campbell, financial aid, presented "Cost of Attendance" at the new aid officers' workshop during the North Carolina Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators fall conference in Winston-Salem.

FACULTY/STAFF PROFILE

Distinguished Teaching Career Started Thanks to Aunt Irma

by Linda Grattafiori

Sue Combs is so upbeat, she makes the number 13 look lucky.

"I go into the classroom like I'm on fire! I tell my student teachers, 'enthusiasm, enthusiasm!'" Combs said. "If you're out of balance, the kids you're trying to teach won't tune in."

In her 13th year of teaching, Combs is one of three UNCW faculty members to win the Distinguished Teaching Professorship Award.

"I was recruited to teach adapted physical education, a required course for PE majors" Combs said. "We develop educational experiences for individuals who learn differently. There is a law that children with disabilities should receive a free and appropriate education."

This semester, Combs is teaching Movement for Special Populations, a course that goes along with adapted PE.

"The administration has been supportive of the fact that I want to show students how others learn differently," she said. "I've never been told that (one of my methods) is out of the norm. I take my students off campus, and I bring guest speakers to campus."

Different strategies are used to achieve different learning styles. For example, students work with children in the public schools' self-contained classrooms and with Special Olympics at the YMCA.

In the early '90s, Combs won the Board of Trustees Teaching Excellence Award and did a stint as chair of the HPER Department. She learned to respect UNCW's emphasis on good teaching.

"Many students connote the entry level PE class with 'Run-O-Run,'" she said. "They dread the physical activity involved. So we made changes in the course to make it more fun. Now, I see kids five years later who tell me they're glad they took my course."

Combs, together with colleagues Judy C. Peel and John P. Bennett, wrote the textbook for this entry level course called Active Living: A Matter of Choice.

Sue Combs

For five years, UNCW students have had the opportunity to help with the National Youth Sports Program, a grant given Combs through the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Some 250 children, ranging in age from 10 to 16 years old who were identified as at risk and at poverty level, attended a five-week summer camp at UNCW. Children who attended received eight hours of health-related experiences such as swimming and a hot lunch. UNCW students were hired or asked to volunteer to assist with this mammoth program.

"Students typically feel better about themselves after providing service," Combs said, "Whether they're helping special needs children, facilitating the mentally retarded with leisure activities or working with geriatrics in nursing homes."

Teaching students to address people with special needs as individuals is stressed.

"We consciously choose an attitude of acceptance," Combs said. "All individuals have worth and value and are not to be labeled or categorized because they are different."

Combs said she realized this at an early age because of her Aunt Irma who was mentally disabled.

"My aunt lived with my grandfather about a half-mile from us, so we often took food to them or they came to eat at our house," Combs said. "We grew up together. Her communication was poor, but she could learn if language (signed) was modified for her. I realized that my aunt was as much a person as anybody else."

Comb's dissertation was dedicated to her aunt. Its title was "The Effects of Physical Activity on Maladaptive Behavior of Individuals Identified as Mentally Retarded and Mentally Handicapped."

The results of the dissertation showed that if a person is kept physically active for a full hour - stretching, jogging, lifting minimal weights - maladaptive behavior is reduced significantly.

As director of activity therapy at Orient State Institute in Ohio for 14 years prior to joining the faculty at UNCW, Combs experienced firsthand the positive results of her doctoral thesis. Medications were reduced, and the staff was more willing to work with patients who exhibited more appropriate levels of behavior.

Practicing what she teaches, Combs enjoys running and aerobics, plus sports such as tennis, boating, fishing and golf.

"Not only am I teaching people how to play, but I'm also playing!"

Playing and service for Combs seem to go hand-in-hand. As a member of the Big Buddy Advisory Board and advisor to the honorary PE fraternity Phi Epsilon Kappa, Combs has promoted fund-raising for Big Buddy with three-on-three basketball tournaments and a Big Buddy Walkathon.

Linda Grattafiori is a freelance writer who lives in Wilmington. She has written for the Wilmington Morning Star and Our State magazine.

FEATURES

Honduran Hope Documentary Premier to Raise Funds for Hurricane Relief

The world premier of Honduran Hope, a documentary written, directed and produced by Lou Buttino, communication studies, will be held at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Morton Hall's Bryan Auditorium.

The documentary's presentation is a fund-raiser for victims of Hurricane Mitch in Nicaragua and Honduras. Admission is free, but monetary contributions received will be forwarded to The Resource Foundation for distribution. Buttino will introduce the documentary and respond to questions afterward.

Narrated by actor Ed Asner, Honduran Hope reveals the valiant spirits of Hondurans and their determination to improve life for themselves and their children. This documentary is also about Americans who are inspired by the humility of the Hondurans and their will to succeed. In addition, Honduran Hope includes powerful interviews with laborers, a professor and others.

"It is painful to see footage of what happened in Honduras recently," Buttino said. "But I am also convinced that no matter what the suffering, hope will still prevail in Honduras."

Filmed in the summer of 1998, the documentary was completed after Hurricane Mitch hit Honduras and Nicaragua, killing thousands and leaving millions homeless.

UNCW faculty participants include William Bolduc, communication studies, videographer; Bekki Lee, English, script review; and Ellen Walters, film studies coordinator, and Rick Olsen, communication studies, who provided voice-over narration. Frank Trimble, chair of the Communication Studies Department, and Rodney Ingle provided original music.

Current UNCW students involved in the documentary are Karen Wooten, translator, and Travis Lupe and Jonathan Pridgen, production assistants. In addition, UNCW graduates Drew Smith, production assistant, and Marc Levy, associate editor, contributed to the making of Honduran Hope.

Edgerton to Give Reading

Novelist Clyde Edgerton will give a reading with musical interludes at 8 p.m. Dec. 2 in the Warwick Center Ballroom, followed by a reception and booksigning.

A banjo player and member of the Tarwater Band, Edgerton plans to include music from his novels interspersed with his readings from The Floatplane Notebooks (1988), Killer Diller (1992), In Memory of Junior (1992), Where Trouble Sleeps (1997), and his new novel, a sequel to Killer Diller.

This event is sponsored by the Katherine K. Buckner Lecture Series and the English Department and is free and open to the public. The Buckner Lecture Series was established by Charles F. Green III to bring distinguished scholars and writers to the university and is named in honor of his friend, Katherine K. Buckner.

Earth Sciences Seminar

Jeff Karson from Duke University's Geology Department will present "Deconstructing Ocean Crust: Beyond the Ophiolite Myth" at 2 p.m. Friday in DeLoach Hall, Room 114.

Sylvia Opens Tonight

A. R. Gurney's romantic comedy Sylvia, directed by Terry Theodore, will be performed at 8 p.m. tonight through Saturday with 3 p.m. matinee performances Saturday and Sunday in Kenan Hall's SRO Theatre. Sylvia revolves around marriage and a dog. A middle-aged man adopts a street-wise mongrel, Sylvia, creating a situation which eventually threatens to destroy his marriage.

Reserved tickets are required and are $8 for the general public and $4 for faculty and staff. To obtain tickets, contact the Kenan Auditorium box office at ext. 3500.

Proposal Writing Workshop

Robert Lowman, associate vice provost for research at UNC Chapel Hill, will present the following workshops for those interested in refining their proposal writing skills: "Introductory Proposal Writing" from 8:30 a.m. to noon Nov. 30 or Dec. 1 and "Multi-Disciplinary and Multi-Institutional Proposal Writing" from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Nov. 30. To reserve a space, call the Office of Research Administration at ext. 3810.

English Tea With Carolina Authors

An English tea with authors Paul Wilkes, Anne Russell, Clay Carmichael and Elizabeth Daniels Squire will be held from 2 to 3 p.m. Dec. 6 in the Warwick Center Ballroom. Tickets are $15 for this event, sponsored by the American Association of University Women. Proceeds will support the association's scholarship efforts. A basket of books valued at $100 will be awarded as a door prize. For more information, contact Hope Cusick at 270-0458.

Film Discussion Leaders Wanted

The Leadership and Activities Center is seeking faculty and staff interested in facilitating brief discussions of the leadership aspects of the following films: Philadelphia, scheduled for 7 p.m. Nov. 23 in the Warwick Center Ballroom; Amistad, 7 p.m. Feb. 8 in the University Union, Room 207; and Dave, 7 p.m. March 29 in the University Union, Room 207. The showings, part of the Leadership Film Series, are free and open to all faculty, staff and students. Contact Julie Owen at ext. 3797 or e-mail owenj if interested.

FACULTY/STAFF PROFILE

Zeynep Kurgun-Chen Creates a Paradise in the Kresge Greenhouse

by Linda Grattafiori

"Have you seen the greenhouse?" asked Carolyn Dunn. "It is in great shape! Zeynep has been a godsend."

Zeynep Kurgun-Chen is manager of UNCW's Kresge Greenhouse. Prior to joining UNCW in August 1997, she managed Shelton Herb Farm for nine years.

Dunn is one of several professors in the Department of Biological Sciences who benefit in the classroom and laboratory by having a diverse collection of greenhouse specimens for demonstration and analysis. One of her experiments on photosynthesis determines the chlorophyll patterns in variegated coleus.

Another professor, David Sieren works with conifers, ferns, liverworts and flowering plants in his plant morphology and taxonomy courses.

"Zeynep sets up healthy specimens in the lab," Sieren said, "which makes my work much more effective."

Novartis Biotechnology awarded Steven Kinsey a grant on maize research to analyze a natural pesticide produced by transgenic corn. These young corn plants receive special care in the greenhouse.

"I finally have a chance to create my jungle and provide the plants the professors need at the same time," Kurgun-Chen said. "The students and staff tell me how nice the greenhouse looks. I love the people around me. They're very appreciative, even if it's a small thing."

Born in Ankara, Turkey, Kurgun-Chen immigrated to the United States in 1969 to attend Purdue University at West Lafayette, Ind.

In 1976, she moved to Wilmington with her husband, Miguel Chen, and joined Plantation Gardens and the Hobby Greenhouse Club.

Kurgun-Chen completed the master gardener program at the New Hanover Extension Arboretum and donates her volunteer hours to the 4-H Horticulture Club where one of her two sons is a member.

This year, Kurgun-Chen is president of the Cape Fear Orchid Society and has donated approximately 20 orchids to the greenhouse.

Kurgen-Chen at work in the greenhouse.

The outside of the greenhouse is beautifully landscaped with plants from Kurgun-Chen's own yard, such as the exotic castor bean, red fountain grass, elephant ears, purple salvia and blackeye and yellow sweet potato vine.

The inside of the 35-by-72-foot conservatory-style structure is 15 feet high in the center and has two levels, one for hanging plants such as orchids, and a working/holding area on the tables.

"The greenhouse serves several functions," said Scott Quackenbush, chair of the Biological Sciences Department. "It provides a collection of plants for teaching and a place for conducting research activities."

Although the greenhouse appears well-defined with succulents in the brighter, drier corner and ferns in one that provides humidity and shade, Kurgun-Chen says she's still "trying to make more sense of it."

She stretches her 19-hour workweek to focus on taking care of the collection. Kurgun-Chen may be at the greenhouse at 8 a.m.to help set up a lab demonstration or at 8 p.m. for pesticide and insect control.

"I spray to retard pests in the evening to avoid the heat and light of the sun," she said. "Although my methods are as organic as possible, the sprays still have a re-entry time of four hours. I do not spray around staff or students and lock the greenhouse until after the re-entry time has expired."

When hours permit, Kurgen-Chen would like to catalog the entire collection that ranges from the tiniest mosquito fern to a multiple bromeliad that's covered a 6-by-6-foot partition, front and back.

Other large exotics include a 3-by-5-foot staghorn fern, a two-and-one-half-foot cat's whiskers from southeast Asia, a white bird of paradise and a papaya that's "growing out of the ceiling."

Ileana Clavijo is working with a three-and-one-half-foot mangrove that grows along the Florida Keys and other coastal areas.

Nearby a 4-by-5-foot water garden sports hyacinth, papyrus and water lettuce.

"I've been gathering a lot of information because I would like to start hydroponics on a small scale," Kurgun-Chen said. "Examining the different types of root systems could be incorporated into the botany classes."

Correspondence and reading are done at home.

"There is a lot to do other than physically taking care of plants," Kurgun-Chen said. "If a professor asks for a particular plant, I locate its source through stores, catalogs or the Internet. Sometimes, I consult with the arboretum."

Kurgun-Chen is a member of the Association of Education and Research Greenhouse Curators (AERGC), an e-mail forum that distributes a quarterly newsletter.

"Being a member of AERGC allows us to share unique plants with other universities," said Courtney Hackney, Kurgun-Chen's supervisor. "It's been many years since the greenhouse has been this lush because Zeynep really loves it. She's made the greenhouse a part of the university."

Lewis to Deliver Fall 1998 Commencement Address Saturday

Charles Lewis, professor and interim chair in the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Department, will address graduates at the fall commencement scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday in Trask Coliseum. His 39 years of teaching experience include positions at Hunter College, the University of New Hampshire and the State University College at Cortland, New York. He has been with UNCW since 1982. Lewis received the 1997 UNCW Distinguished Teaching Professorship Award, established by Chancellor James Leutze in 1992.

Lewis

Approximately 650 undergraduates and 50 graduate students will receive degrees during the commencement ceremony. This does not include students who completed programs during summer 1998 and are eligible to participate.

Lewis's selection resulted from a review of questionnaires distributed by the Division for Student Affairs. Each semester, graduating seniors identify the faculty member that most impacted their lives. Questionnaires from the past four semesters were reviewed by Mark Lanier, special assistant to the Chancellor. Lanier compiled a list of faculty members whom students identified all four semesters and had at least five references in one of those four semesters. Following careful consideration, Chancellor James R. Leutze and Provost Marvin Moss selected Lewis to serve as commencement speaker.

"Being significant to students over time creates the burden of wanting to say something meaningful to them, their families, their friends and my colleagues. I would not be where I am and doing what I do if it had not been for significant teachers in my life," said Lewis. "This is an honor, a career capstone, an opportunity and an obligation. Students have helped make me what I am. Their success is my success."

In addition to the Distinguished Teaching Professorship Award, Lewis is a recipient of the Panhellenic Council Faculty Member of the Year award in 1991 and the Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Teaching in 1996. He also earned two literary awards, one from the New York State Recreation and Park Association and the other from the New York State Outdoor Education Association.

Lewis earned a bachelor's degree in marine science from the New York State Maritime College. He holds two master's degrees, one in secondary education from Hofstra University in 1962 and another in English from C.W. Post College in 1966. In 1968, he received a doctoral degree in education and administration of recreation and outdoor education from New York University.

The Shoe Box Project

UNCW Wellness Services/HIV Program is helping Coastal AIDS Resource Effort (CARE) to collect toys to distribute to 39 local children either affected with HIV/AIDS or who have a family member affected. The children range in age from three months to 12 years old. Each child will be given a shoe box filled with a variety of items during CARE's annual holiday party.

If interested in participating, drop off a toy and, if possible, an unwrapped shoe box to Wellness Services, Westside Hall by Dec. 11. Pick up from offices or departments can be arranged. For more information, call ext. 4137.

Ride Cares Away with a Harley-Davidson

One lucky raffle winner will ride away on a 1999 Harley-Davidson Sportster XLH 883. Drawing for the raffle, sponsored by the UNCW Alumni Association, will be during the UNCW Seahawks Homecoming Celebration Jan. 30 at the Wilmington Hilton. The Harley will be displayed at various campus locations and home basketball games.

Tickets are $5 each and can be obtained by calling ext. 2682 or at the University Union information center.

Weight Watchers on Campus

Wellness Services is soliciting interest in sponsoring a Weight Watchers Worksite Program on campus. Anyone currently attending meetings off campus, but who would like to attend on campus, should call ext. 4137. A minimum number of members are required with significant discounts available. This program would be open to interested individuals who have never participated in Weight Watchers.

Angel Trees

UNCW Volunteers, in conjunction with the UNCW Alumni Association, is sponsoring angel trees to benefit children at the Boys and Girls Home in Lake Waccamaw. Prospective donors "adopt" an angel from trees located in the lobbies of the University Union and Randall Library and purchase, wrap and deliver a gift by Dec. 11 to the Leadership Center, University Union, Room 212. On Dec. 13, a delegation of UNCW students and alumni will take the gifts to the Boys and Girls Home.

Health and Aging Class to Feature Swing Music

Mike Perko's Health and Aging class (HEA 325) will host the four-piece band Nik's Orchette Tuesday. The band, led by Nick Panos, features members who are in their 70's and 80's. Perko said he invited the group to perform for the class "to break the stereotypes and myths concerning senior citizens." In addition John Bennett's dance class will demonstrate swing dance techniques. The class meets at 11 a.m. in Hanover Gym for this performance. Faculty and staff are invited to attend .

Marimba Ensemble to Perform

The UNCW Marimba Ensemble will perform at noon today in the Claude Howell Gallery of Kenan Hall and will include ragtime, Appalachian Christmas Carols and music by Berlioz.

B. Frank Hall Lecture Focusing on Human Rights

William A. Schabas, international human rights scholar and professor of law at the University of Montreal, Quebec, will present UNCW's B. Frank Hall Lecture at 8 p.m. Dec. 10 in the Cameron Hall auditorium. The lecture, "The Universal Declaration of Human Rights: After 50 Years, Still a Common Standard of Achievement," coincides with the actual 50th anniversary of the United Nations' Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

As a practicing attorney in Montreal, Schabas specialized in constitutional, human rights, international, criminal, administrative, labor and social law. He joined the law faculty of the University of Montreal in 1991, serving as its chair from 1994 to 1998. Currently chair of the Coalition for the 50th Anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in Montreal, Schabas is also a member of the Amnesty International-sponsored human rights observation mission to Rwanda and the Canadian delegation to the U.N. Commission on Human Rights.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Ned H. Martin, chemistry, gave a presentation at the southeast regional meeting of the American Chemical Society '98, Research Triangle Park on his research "A New Proton NMR Shielding Model for Alkenes Based on Ab Initio Calculations," which was co-authored by former students Noah W. Allen, III and Everett K. Minga and current students Sal T. Ingrassia and Justin D. Brown. At the same meeting, Allen, gave a presentation on research performed subsequent to his master's thesis "An Improved Model for Predicting Proton NMR Shielding by Substituted Phenyl Rings based on Ab Initio Calculations," which was co-authored by Martin and former student Luong Vo. In addition, Ingrassia presented the poster "Modeling the Crystal Structure of p-Diisocyanobenzene" which he co-authored with Martin.

Peggy Shaffer, history, was elected secretary on the board of directors for the Wrightsville Beach Museum.

Mike Mallin, CMSR, gave the invited presentation "Impacts of Concentrated Animal Operations on Aquatic Ecosystems" in the Science Policy Forum at the annual meeting of the American Society of Agronomy in Baltimore.

Paula Kamenish, English, presented her paper "Humanizing High Tech: Creating CD-ROMs That Serve the Arts" at the South Atlantic Modern Language Association. The paper was part of a humanities discussion circle session on "Is Technology Dehumanizing the Humanities?"

Ann Pabst, biological sciences, received $27,565 from the Office of Naval Research for her project "Blubber: An Elastic Storage System Functioning in Parallel to the Swimming Muscles of Dolphins."

P. J. Lapaire, foreign languages and literatures, gave a one-hour presentation on "Film and Literature: The Case of Philippe Djian" discussing cinematic adaptation, chromatic metaphors and colorization, characterization, visual effects and other relations between novel and film adaptation at the Foreign Language Association of North Carolina in High Point.

Patricia H. Kelley, earth sciences, and Thor Hansen, Department of Geology, Western Washington University, presented "The Effects of the Miocene and Plio-Pleistocene Extinctions on Marine Molluscs with Anti-predatory Armor" at the Geological Society of America annual meeting in Toronto, Canada. Kelley was also elected to a two-year term as president-elect of the Paleontological Society. She will then serve a two-year term as president of the Paleontological Society and a two-year term as past-president.

Lindsay Pentolfe Aegerter, English, published a profile on South African writer Ellen Kuzwayo in Postcolonial African Writers: A Bio-Bibliographical Critical Sourcebook edited by Pushpa Naidu Parekh and Siga Fatima Jagne, Greenwood Press, 1998. She also had two conference papers presented: the first, read in absentia at SAMLA in Atlanta, Georgia, examined ancestral communtities in South African and African American women's literature; the other, presented at the First International Conference on Caribbean Literature in Nassau, the Bahamas, examined memory as a force of resistance in Caribbean women's literature.

Bill Woodhouse, foreign languages and literatures, presented the paper "Hola,¿ estás sola?: Parallels in Attachment Theory" at the Villanova Conference on Foreign Language Films and Literature, Villanova, Pa.

Randall Library's Archivist Starts Faculty Scholarship Collection

Collecting a record of faculty scholarship at UNCW is extremely important to Andrew Dutka, Randall Library's archivist.

"The collection will serve as a way to recognize and preserve the accomplishments of the faculty," said Dutka, adding that students could use the acquisitions to gain a greater understanding of an individual professor's research interests.

Instead of faculty-authored books, which are available in the library's General Collection, Dutka wants to compile such items as journal articles, video and audio recordings which involved faculty contributions and photographs of artwork. Once collected, items will be stored in acid-free folders, catalogued by author and listed on the library's database.

For a university to compile a comprehensive collection of faculty work would be unique, said Dutka. "I want to take advantage of UNCW's current size to begin this project."

To date, Dutka has received approximately 500 contributions to the collection. He estimates that if current faculty donated copies of all works produced while at UNCW, the collection would have more than 6,000 entries.

To access the Faculty Scholarship Collection via the World Wide Web, go to the address http://library.uncwil.edu. Choose author under the heading "Search the Library Catalog" and type in the faculty member's name.

For more information on the Faculty Scholarship Collection, contact Andrew Dutka, archivist, at ext. 4233.

Artist Reception

A "Meet the Artist" reception will be held for Virginia Wright-Frierson from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Dec. 7 in Randall Library. CAMPUS COMMUNIQUE

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

Eighteen Faculty Receive Cahill Awards

Eighteen faculty have been awarded Charles L. Cahill Awards for faculty research and development. The selection committee, comprised of representatives of each school appointed by their respective deans, determined the winners from 33 proposals.

An annual fall competition, the awards are funded through the provost's office. This year's recipients are Midori Albert, Susan Bullers and David Lynch, sociology and anthropology; Robert Argenbright, earth sciences; Maria Cami-Vela, foreign languages and literatures; Caroline Clements, Dale Cohen, Lisa Jenkins, Len Lecci and Mariela Shirley, psychology; Edna Collins, curricular studies; Christopher Dumas and Robert Burrus, economics and finance; Steve Emslie and Ronald Sizemore, biology; James Kiddle, chemistry; Keith Newlin, English; Lloyd Rohler, communication studies; and Lisa Scribner and Seungoog Weun, management and marketing. Combined funding for all 18 projects totaled $39,458.

The Cahill Awards for faculty research and development are a long-standing university program. The award is named in honor of former Provost Charles L. Cahill in recognition of his efforts to support research and scholarly activities on campus.

B. Frank Hall Lecture Focusing on Human Rights

William A. Schabas, international human rights scholar and professor of law at the University of Montreal, Quebec, will present UNCW's B. Frank Hall Lecture at 8 p.m. Dec. 10 in the Cameron Hall auditorium. The lecture, "The Universal Declaration of Human Rights: After 50 Years, Still a Common Standard of Achievement," coincides with the actual 50th anniversary of the United Nations' Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Wicklund Pursues Federal Funding to Benefit UNCW Research

The FY 1999 omnibus funding bill passed by Congress in October included $1.3 million to support several marine research programs at UNCW.

UNCW's capabilities to conduct undersea, mariculture and coastal research were enhanced though the efforts of Sen. Lauch Faircloth and UNCW's new Office of Federal Programs with support from Chancellor James R. Leutze and Provost Marvin Moss.

Robert Wicklund, UNCW's director of federal programs, has been on the job in Washington, D.C., for approximately eight months. He searches for federal and other funds to support UNCW programs. This past year, he worked closely with Sen. Faircloth's office to secure $300,000 for the Aquarius undersea laboratory, $250,000 to continue mariculture research and $750,000 for marine monitoring and prediction.

"UNCW's growth makes it necessary to have a constant presence in Washington, D.C.," said Wicklund. "Most major universities have an office in Washington helping them secure federal funding. The scramble for federal dollars among academic, private and business interests is extremely competitive, and we need to be in the middle of it all to be successful."

Securing appropriations for UNCW's internationally ranked marine science research is important, said Wicklund. "However, I intend to be a resource for any part of the university that has a project meriting federal funding, although I still have much to learn about the university's structure and future needs."

Wicklund said he is eager to help track down financial resources for specific projects. He can also offer suggestions on contacts at the Congressional level or within a federal agency.

Wicklund maintains an office in Washington and Virginia but returns to the campus several days each month, working out of the provost's office. Prior to starting this new position, Wicklund spent two years as director of the National Undersea Research Center/UNCW.

He also served as an aide to Sen. Lowell Weicker (R, Conn.) from 1976 to 1982 and represented Sen. Weicker at the dedication of the first RV Seahawk in 1982.

To contact him at his office call 540/962-8629, and in Washington, D.C., call 202/682-9006. His e-mail address is uncwdc@aol.com.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Randall Library will observe the following schedule during fall exams: 7:30 a.m. to 2 a.m. Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday, 1 p.m. to 2 a.m. Sunday, 7:30 a.m. to 2 a.m. Monday-Wednesday and 7:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Dec. 17.

UNCW Student-athletes Continue to Excel

UNC Wilmington posted the second highest graduation rate for its student-athletes among all Division I universities in North Carolina and tied for the second highest in the Colonial Athletic Association (CAA), according to annual graduation rates report released by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

In the report, UNCW graduated 83 percent of its student-athletes who entered the university during the 1991-92 term. UNC Asheville led state institutions with 100 percent of its student-athletes graduating, while UNC Chapel Hill came in third at 66 percent.

Among CAA schools, William and Mary graduated 90 percent of its student-athletes, and UNC Wilmington followed with 83 percent. Richmond came in third with a 79 percent success rate.

"We are certainly pleased once again with this report," said Paul Miller, athletic director. "We have consistently been at or near the top of the list for graduating our student-athletes. We are very proud of this record and believe this shows our student-athletes are second to none in balancing their class work and athletics."

Holiday to Go Orders

December 17 is the deadline to place "holiday to go" orders with campus dining. To place an order or request an additional order form, call Peggy at ext. 3600.

Thompson Named UNC-TV Trustee

Hunter Thompson, UNCW's technology and outreach director, was appointed by Gov. James B. Hunt as a member of the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television Board of Trustees. His term will run until May 31, 2002.

Thompson was also chosen to be a fellow in the spring 1999 class for the Institute of Political Leadership. He will join 19 other regional leaders for five months of seminars and hands-on sessions at the Center for Creative Leadership in Greensboro.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

Ned H. Martin, chemistry, published the article "Computational Evidence of NMR Deshielding of Protons over a Carbon-Carbon Double Bond" in the current issue of the Journal of the American Chemical Society. It was coauthored by former students Noah W. Allen III and Everett K. Minga and current students Sal T. Ingrassia and Justin D. Brown. This publication is significant because it refutes a long-held theory, and it utilizes both theoretical (computational) and experimental evidence.

Michael J. Durako, biological sciences and CMSR, Wilson Freshwater, CMSR, and six of their students attended the 20th Southeastern Phycological Colloquy held at Harbor Branch Oceanographic Institution. Durako was coauthor of two papers presented by his graduate students. Jill Paxson presented the paper "Branching Frequency as an Ecoindicator in the Seagrass Thalassia testudinum." Leslie Murphy presented the paper "Physiological Effects of Salinity Fluctuations on Ruppia maritima L." Freshwater presented the paper "Characteristics of Nuclear Large-subunit rRNA Gene Sequences in Red Algae and Their Use in Phylogenetic Studies," coauthored by Suzanne Frederiq of the University of Southwestern Louisiana.

Bill Harris, earth sciences, geology graduate student Shari Mendrick and Paul Fullagar from UNCCH, presented the paper "Correlation of Onshore-Offshore Oligocene Strata Using 87Sr/86Sr, North Flank of Cape Fear Arch, North Carolina" at the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America in Toronto. Harris was invited to be a member of the editorial board of the Geological Society of America's publication Geology for 1999-2002.

Michelle Howard-Vital, public service and extended education, received $400,000 from Digital Communications for her project "Digital Communities Initiative."

Joseph Pawlik, biological sciences, published the paper "Coral Reef Sponges: Do Predatory Fishes Affect Their Distribution?" in Limnology and Oceanography. Pawlik was also coauthor on the paper "Variability in the Chemical Defense of the Sponge Chondrilla nucula Against Predatory Reef Fishes" in Marine Biology with former graduate student David Swearingen.

Steve Emslie, biological sciences, published the paper "Abandoned Penguin Colonies and Environmental Change in the Palmer Station area, Anvers Island, Antarctic Peninsula" in Antarctic Science, vol. 10, no. 3: 257-268 (1998).

Bob Buerger, environmental studies, presented the paper "Wilderness Education in the Adirondack Park: A Case Study of the Huntington Outdoor Education Center" at the sixth World Wilderness Congress held in Bangalore, India.

Ronald Vetter, computer science, published the paper "Building Video-on-Demand Servers" in the September issue of the Journal of Telecommunication Systems. The paper was coauthored with David Du and Jenwei Hsieh from the University of Minnesota and Jonathan Liu from Washington State University.

Russell Herman, mathematics and statistics, presented the talk "Rossby Wave Scattering for Piecewise-Linear Topographies" at the 18th annual Southeastern-Atlantic Regional Conference on Differential Equations in Auburn, Ala.

Michael Mallin, CMSR, gave the invited presentation "Land-use Practices and Fecal Coliform Pollution of Coastal Waters" at the 14th annual North Carolina On-site Wastewater Treatment Conference in Raleigh.

Steve Ross, CMSR, received $34,000 from the N.C. Division of Coastal Management/Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources for his project "FY 98 Supplemental Monitoring Grant to the NC NERR."

Jim Megivern, philosophy and religion, presented the address "The Relevance of a Medieval Detour" and gave an historical perspective on Christian use of the death penalty at the National Conference on Wrongful Convictions and the Death Penalty held at the Northwestern University School of Law in Chicago. The conference gathered for the first time ever men and women who spent time on death row before having their innocence established and cases overturned.

Charles Lewis, HPER, conducted a reaccreditation visit process for the National Recreation Park Association and the American Association for Leisure and Recreation (AALR) Joint Council on accreditation of parks, recreation and leisure studies curriculums at Ferrum College in Ferrum, Va. Lewis is past president of the AALR.

Maurice F. Stanley, philosophy and religion, had his paper "The Geometry of Ethics" selected to be published electronically as part of The Paideia Project: Proceedings of the 20th World Congress of Philosophy, sponsored by Boston University.

Diane Levy, Bill Atwill, Honors Program, and student Kathy Cole presented the session "The Honors Lyceum Trip: Travel for Learning" at the annual meeting of the National Collegiate Honors Council in Chicago.

John Stokes, English, delivered his paper "From Rhapsody to Requiem in the Stories of Patricia Highsmith" at the International Conference on Literature and the Visual Arts in Atlanta.

Patricia Comeaux, communication studies, presented her paper "Collaborative Learning in Web-based Instruction: Theoretical Underpinnings" at the WebNet '98 World Conference of the WWW, Internet and Intranet in Orlando.

Alessandro Bocconcelli, CMSR, presented his paper "Converting a Fishing Vessel into a Research Vessel" at the Marine Technology Society Conference in Baltimore. The paper was coauthored by Chris Powell.

National Student Exchange Program Seeks Participants

The Office of Housing and Residence Life is seeking participants for the National Student Exchange program, which provides students an opportunity to study in new settings within the United States and its territories. Students can attend 148 universities across the country including Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Virgin Islands. Students pay the same tuition and fees as they would at UNCW. To be eligible, students must maintain full-time status and have at least a 2.5 GPA.

Faculty should refer interested students to the Office of Housing and Residence Life for an application. The deadline for completed applications is Feb. 1. To arrange a classroom presentation, call ext. 3241.

A Wilmingtonian Abroad Opens at St. John's Museum

The exhibit "A Wilmingtonian Abroad: The Remarkable Life of Col. Owen Hill Kenan" will open Saturday in the Hughes Gallery of St. John's Museum of Art. Col. Kenan was the great-uncle of current UNCW Board of Trustee member Owen Kenan.

Conjuring the feel of a Paris salon at the turn of the century, the exhibit is filled with art and objects from Kenan's life that was filled with travel, adventure and disaster. Born in 1872 on the family plantation in Duplin County, Owen Hill Kenan traveled to Europe at the turn of the century, staying mostly in Paris. He collected artwork and a wide variety of objects from the capitals of the world. Between 1910 and 1919, he traveled extensively even surviving the sinking of the British luxury ship Lusitania. In 1916, Kenan volunteered to serve in the Ambulance Corps of the American Field Service in France. He received the French Croix de Guerre (Cross of War) after the ambulance he was driving was hit by a German shell. Later in the war, he joined the American Expeditionary Force's Medical Corps relief mission to Russia and Turkey.

An opening reception hosted by the museum's Volunteer Guild will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday. Admission to the reception is $2 for museum members and $5 for non-members. A variety of special events, lectures and presentations are planned during the exhibition, which runs through March 14.

This is recyclable.

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

UNCW'S Watson School of Education Forms Board of Advisors

The Watson School of Education at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington announces the formation of a new board of advisors. This board consists of 17 distinguished civic-minded leaders who are committed to education and who are willing to support the goal of achieving excellence in teacher and administrator preparations.

Board members will meet several times annually with the dean of the Watson School of Education, Robert E. Tyndall. The board's inaugural meeting was held Oct. 8.

The purpose of the Watson Board of Advisors is to help ensure that the Watson School of Education will serve as the preeminent education college in the state, the region and beyond by helping to develop strategic long-range plans and serving as a voice of advocacy in the broader community.

The board of advisors consists of an honorary and executive board. The 10-member executive board includes: James Ballantine, president of Sunbelt Business Brokers; District Court Judge Rebecca Blackmore, Fifth Judicial District, New Hanover County; Frank Capra, Jr., president and CEO of Screen Gems Studios; Jeff Gallop, president of Hillside Broadcasting, WWAY-TV 3, Adelaide Daniels Key of Asheville, founder of the Adelaide Daniels Key Foundation; Teena Smith Little of Southern Pines, N. C. General Assembly; Betty McComas, volunteer for the Rape Crisis Center, Cape Fear Academy and St. Johns Museum of Art; Bambi MacRae; Raymond A. Stone of Kittrell and founding president of Sandhills Community College; and Jerry Wainwright, UNCW men's basketball coach and former public school teacher.

Honorary board of advisor members include: Wesley M. Beckner, senior vice president and city executive of BB&T; Doris Bryant, founder of the Sunshine Ladies Foundation; Wilmington Mayor Hamilton Hicks; Dorothy Marshall, registrar emerita of UNCW; Tom Rabon of Holly Springs, vice president, Global Public Affairs, Lucent Technologies; Robert Warwick, a distinguished alumnus, previous member of the UNCW Board of Trustees and director of the Cape Fear Community College Foundation; and Monica Wells, family representative for the Watson School of Education namesake.

The primary mission of the Watson School of Education is to develop highly competent professionals to serve in teaching and other educational leadership roles in southeastern North Carolina, the state and national. The school is committed to achieving excellence in teacher and administrator preparation through its 24 programs at the baccalaureate and master's levels. To achieve this goal, the school provides education grounded in theoretical and empirical bodies of knowledge, develops the ability to use knowledge to improve schools and to enhance the learning of children and youths and fosters each graduate's commitment to personal and professional development.

The school's mission is consistent with the university's commitment to teaching, research and service. These parts of the tradition are interdependent with the pursuit of educational excellence and are reflected by a commitment to the belief that professional educators must demonstrate principled and theoretically guided practice, scholarly inquiry, effective decision making and devotion to human service.

Holidays Perfect Time to Go Hog Wild

Give the gift of opportunity this holiday season - the chance to win a 1999 Harley-Davidson Sportster XLH 883. The UNCW Alumni Association is sponsoring a raffle that will allow one lucky ticket holder to win the Harley during the UNCW Alumni Homecoming Celebration Jan. 30 at the Wilmington Hilton. Tickets are $5 each and make great stocking stuffers. To obtain tickets, call ext. 2682 or stop by the University Union information center. Proceeds from the raffle will support the alumni association's scholarship and outreach efforts. The motorcycle will be displayed at various campus locations and home basketball games prior to being awarded.

Graduate Thesis Defense

Jeffrey K. Moegling, graduate student in chemistry, will defend his thesis "Application of a Chemiluminescence Method for the Analysis of H_2O_2 in Surface Waters with Varying Organic Matter Concentrations" at 3 p.m. today in the new Science Building, Room 132.

Holiday to Go Orders

Today is the deadline to place "holiday to go" orders with campus dining. To place an order, call Peggy at ext. 3600.

Information Technology Standards Council Update

At its Dec. 11 meeting, the Interim Information Technology Standards Council decided that UNCW would continue to support both Netscape and Explorer as internet browser software for the foreseeable future. The decision was a response to the possibility that Microsoft's Windows98 might abandon support of Java rather than comply with a recent court order that Microsoft honor its contract with Sun Microsystems and support the suite of standard Java programs. This issue was raised by Randall Library, which uses Java, Java Applets and Javascript for its primary functions and has been preparing to migrate all of its library system functions to Web-based, Java-enhanced products.

The council also approved the use of Wordperfect as an addition to the standard Word software for those units that desire to have both, and it acted on several requests for exceptions from the standard microcomputer platform recently designated for the campus. Units that wish to request exceptions but that have not yet done so should send the completed appeals form as soon as possible to Jo Ann Seiple, interim chair, Interim Information Technology Standards Council.

Cookbook Fund-raiser

Copies of the Coastal Cooking Azalea Style are on sale for $10 each with proceeds benefitting the Azalea Festival Youth Committee. To purchase a cookbook, contact Woody Sutton at ext, 7074 or e-mail suttonc.

Note of Appreciation

Patsy Larrick, special events director, would like to thank everyone who served as commencement assistants Dec. 5. Commencement assistants were vital in making the ceremony a memorable event for graduates and their families.

UNCW Bowling League Update

The UNCW Mixed League, which bowls at 5:45 p.m. Thursdays at Cardinal Lanes on Shipyard Boulevard, has six teams competing this season. As of the 13th week, the team "Ne'er a Doubt" is in first place, with "Tighten Up" in second and the "Wizards" in third. Members of "Ne'er a Doubt" are Harry Whitted, auxiliary services, Muriel Rockwell, student academic support, Lynn DiFiore and Vera Sykes. Members of "Tighten Up" are Phillip Brown and Becky Chilcote, advancement, Liz Johnson, accounting, and Brenda Teague, enrollment affairs. Members of the "Wizards" are Linda Ferrell, enrollment affairs, Larry Ferrell, Leo Hammond and Barbara Hammond. In addition, the following UNCW employees are participating in the league: Mike Abernathy, financial aid; Debbie Easterling, auxiliary services; and Ray Pitts, Chris Hughes, Carol Pilgrim, Carol Clements and Steve Dworkin, psychology.

Newman Center Moves Sunday Mass to Campus

Starting at 5 p.m. Jan. 10, the Newman Catholic Campus Ministry will hold its weekly Sunday evening masses at the Warwick Center, Ballroom Four. "We hope this move will welcome and accommodate even more students, faculty and staff," said Mary Pat Fourqurean, campus minister. Other programs will continue at the Newman Catholic Campus Ministry House, 4802 College Acres Drive.

Wilmington Boys Choir Auditions

The Wilmington Boys Choir will hold auditions for its spring season Dec. 18 at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 16th and Market Streets. There will be an open rehearsal for observation from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. with auditions immediately following. For more information, contact Sandra Errante, director, at 799-5073.

Holiday Safety Tips

With the arrival of the holiday season, Lisa Hedgecock, university police, offers the following tips for a safer, more enjoyable time.

Holiday travelers should set up an automatic timer to turn lights on and off because it gives the appearance of someone being home, said Hedgecock. Also, alert a neighbor to watch the home or sign up with local law enforcement for home patrol, and stop mail and paper delivery or have a neighbor pick them up.

When going out for the evening, pay extra attention to locking doors and windows, Hedgecock advised. Also, leave lights on and a radio or television playing, and don't display gifts where they can be seen from the outside. "This may prove too tempting of a target," said Hedgecock.

Not only should steps be taken to protect homes during the holidays, but Hedgecock offered suggestions for holiday shoppers. "Park in well-lit areas and avoid parking near vans, bushes and other areas where someone could be concealed," she said. Also, place packages and valuables in the car's trunk. When paying for purchases, use checks or credit cards, and to deter pickpockets and purse snatchers, avoid carrying too many packages at once. Hedgecock advised teaching children to ask a security guard or store clerk for help should they become separated from parents.

Holiday shopping offers criminals an opportunity to take advantage of holiday spirit and generosity, said Hedgecock. "Criminals may go door-to-door posing as couriers delivering gifts or soliciting contributions for nonexistent charities," said Hedgecock. "Ask for identification and find out how donations will be used, and if you aren't satisfied with the answer don't contribute."

Nomination Deadlines for Teaching Awards

January 22 is the deadline for nominations for the Chancellor's Teaching Excellence Awards, the Distinguished Teaching Professorship Awards and the Board of Trustees Teaching Excellence Award.

Designed to recognize all aspects of excellence in teaching and teaching-related activities, up to six Chancellor's Teaching Excellence Awards are presented annually consisting of three to the College of Arts and Sciences and one each to the Cameron School of Business, Watson School of Education and the School of Nursing. Nominations should be submitted to the respective dean's office.

Distinguished Teaching Professorship Awards exemplify UNCW's commitment to excellence in teaching and teaching-related activities by recognizing faculty who have made a profound contribution to higher education through their dedication and service to students. Nominations should be submitted to the Office of the Provost.

All award winners will be announced at fall 1999 convocation.

December Payroll

Employees normally paid the last working day of the month will be paid Friday. Paychecks may be picked up at the cashier's office starting at 8:15 a.m. Direct-deposit pay stubs will be distributed through campus mail today. Note that the receipt of direct-deposit pay stubs does not imply that accounts have been credited prior to payday.

Calendar Year-end Tax-deductible Contributions

Anyone wanting to make a 1998 tax-deductible contribution to UNCW is reminded to submit donations to the Office of Advancement Services, Alderman Hall, Room 104, by the close of business Dec. 23. The university will be closed for the holidays beginning Dec. 24.

Holiday Party

The chancellor's holiday party will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. tonight in Wagoner Hall.

Increase in Returned Check Fee

Effective Jan. 1, the charge for returned checks will increase to $25 per returned check.

Communique Holiday Schedule

Today's issue of the Campus Communique will be the last issue published prior to the holiday break. Printing will resume with the Jan. 7 edition.

AFLAC Supplemental Health Plans

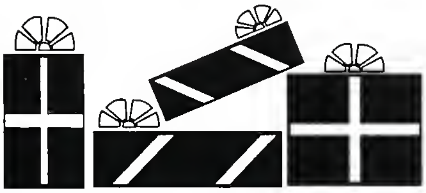
December is open enrollment period for supplemental health coverage offered through AFLAC against cancer, dread disease and intensive care. For more information, contact Elizabeth at ext. 3713.

Shared Leave

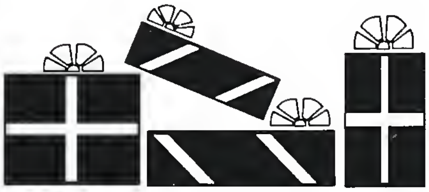
Shared leave donations are needed for Lucy Canty and Anthony Gause, physical plant; and Lori Preiss, human resources. Send donated vacation leave to Willina in human resources.

Welcome

Please welcome the following new employees: Cynthia Anderson, financial aid and Karlene Jennings, advancement.



HAPPY HOLIDAYS



FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

Frank Trimble, communication studies, had four performances of Act I of his operetta Fly Wright!: The Story of Two Brothers presented at the N.C. State Fair. The performances were produced by the First Flight Centennial Commission, a North Carolina-based group charged with fostering educational and entertainment activities related to flight, culminating with a 100th anniversary celebration in the year 2003.

Carole Tallant and Frank Trimble, communication studies, along with Linda Welden from Appalachian State University, conducted an audition workshop for 41 high school juniors at the 1998 North Carolina Theatre Conference convention in Lenoir.

W. Frank Ainsley, earth sciences, served as local arrangements coordinator and meeting host for the 30th annual Conference of the Pioneer America Society held in Wilmington. An opening reception was held at the Bellamy Mansion. Paper presentation sessions were held at St. Thomas Preservation Hall and the City Club (DeRossett House). Ainsley, assisted by local architectural historian Ed Turberg, led an all-day field trip through Pender County. The tour focused on the vernacular and folk architecture of the region, highlighted by a visit to the Sloop Point House, North Carolina's oldest frame structure.

Jack Levy, chemistry, had the paper "A Quantum Chemical and Electrostatic Study of Alkyl and Substituted Benzenonium Cations and Related Molecules: The Effect of Atomic Charge Distribution on Carbocation Energy and Geometry" accepted for publication in the journal Structural Chemistry.

Mitch Conover, economics and finance, had three papers accepted for presentation at the 1998 Southern Finance Association meeting.

Amy Zeng, production and decision sciences, presented her paper "Allocating On-line Feedback Quality Control for Serial Production Lines" in the Models for Quality Control track at the 1998 national meeting of Decision Sciences Institute in Las Vegas. The paper was also published in the conference proceedings. In addition, she chaired the session "Benchmarking and Total Quality Management."

William Cooper, chemistry, received $4,500 from the U.S. Saudi Arabian Joint Commission on Economic Cooperation for his project "Training of Chemical Technicians in Pollutant Analysis."

Eleanor Covan, sociology and gerontology coordinator, and Barbara Waxman, English, attended the national convention of the Gerontological Society of America in Philadelphia where Waxman delivered the paper "The Partnership of Autobiography and Reader-Response Theory: Challenging Ageism and Reconceptualizing Later Life."

Mark Galizio, Julian Keith and William Overman, psychology, participated in the annual meeting of the Society for Neuroscience in Los Angeles. Overman co-authored the poster "Double Dissociation of Function Between Adult Males and Females in Two Brain Systems" with students Becky Reavis, Steven Hendrix, Wendy Exposito and Carrie Dezio-Cottle. Galizio and Keith co-authored the poster "Repeated Acquisition in the Morris Swim Task: Effects of Morphine and Pentobarbital" with students Will Mansfield, Elise Redmond, James Hummel and Pearl Schroy.

Elizabeth Hines, earth sciences, attended the 52nd annual meeting of the Southeastern Division of the Association of American Geographers (SEDAAG) in Memphis, Tenn. She coordinated players for North Carolina's World Geography Bowl team, who defeated Alabama in a tie-breaker to win the championship following wins against Virginia, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Tennesse and West Virginia. North Carolina team members included graduate and undergraduate students from UNC Chapel Hill, UNC Charlotte, ECU, UNC Pembroke, Appalachian State and UNCW. Dennis Everette, a geography major representing UNCW, traveled to Memphis through funding from UNCW's Student Honor's Program. Hines was also a member of the SEDAAG Student Honor's Competition at the Memphis meeting.

Eric Bolen, biological sciences, received $21,678 from N.C. State University/N.C. Department of Transportation for his project "Evaluation of Roadside Wildlife Management Areas."

Larry Cahoon, biology, received $14,850 from NOVARTIS Crop Protection Inc. for his project "Isolation and Culture Microorganisms from Extreme Habitats for NOVARTIS Inc."

Bruce C. McKinney, communication studies, was elected first vice president of the Carolinas Communication Association. McKinney also presented the paper "The UNCW Mediation Program: A Collaborative Effort Between a Public Mediation Center and a State University" at the National Communication Association Convention in New York City. At the convention, McKinney was elected first vice president of the Peace and Conflict Communication Association and will be responsible for planning the commission's participation at the National Communication Association's convention in Seattle November 2000.

Louis Adcock, chemistry, published the paper "The Egg in the Bottle Revisited: Air Pressure and Amonton's Law (Charles' Law)" in the December issue of The Journal of Chemical Education.

Stephen Mastro, CMSR/NURC, was elected to the state board for the N.C. Society of Certified Public Managers for a two-year term beginning in January. Members of the society who would like to bring issues to the attention of the board should contact Mastro at the e-mail address mastros.

Brooks Dodson, English, spoke at a meeting of the League of Women Voters on the subject of "Laughter and Sex among the British Victorians."

Khoon Koh, HPER, has been appointed associate editor of the International Journal of Hospitality and Tourism Administration.

Philip Furia, English, presented papers at the George Gershwin Centenary Symposium at the Graduate Center of the City University of New York and at the Frank Sinatra Conference at Hofstra University. Furia's new book Irving Berlin: A Life in Song was published by Schirmer Books, the music division of Simon & Schuster/Macmillan.

Ned Martin, chemistry, received $6,915 from East Carolina University and the National Science Foundation for his project "Probing the Effects of Solute-solvent Interactions and Solvent-free Volume on the 13C Spin-lattice Relaxation of C60."

Lawrence Cahoon, biological sciences, received $91,840 from the North Carolina Fishery Resource Grant Program for his project "Shrimp and Crab Trawling Impacts on Estuarine Soft-bottom Organisms."

Celebrate Wilmington! Walk of Fame Inducts Architect Henry Bacon

The Celebrate Wilmington! Walk of Fame will honor architect Henry Bacon as its fourth inductee at a ceremony 5:30 p.m. Dec. 31 at the walk site located on Water Street between the Hilton and the Cotton Exchange.

Bacon was born Nov. 28, 1866, in Watseka, Ill., and moved to the Lower Cape Fear when he was 10 years old. From 1876 until 1880, the Bacons lived in Southport (formerly known as Smithville) where his father, Henry Bacon, Sr., supervised the construction of a dam to close New Inlet near Fort Fisher. (The project is known locally as "the Rocks.")

The family moved to Wilmington in 1880. Young Henry - his friends and family called him Harry - attended Tileston School (Ann Street) and studied for a year at the University of Illinois. He followed his father and brother, Francis, into the building arts and in 1885, at the age of 18, began work with McKim, Mead & White in New York City, the most prestigious architectural firm of the day, as an architect-in-training.

In 1889, young Bacon won the prestigious Rotch Traveling Scholarship, which enabled him to tour and study in Europe. He visited Assos, an archaeological site in Turkey, where his brother, Francis, also an architect, was on the excavation team. In Europe, he studied, painted and drew details of the ruins of ancient Greece and Rome, perfecting his eye for the classical detail that he used later in his architectural designs.

When Bacon returned to America, he stayed another six years with McKim, Mead & White before leaving in 1897 to establish a partnership with James Brite. In 1903, Bacon left the partnership and began an independent practice.

Bacon's stylistic ranges parallel those of his mentor Charles McKim, focusing on classical and shingle-style designs. In addition to designing buildings, he collaborated with sculptors, developing the concepts, settings and bases. His designs accompany the works of sculptors such as Augustus Saint-Gaudens and Daniel Chester French. In Wilmington, Bacon designed the base for Frank Packer's Confederate Memorial at South Third and Dock streets.

Bacon attained such respect as an architect that he won the commission to design the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C., when he was only 39 years old. For his inspired design, he received the American Institute of Architect's highest honor, the gold medal.

Bacon maintained his boyhood friendships and designed buildings in Wilmington for some of his companions. For Donald MacRae, he created the shingle-style house at 125 South Third Street (now the parish house of St. James Church); for Hugh MacRae, he planned alterations to the Wood-MacRae House at 713 Market Street (now demolished); and for Agnes MacRae and Walter Parsley, he designed Live Oaks on Masonboro Sound. Live Oaks, constructed of beach shell concrete, is an octagonal plan surmounted by a lantern, which, when open, takes advantage of the prevailing breezes and allows fresh air to circulate through the house.

At the time of his death in 1924 of cancer, Henry Bacon was one of the best-known architects in the nation. His Lincoln Memorial is a landmark; its facsimile appears on the five dollar bill and the penny. He considered Wilmington his home and is buried in Oakdale Cemetery.

Bacon's star in the Walk of Fame will be placed alongside preservationist/naturalist Hugh Morton who was inducted in the spring of 1998. Also on the Walk of Fame are professional football player Roman Gabriel (1996) and visual artist Minnie Evans (1997).

Celebrate Wilmington! is a joint partnership between the Arts Council of the Lower Cape Fear and UNCW to celebrate the arts and promote Wilmington's Walk of Fame.

It recognizes the contributions of the citizens who have lived, worked and/or enriched the Cape Fear region and who have attained national recognition in the arts, business, education, literature, broadcasting/television/journalism, sports, science, medicine, religion, politics/government and the military.

For more information, contact Don Fishero at the Arts Council of the Lower Cape Fear at 762-4223.

A Slave Ship Speaks

The Cape Fear Museum will host the traveling exhibition "A Slave Ship Speaks: The Wreck of the Henrietta Marie" from Jan. 15 through April 18 in its East Gallery. The critically acclaimed exhibition uses artifacts from the vessel as a focal point to examine the transatlantic slave trade. The remains of the ship, which wrecked off Florida's coast in 1700, were discovered in 1972. The national tour is sponsored by General Motors.

Objects recovered from the wreck include the ship's bell, iron shackles, glass beads, pewter ware, elephant tusks and weapons.

COUNTDOWN ON THE CAPE FEAR

Countdown on the Cape Fear '98 is a major visual and performing arts festival committed to broadening the public's awareness of the arts through an innovative and diverse New Year's Eve program that is accessible and affordable to all.

There will be music, song, theater, stories and spectacles for every age and interest imaginable to enjoy in a safe, alcohol-free setting.

The celebration will take place in both indoor and outdoor locations such as churches, public buildings and cultural centers in historic downtown Wilmington.

These festivities will be held from 6 to 10 p.m., and a purchase of a button provides general admission to the events. The festivities continue at the main stage with live musical entertainment from 9 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. When the New Year is drawing near, the crowd will count down the few remaining seconds of 1998 at the grand finale of fireworks from the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial.

Countdown on the Cape Fear is sponsored by WECT-TV 6 and McDonalds. Presenting sponsors are CP&L and WGNI. Venue and performance sponsors are UNCW, New Hanover Regional Medical Center, Coca-Cola and Carolina Ford Dealers.

Harris Teeter is the official outlet to purchase buttons at a cost of $5 each or $3 with a VIC card through Dec. 31. Buttons are also available at WECT-TV or WGNI studios for $5 through Dec. 31 and at the Wilmington Light Infantry building from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Dec. 31 or at each venue beginning at 5:30 p.m. Dec. 31. Children under six get a free button.

The Seahawk Shuttle and New Hanover Regional Medical Center vans will provide bus service from Westfield Shoppingtown Independence Mall to Second and Princess Streets from 5:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. Dec. 31. The cost is $1 per person, round trip with Countdown button, children under 6 free. Without a Countdown button, the cost is $2 per person.

Reserve Reading List Deadline

Faculty teaching courses during spring semester 1999 should submit reserve reading lists by Dec. 18. Materials are processed in the order received. Lists may be sent to Carolyn Andrews at Randall Library or via e-mail to andrewsc. For more information, call the reserve desk at ext. 3790.

List Work-study Positions

Departments and offices are reminded to list open work-study positions for the spring semester as soon as possible with the Office of Career Services using HR 1.62 (Job Order Form).

University Union/Warwick Center Hours

The University Union and Warwick Center will observe the following hours of operation during the holiday break: 7 a.m to 5 p.m. Friday and Monday through Wednesday and closed Saturday and Sunday and Dec. 24 through Jan. 3. Regular hours resume Jan. 4.

Pre-taxing of Medical Insurance Deductions

Premiums for medical insurance are deducted from paychecks before social security, federal and state taxes are calculated. For most employees, this represents a 30 percent or greater savings. Currently, 100 percent of employees who have medical deductions take advantage of the tax savings.

Employees who wish not to take advantage of the tax savings during 1999, must make an election to have deductions on a before-tax basis prior to Jan. 10. To request an election form or receive additional information regarding pre-taxing of medical benefits, call Elizabeth Greene at ext. 3713 or Kay Fryar ext. 3698.

Administrative Procedures Update

Revisions to the following policies in the Administrative Policies and Procedures Manual have been approved:

TIAA/CREF Representatives to Hold Meetings

Representatives from TIAA/CREF will be on campus on Jan. 26 and 27 for workshops and individual conferences with employees. Group presentations will be held from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Jan. 26 and 3 to 4 p.m. Jan. 27 on available investment and retirement options. All current TIAA participants should plan to attend one of these sessions, which will be held in the human resources training room. Forty-five minute appointment blocks are available for individual conferences from 10:45 a.m. Jan. 26 through 2 p.m. Jan. 27. Call Willina Mitchell at ext. 3006 to register to attend a presentation or to sign up for an individual appointment.

Winter Break Timekeeping

In completing leave records for winter break, remember that Dec. 24, 25, 28 and Jan. 1 are holidays and Dec. 29, 30 and 31 are taken as vacation days.

SPA permanent and probationary employees who are required to work on the designated holidays earn holiday premium pay as well as compensatory time to enable them to take time off at a later date. SPA temporary employees who are required to work will earn their regular hourly rate plus holiday premium.

Employees who have accrued compensatory time may use it in lieu of vacation leave for the three required vacation days. Supervisors may advance compensatory time to employees who do not have sufficient vacation accrual and where the time is scheduled to be made up in a week where extra hours would not result in overtime — or in a week where overtime work would otherwise be required. Direct questions to Alice Maile at ext. 3392 or Kay Fryar at ext. 3698.

Annual Leave Audit

Human resources' annual audit of leave records is scheduled for January. Employees should have up-to-date time sheets or leave earnings records to the designated leave representatives in their departments by the first work day in January. Human resources will send pre-audit check lists to departments during the first week of January. Direct questions to Alice Maile at ext. 3392 or Kay Fryar at ext. 3698.

Student Time Sheet Deadline

Due to winter break, student time sheets for hours worked in December should be turned into payroll no later than 3 p.m. Dec. 23. Be certain that time sheets are signed by both the employee and supervisor and are accompanied by the recap sheet.

FACULTY/STAFF PROFILE

Donald "Fritz" Kapraun Loves Presenting Interdisciplinary Curriculum

by Linda Grattafiori

Development of interdisciplinary curriculum is on the upswing at UNCW thanks in part to Donald "Fritz" Kapraun who is teaching three interdisciplinary courses this fall.

"Every semester I teach something different," said Kapraun, one of three winners of the Distinguished Teaching Professorship awards at this year's fall convocation. "I love the challenge of being on the line with new material."

Kapraun's excitement for teaching is contagious.

"He doesn't limit you or reduce you to a particular level of expectation," said Steffany Williams, UNCW honors student. "Whatever a student's ability, Dr. Kapraun puts it out there, within reach. He makes the theories of scientists come to life, and you remember!"

A graduate in botany from the University of Texas at Austin in 1969, this full professor wrote two of the first texts on seaweeds of the Southeast in 1980 and 1984.

"Information about seaweeds in this area was nil," Kapraun said. "I collected the seaweeds, did the photography and illustrations. It was a one-man show."

In 1990, Kapraun received UNCW's first Award for Faculty Scholarship now presented annually to recognize excellence in scholarship, research and creativity.

The Chancellor's Teaching Excellence award went to Kapraun in 1997.

"Looking back over a 27-year career, I realized that no one is going to put up a shrine to my awards, research or publications," Kapraun said. "I looked for a new direction. For me, it was involvement in interdisciplinary programs. I want my memorial to be these students who have the experience of a class with me."

With "a bit more maturity and sophistication," Kapraun went back into the trenches this semester with University 101, a course he calls "boot camp."

> "Whatever a student's ability, Dr. Kapraun puts it out there, within reach."
> Steffany Williams,
> UNCW honors student.

Designed for students at risk, University 101 teaches students structured study habits, use of the library and appropriate socialization outlets. Students research a career that would be in harmony with their personality profile. They interview people plus incorporate library and Internet resources into a report.

"Professors need to be encouraged to participate in interdisciplinary programs," Kapraun said, "with the assurance they will be evaluated fairly if their efforts do not fall solely within the realm of a particular department."
For UNCW's honors program this fall, Kapraun developed a specialty course, Biology 205, on genetic evolution that investigates how organisms evolve by changing their DNA.

Kapraun's dramatic teaching style may find its best avenue in another interdisciplinary course he developed, Environmental Science 195, an introduction to environmental science.

"I walk in the first day and say, listen up! This is a very serious course because what we're trying to do here is save the world. This is a handbook for survival of our planet, our culture and you as individuals. I'm going to tell you what you desperately need to know, and I will do everything I can to help you.

"I give them a set of notes for each class, so all they have to do is listen as I explain the significance and how it all relates. Every lecture is a story that fits together in units like the chapters of a book. There is nothing to memorize because it's understandable."

With a class of 205 students, Kapraun feels there is no way they can respond to him in such a large group. He holds small group review sessions before and after exams and thinks university life should offer that service to students.

In spite of his involvement with his students, Kapraun has managed to make a life for himself off campus as well. He does consulting work with biotechnology companies and this year will travel to the Philippines, Canada, California and Venezuela.

His love for music and art is manifested through attendance at the Wilmington Concert Series and St. John's Museum of Art programs.

Taking art classes at the museum led to the formation of Kapraun's small business Architectural Portraits. Three of his architectural drawings are on exhibit at a juried show in Tucson, Ariz.

Will Kapraun be with UNCW beyond the year 2002, which would mark his 30th year teaching?

University Advancement Vol. XXVIII, No. 23 January 7, 1999 Phillip Brown, editor

Athletic Hall of Fame to Induct Five New Members January 23

A founding pioneer of the program, two benefactors, a member of the 1961 national junior college baseball championship team and the school's first NCAA provisional qualifier in cross country highlight the second class of UNC Wilmington's Athletic Hall of Fame that will be honored Jan. 23.

T. Eugene Dew, Estell C. Lee, Dr. William P. Nixon Jr., David K. Miller and Amy S. Jackson will be recognized at a reception and a luncheon at 11:30 a.m. at the Warwick Center Ballroom. Tickets are $10 per person and can be purchased from the Seahawk Club office or the athletic ticket office in Trask Coliseum.

This year's ceremony will raise the total number inducted to 11 members. Last year's inaugural class recognized William J. Brooks (administrator), Raiford G. Trask Sr. (benefactor), Sam O'Leary (men's swimming and diving), Janet Johnson (women's swimming and diving) and Carl Willis (baseball).

Dew, a native of Delco, attended N.C. State University and served in the U.S. Army and U.S. Air Force prior to his success in the petroleum business. He helped UNCW's first athletic director, William J. Brooks, build the program. Dew, who will be inducted posthumously, worked closely with former president William H. Randall, former chancellor William H. Wagoner, former provost Charles Cahill and Brooks in promoting the program.

A staunch UNCW supporter for more than 40 years, Estell C. Lee will be honored for her many contributions, both as a volunteer and a donor. She established an endowed scholarship that provides financial assistance for two student-athletes each year and has been very active in numerous civic and community organizations. In addition to her involvement with the Seahawk Club, Lee has been a long-time member of the UNCW Alumni Association, the Cameron School of Business Executive Board and the UNCW Foundation Board.

Wilmington College enjoyed tremendous success as a baseball power in the early 1960s, and David K. Miller was one of the primary reasons.

Miller, a second baseman, ignited UNCW's national championship run in 1961 and helped the Seahawks finish second in 1962. In the process, he collected first-team All-America honors in 1961.

A Woodruff, S.C., native, Miller helped Wake Forest win the Atlantic Coast Conference title in 1963 and was drafted by the New York Mets in 1964. He played professionally for the Mets briefly before returning to UNCW as an assistant coach for Brooks from 1965-78.

Miller has held various positions on campus including chair of the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Department, assistant dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs and associate vice chancellor for academic affairs/enrollment manager. He is currently director of Summer School Sessions.

Few individuals have been more responsible for the early metamorphosis of the UNC Wilmington athletic program than local physician and philanthropist Dr. William P. Nixon Jr., who played collegiate baseball at Atlantic Christian College. After completing his medical degree at Duke University, he became the founder and president of the Southeastern Dialysis Center in Wilmington. Nixon served as president of the Seahawk Club in 1985 and has held various positions in the organization. The athletic program's base of operations, the William P. Nixon Jr. Athletic Annex, is named in his honor.

Amy S. Jackson, a standout for the cross country and track and field teams in the early 1990s, will become the youngest member of the UNCW Athletic Hall of Fame. A financial analyst residing in Denver, Colo., Jackson made a name for herself and the Seahawk running program during her career from 1990-93. In 1993, she became the first NCAA provisional qualifier in the program's history.

Jackson, also a junior national qualifier, captured the CAA Championship in both the 5,000 and 10,000 meters. She earned All-East honors in the 5,000 meters and was presented the Thomas V. Moseley Outstanding Award as the program's top athlete in 1993. In addition, she won the Chancellor's Cup Award in 1993, the program's top academic award.

Tangram Executive Talks on Year 2000 Crisis

W. Christopher Jesse, CEO of Tangram Enterprise Solutions Inc. and author of A Journey Through Oz - The Business Leaders' Road Map to Tracking Information Technology Assets and Teaching Chipmunks to Dance: The Business Leaders' Guide to Making the Distributed Enterprise Year 2000 Compliant, will speak on the year 2000 crisis at noon Friday in Cameron Hall auditorium. This lecture is part of the UNCW Cameron School of Business 20th anniversary executive series focusing on information technology issues and opportunities.

Jesse, who in March 1990 joined Tangram Enterprise Solutions Inc. based in Cary, has been instrumental in promoting and directing an innovative company-wide effort to pioneer state-of-the art information technology (IT) asset tracking solutions for major corporations worldwide. As a result, Tangram developed Asset InsightTM, the first business software solution to inventory, track and manage distributed IT assets on an enterprise-wide basis.

Jesse's latest book, Teaching Chipmunks to Dance: The Business Leaders' Guide to Making the Distributed Enterprise Year 2000 Compliant, examines the year 2000 risks in the distributed enterprise of workstations and servers and provides a six-step methodology for organizations seeking to bring their enterprises into compliance.

UNC-TV Rebroadcasting Walters' Documentary

The documentary The Firehouse Women will be rebroadcast at 10:30 p.m. Friday by UNC-TV, seen locally on Time Warner Cable Channel 6. Produced and directed by Ellen Walters, coordinator of the Film Studies Program, the 30-minute documentary is about hard work, family, compassion, God and the power of song.

UNCW Hosts Black Issues Forum

UNCW will host a town hall meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in Cameron Hall auditorium which will be videotaped by UNC Public Television's "Black Issues Forum." UNC-TV's Jay Holloway will moderate the panel programs that will be broadcast as two segments at a later date.

The first program, "The 100 Year Commemoration," will discuss the purpose of the remembrance of the 1898 Wilmington Race Riots. Panelists include Bertha Todd, Rhonda Bellamy and Bolton Anthony. The second discussion, "Political Inheritance of 1898," will feature a discussion on representation of the minority community in Wilmington and will include reflections on the 1898 coup. Panelists are Harvard Jennings, Harper Peterson and Katherine Moore.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

Martin Posey and Troy Alphin, biological sciences, gave the invited talk "Oyster Beds as Essential Habitat for Decapods and Fish" at the second International Conference on Shellfish Restoration. They also helped coordinate a discussion session on restoration of oyster habitats and presented the poster "Fractal Dimension and Complexity of Oyster Reefs as Modifiers of Fish Utilization." In addition, Posey is co-investigator on the project "Shrimp and Crab Trawling Impacts on Estuarine Soft-bottom Organisms" which was funded for $91,840 by the N.C. Fishery Resource Grant Program.

Wade Watanabe, CMSR, received $35,000 from UNC SeaGrant for his project "Growth and Feed Utilization of Wild-caught, Juvenile Black Sea Bass Fed Practical Diets in a Recirculating Tank System Under a Semi-controlled Temperature Regime."

Ron Everett, David Lynch, Lynne Snowden, Darrell Irwin and Jeff Spears, criminal justice, attended the 50th annual meeting of the American Society of Criminology in Washington, D.C. Everett chaired the panel on "Judicial and Prosecutorial Discretion under the Federal Sentencing Guidelines" and presented the paper "Awarding the Reduction for Acceptance of Responsibility in Federal Sentencing: The Interaction Between Race/Ethnicity and Guideline Sentencing Factors," which was co-authored by Roger Wojtkiewicz of LSU. Lynch presented the paper "Perceived Judicial Hostility to Criminal Trials: Effects on Public Defenders in General and On Their Relationships With Clients and Prosecutors in Particular." Snowden co-authored the paper "Do Immigrants Cause Crime? An Analysis of Public Opinion Using the 1996 General Social Survey." with Steve Barkan from the University of Maine.

Jo Ann Seiple, arts and sciences, was one of 20 women college and university administrators invited to participate in the 1998 American Council on Education (ACE) National Forum at the National Center for Higher Education in Washington, D.C. Sponsored by ACE's Office of Women in Higher Education, the program was the fourth in a new series of national forums designed to identify and promote women leaders to higher levels of academic administration. Seiple and the other participants were nominated by members of ACE for their recognized leadership ability and accomplishments, as well as their potential for continued growth and further contributions to higher education.

Thomas Potts, NURC, was co-author of the paper "Influence of Habitat on the Density, Species Richness, and Size Distribution of Grouper at Elbow Reef, Florida Keys" in the Bulletin of Marine Science.

CP&L Grant to Fund Principals' Academy at Watson School of Education

Research calling the middle grades the "weak link in American education" has put unprecedented pressure on middle school principals to better prepare their students academically, according to Robert E. Tyndall, dean of the Watson School of Education.

In response to this need, Dean Tyndall announced that the Watson School of Education would establish the Executive Leadership Academy for School Principals: An Institute of Dynamic and Responsive Leadership. A $30,000 grant from the CP&L Foundation will fund the establishment of the principals' academy. The grant check was presented to Dean Tyndall Monday by Gayle Van Velsor, CP&L'S Eastern Region vice president.

"This academy will provide an opportunity for 25 middle grade principals and their superintendents from schools in New Hanover, Brunswick, Pender and Onslow counties to come together and focus on specific areas which will lead to improvements in student performance," said Dean Tyndall. He added that while established programs exist for training school administrators, opportunities for middle school principals are rare.

Targeting the academy for middle grade principals was based upon research publicized by the Southern Regional Education Board in the March 1998 publication Education's Weak Link: Student Performance in the Middle Grades. According to the board's findings, downturns in students' performance from grades three to six are striking, and by the eighth grade, the loss in student performance has increased to a point that makes it is impossible for secondary teachers to recover.

"This partnership between CP&L and the Watson School of Education will attempt to address this critical need," said Dean Tyndall. He said the school leaders will work with business, management and education specialists who can provide expertise in planning, assessment and strategic vision to develop creative approaches to improve student performance.

"Nothing is more critical to the future success of our region than the quality of our children's education," Van Velsor said. "CP&L believes that this program can lead to positive changes for our school systems. We're proud to support the efforts of the faculty and staff of the Watson School of Education in this important area."

In addition to the grant from the CP&L Foundation, the Watson School of Education and the Consortium for the Advancement for Public Education are contributing $15,000 toward this project.

During the check presentation ceremonies, CP&L was also recognized for its monetary support to the Seahawk Club and the Cameron School of Business.

Countdown to Going Hog Wild at Homecoming

The countdown is on. In 16 days, one lucky ticket holder will go hog wild winning a 1999 Harley-Davidson Sportster XLH 883. The motorcycle will be awarded during the UNCW Alumni Homecoming Celebration Jan. 30 at the Wilmington Hilton. The raffle is sponsored by the UNCW Alumni Association, and proceeds will support the group's scholarship and outreach efforts. Freshman Applications to UNCW Up 12.9 Percent Over Same Time Last Year

For the third straight year, UNC Wilmington is seeing record numbers of freshman applications. Chancellor James R. Leutze announced last week that applications for the class of 1999 are 642 ahead of the number received a year ago, up 12.9 percent.

As of Jan. 11, UNCW had received 5,634 applications for a freshman class of 1,600 slots. In 1998, applications received by Jan. 11 totaled 4,992 for 1,700 slots, so there are more applications for fewer admissions opportunities.

"Freshman applications to UNCW have increased significantly in each of the past three years," said Leutze. "This has become a trend for us. We expect to see a total of about 7,400 applications for fall semester 1999. Last year we received a total of 6,686."

Another bright spot for the 1999 academic year has been a 23.5 percent increase in the number of minority student applications. This year, 431 applications from minority students have been received. Last year, the number was 349.

The increase in numbers of applicants comes at a time when the academic quality of the student body has also increased. "We continue to see an increase in student high school grade point averages, SAT scores, and other quality indicators," he said.

Leutze attributes UNCW's growing popularity to a strengthened emphasis on telling UNCW's story and more aggressive student recruitment. "UNC Wilmington has become more competitive academically as was recognized this fall when U.S. News & World Report named us among the top 10 public regional universities in the South.

"Not only are we number five in the country in undergraduate marine science, we have a highly attractive master of fine arts in creative writing that is drawing authors the caliber of Clyde Edgerton and Paul Wilkes. Add to that a developing film studies program that can place interns with the production company that films "Dawson's Creek," which often shoots on our campus.

"I truly believe UNCW provides students the foremost undergraduate experience in the country today, both in the quality of teaching as well as the warm and caring treatment they receive across campus. Students are finding out what UNCW has to offer. Add this to a great coastal location, and you have a young, progressive university on the move," Leutze said.

UNCW Sponsors Black History Month Kickoff

The film Amistad was based upon the story of a slave revolt led by Sengbeh Pieh, best known as Joseph Cinque.

His great-great grandson Samuel H. Pieh is the featured speaker for UNCW's "Black History Month Kickoff" program at 7 p.m. Jan. 28 in the Warwick Center, Center Stage Cafe. Pieh will speak on the historical legacy of the Amistad trial and will discuss the continuing importance of developing economic and cultural bonds between Africa and America. The program is free and open to the public.

Samuel Pieh

Born and raised in West Africa, Samuel H. Pieh now serves as a biology professor at State Technical Institute at Memphis. He also serves as the executive director of Mid South/Africa Link, an organization based in Memphis, which enables him to pursue his vision of stronger ties between the African continent and the United States. Pieh developed an accredited environmental health curriculum at Mississippi Valley State University and works with a number of charities and relief organizations benefitting Africa and the American South.

Samuel Pieh worked with Steven Spielburg on Amistad as a language coach and later accepted a role as the eldest of the captives.

PREPARING FOR JOB INTERVIEWS

Time after time, when employers are asked what job candidates can do to shine in the job interview, the response is “thoroughly research the company and be able to talk knowledgeably about it in the interview.” According to employers, candidates who have done their homework are better able to discuss how their experiences and qualifications match up with the company's needs; candidates who know the company also can talk about how they can make an immediate contribution to the organization. The candidate who can do this is typically the candidate who gets the job offer.

So where can you find information about your potential employer? The best sources are the Business Reference section of Randall Library, and the internet. On the web, try entering the company's name in a search engine, or check out the Companies Online site <www.companiesonline.com/>. If the organization is publicly owned, check the web sites of the three major stock exchanges: the American Stock Exchange <www.amex.com/>, the New York Stock Exchange <www.nyse.com/>, and the NASDAQ site <www. nasdaq.com/>.

Helpful directories include: Million Dollar Directory; Ward's Business Directory; Standard & Poor's Register of Corporations, Directors, and Executives; Thomas Register of American Manufacturers; and single-industry directories. A good web directory is Hoover's Online <www. hoovers.com>.

Private companies may be more difficult to research. Try the directories above, plus the Directory of Corporate Affiliations. Internationally owned companies may be found in the World Business Directory.

UNCW Outstanding Alumnus and Distinguished Citizen Named

UNCW honors two individuals annually for their impact on society and the university through the Alumnus of the Year and Distinguished Citizen awards. This year's recipients will be honored during a banquet at 6:30 p.m. Friday.

The Alumnus of the Year award is given to a graduate who has distinguished him/herself by contributions of service to UNCW or towards the betterment of humanity. This year's recipient is James M. (Mickey) Corcoran of New Bern. The Distinguished Citizen of the Year award is given to a citizen of the Wilmington community who has made a positive impact on the community or demonstrated a notable service to the university. This year's distinguished citizen is Bertha Boykin Todd.

Corcoran graduated from UNCW in 1970. He is president of Woodruff Distributing Co. in New Bern. In addition, he serves as vice chair of the UNCW Board of Trustees and is a member of the Seahawk Club which supports UNCW athletics. As a student, Corcoran was an active member of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity and continues to support its alumni efforts. During UNCW's 50th anniversary celebration, Corcoran pledged to contribute $10,000 to the university once $10,000 in "new dollars" had been raised. "New dollars" included any increased gifts from current donors and first-time donor gifts.

This first-ever challenge resulted in 506 increased gifts and 1,071 new donors. Together with Corcoran's match, UNCW raised the largest amount ever in the annual campaign. The impact of this challenge will be felt for many years. Corcoran offers encouragement to prospective donors by saying, "the return on your investment is a better society."

It has been said that Bertha B. Todd has served as "a friend, a confidant, a catalyst for positive community action, a speaker, a teacher, a counselor, and an administrator" for nearly 50 years.

Todd has earned degrees in biology and library science, as well as two degrees in supervision and administration. She has worked in education for nearly 40 years and has always worked diligently to ease tensions and build relations between races so that all people can reach their full potential. Todd's life demonstrates her commitment of rendering service to mankind. She co-chaired the 1898 Centennial Foundation and has served in numerous areas of human relations, including serving on the N.C. Human Relations Council under Gov. James Hunt. She worked on the board of social services, as chair of the Conciliation Committee where she had the opportunity to work with groups and individuals to find solutions to grievances. In addition, she was a member of her local human relations council for 10 years. Todd also contributes to the American Red Cross and holds a life membership in the NAACP.

She served on the UNCW Foundation Board and assisted in the university development efforts. Student teachers have appreciated her guidance in the transition from university life into the classroom. Her impact on the students and faculty she has worked with is best summarized by these words of one student: "She is a person who gives, loves and shares. She is a person who makes friends, mediates for peace, and serves as a confidant. She works with a variety of people without regard to race, sex, creed or financial status. She takes time to listen."

CAMPUS COMMUNIQUE

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement Vol. XXVIII, No. 27 February 4, 1999 Phillip Brown, editor

Lauria Hired as Director of Virtual University

Rita Lauria, a Ph.D. candidate at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and former communications advisor to the Secretary of Transportation and Communications of the Federated States of Micronesia, has been hired as assistant to the vice chancellor for the Global Virtual University. She will report to Michelle R. Howard-Vital, vice chancellor of the Division for Public Service and Extended Education.

"I am happy to bring Rita to UNCW," said Howard-Vital. "Her expertise and research will prove valuable to the university and our students as she brings a wealth of experience and knowledge in technology with her. "

Lauria earned a master's degree from UNC Chapel Hill, focusing her research on communication technologies and international communications policy. Co-author of The Law and Regulation of International Space Communication, her current research centers on new communications technologies, the philosophy of communication and the metaphysics of virtual reality.

Lauria has experience in education, public relations, multimedia production, journalism and photography. She is a research associate at the M.I.N.D. (Media Interface and Network Design) Lab in the telecommunications department of Michigan State University.

The UNCW Global Virtual University Initiative is an international, multicultural experiment designed to test the limits and the potential of various forms of on-line course design and delivery. The initiative is intended to broaden international understanding through the creation of digital educational communities, to assist sister institutions overseas to better understand the applications of educational technology and to augment and refine UNCW's own understanding and capabilities in the developing field of distance education.

UNCW currently is partnering with Japan in a Digital Communities pilot program which features three on-line courses for Japanese students who study with UNCW professors via the Internet and the university's distance learning capabilities. Future plans include expansion and partnership with other foreign countries.

The University of North Carolina at Wilmington is one of the leaders in global learning using two-way interactive video classrooms, asynchronous discussion forums, digital library resources, interactive Web pages and Internet-based streaming audio and video technologies. This year, more than 200 students are pursuing degrees using the NCIH and Internet. UNCW currently offers 15 on-line courses accessible from any personal computer with Internet connection. UNCW expects to add 2,500 students to its program within the next five years.

Lauria can be reached at ext. 7130 or e-mail lauriar@uncwil.edu

Leadership Lecture Series Focusing on Gang Violence

Rev. Eugene Rivers III will discuss gang violence at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Warwick Center ballroom. This free talk, part of the Leadership Lecture Series Issues and Answers: Violence at the Local, National and International Level, is sponsored by the UNCW Leadership and Activities Center.

Rivers, an ex-gang member, is the co-chair of the National Ten Point Leadership Foundation. The organization is currently working to promote "new grassroots church leadership in 40 of the most violent inner-city neighborhoods in the United States." His work is based upon the Boston Ten Point Coalition, an organization Rivers co-founded that established a partnership between Boston's religious communities and the city's law enforcement.

Rivers

A frequent contributor to Sojourners magazine and other national periodicals, Rivers is the author of two forthcoming collections of essays, On the Responsibility of Intellectuals in the Age of Crack and Beyond the Nationalism of Fools: A Manifesto for a New Black Movement.

For more information, contact Julie Owen, assistant director for Leadership and Volunteer Programs, at ext. 3877.

Pizzarelli, a one-time staff guitarist for NBC and ABC, has recorded or performed with Zoot Sims, George Barnes, Vaughn Monroe, Stephane Grappelli and many other jazz greats. Alden is a multiple winner of Downbeat and Jazz Times critics' polls.

Chemistry Seminar

David White, assistant professor of chemistry at State University of New York-New Paltz, will deliver the seminar "Design Criteria for Chiral Transfer in Asymmetric Reactions" at 4 p.m. Monday in the new Science Building, Room 132.

Did Ancient Greeks Hate Women?

Mary Lefkowitz, chair of the Greek and Latin Departments at Wellesley College, will present "Did the Ancient Greeks Hate Women?" at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 15 in the Cameron Hall auditiorium. The lecture is sponsored by the Department of Philosophy and Religion and the local chapter of the American Hellenic Educational and Progressive Association. Lefkowitz has been widely published on the subject of women in antiquity. For more information, contact George Zervos at ext. 7284 or e-mail zervosg.

Borneo Travel Presentation

John Williams, psychology, will give a lecture and slide presentation to the Cape Fear Group Sierra Club describing his trip to various wildlife areas in northern Borneo at 7:30 p.m. Monday in DeLoach Hall, Room 114. The lecture is free and open to the public.

At the Hawk's Nest

The buffet menus for the faculty and staff dining room will be:

Friday - chicken-fried rice, BBQ pork sandwich, vegetarian pot pie, assorted vegetables, beverages and desserts.

Tuesday - fried chicken, southwestern pork loin, garden quiche, assorted vegetables, beverages and desserts.

All buffet menus are served from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and are all you care to eat for $4.50.

Global Climate Lecture

Donna L. Whitney, a 1999 Mineralogical Society of America Lecture Series speaker, will present the seminar "Petrology and Global Climate: How Igneous and Metamorphic Processes Change the World's Climate" at 3 p.m. Wednesday in DeLoach Hall, Room 114. This free seminar is open to the public and is sponsored by the Department of Earth Sciences.

Whitney, assistant professor from the Department of Geology and Geophysics at the University of Minnesota, specializes in research geared toward understanding what goes on in the earth's deep crust during the construction of mountain belts. Her talk will focus on how volcanic activity in the Caribbean may have been a major factor in causing global warming and mass extinction at the end of the Paleocene period roughly 57 to 66 million years ago, and how this activity influenced the Eocene period climate 36 to 57 million years ago, during which the Alpine-Himalayan mountain ranges were formed.

For more information, contact Michael Smith, earth sciences, at ext. 3496.

Note of Appreciation

Pat Corcoran, alumni relations, would like to thank Joe Hack, Steve Crandall, Wayne Phillips, Charles Bey and Ray Boyle for their assistance with the storage and transport of the Harley-Davidson for the UNCW Alumni Association.

Film Studies Program "Local Focus" Spotlighting Area Filmmakers

The UNCW Film Studies Program is initiating "Local Focus," a variety of public events, including screenings, presentations, discussions and informal gatherings to spotlight Wilmington-area videographers and filmmakers.

The inaugural program will be a screening and discussion of Cathedral, a 30-minute 16-mm film produced and directed by Chip Hackler a UNCW graduate and 15-year veteran of the film industry. It will take place at 8 p.m. Feb. 20 in Morton Hall's Bryan Auditorium.

"'Local Focus' will be a forum for spirited creative and intellectual exchange," said Ellen Walters, series coordinator and director of the Film Studies Program. "This new series will become an important part of our Film Studies Program. Students and faculty will screen independent work and have the opportunity to discuss the work with talented local producers."

The Film Studies Program was launched in 1997 as an interdisciplinary minor, but there are plans to develop it as a degree, said Walters. She said fall 2000 is the earliest the university could offer the major leading to a bachelor of arts in film studies.

Cathedral is an adaptation of a short story of the same title by Raymond Carver. The film focuses on the transformation that a cynical husband undergoes when his wife brings a blind friend into their home. Hackler, who graduated from UNCW in 1984 with a bachelor's degree in English, has been employed in the film industry for 15 years. Following graduation, he worked for UNC Public Television. Since returning to Wilmington, he has worked as apprentice editor, camera assistant or camera operator on the films Interview with a Vampire, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and the forthcoming Elmo in Grouchland. In addition, he has worked on the television series Dawson's Creek.

Cathedral marks Hackler's debut as a film director. Produced with a local cast, film principals from Wilmington involved with the production include Sandy Johnston and Ed Blakely, co-producers; Joseph D'Alessandro, director of photography; Forrest Maready, editor; and Gregor Wilson, original music. Reynolds Price from Durham served as story consultant. Wilmington-area cast members include Jordan Rhodes, who has appeared in Law & Order and Matlock; Nello Tare, from Blue Velvet and Go West; Mindi Logan from One Life to Live; and Eric Paisley, who appeared in From Earth to the Moon, Radioland Murders and Shadowlands.

The Feb. 20 film screening is free and open to the public. For more information, contact Dana McKoy, Film Studies Program assistant, at ext. 3111.

Creative Writing Program Flourishing

UNCW's creative writing program has received such student demand and external attention among writers that it is has been made a freestanding program in the College of Arts and Sciences. Jo Ann Seiple, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, announced the change Thursday.

Philip Furia, who has served as Department of English chair since his arrival in July 1996, was named interim director of the creative writing program, effective Monday. A national search for a director has been underway for about a year. Richard Veit, English professor and president of the Faculty Senate, was named interim English Department chair.

"The creative writing program has gotten such attention, now it's going to have its own identity," Furia said. "People are just so taken with the program and the atmosphere."

Veit, a 22-year veteran of UNCW who served as English department chair from 1993-96, is enthusiastic about the change.

"I think it will be a wonderful opportunity for UNCW. It's a sign of the growth of our institution. Creative writing has a tremendous potential for growth," he said.

Seiple said this change is consistent with her recent efforts to reshape and reorganize the College of Arts and Sciences which includes the creation of the Department of Social Work, which was a program within sociology and anthropology; separating computer science from mathematics which was renamed the Department of Mathematics and Statistics; and creating the Department of Music and Department of Art and Theatre from the earlier Department of Fine Arts.

"This has allowed the programs to flourish and thrive," Seiple said. "This is the best way I can serve all of the programs out there."

Elections Forum

Bob Joyce, Institute of Government representative and an expert on local governmental organization, will present a public workshop on North Carolina elections from 2 to 3:30 p.m. Feb. 26 in Westside Hall's distance learning classroom. He will discuss the types of elections permitted in North Carolina, the five routes for changing the mode of elections, sample time lines for implementation, pro and cons of district elections and methods of elections in large North Carolina cities.

The free forum is open to the public, but space is limited. For reserved seating, contact Woody Sutton at. ext. 7074.

This workshop follows Joyce's presentation to the Wilmington city council and staff who are investigating the concept of district elections.

This informational forum is sponsored by the Division for Public Service and Extended Education and the Council of Neighborhood Associations Inc. (CONA).

UNCW-TV will tape the presentation for broadcast later on Time Warner Cable Channel 5.

EMPLOYERS USE COLLEGE CAREER SERVICES WEB SITES

Sixty-one percent of employers surveyed by consultants Brecker & Merryman indicate that they use college and university web sites to post jobs, and 34 percent use career center sites to source candidates. In addition, more than two-thirds of employers reported using general job sites (e.g., Monster Board, Career Mosaic, Online Career Center) to post jobs, and about one-third use these sites to source candidates.

"Companies and students recognize that the internet and web sites are a very powerful tool," says Karen Dowd of Brecker & Merryman.

Almost all respondents (96 percent) have web sites, and all but a few have a section of their site devoted to career opportunities. In addition, the use of email in the employment process has doubled since 1997, now up to 81 percent. The use of resume software also has increased.

DRUG TESTS REQUIRED BY MOST LARGE COMPANIES

Almost all– 98 percent– of Fortune 200 companies require drug testing as part of the hiring process. However, only 3 percent of the smallest employers– companies that have 25 or fewer in their work force– require drug testing.

Nationally, workplace drug testing is becoming commonplace. Currently, 43.7 percent of American workers are required to take drug tests, and almost 70 percent of companies with 500 or more employees require employers to take some type of drug test– a threefold increase since 1987.

Employers see more positive tests for alcohol and marijuana than any other drugs.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Nancy Grindlay, earth sciences and CMSR, was co-convenor of the Geological Society of America's Penrose Conference "Subduction to Strike-Slip Transitions Along Plate Boundaries" held in Puerto Plata, Dominican Republic. Grindlay gave the keynote talk "Oblique Collision of the Bahama Platform in the Hispaniola-Puerto Rico Area, Northeastern Caribbean." Amy Miller, a graduate student working with Grindlay, presented the poster "A Gravity Study of the Puerto Rico Trench and Surrounding Region: Implications for the Origin and Tectonics of the Puerto Rico Trench."

Steve Kinsey, biological sciences, published the paper, "Functional and Evolutionary Implications of the Distribution of Phosphagens in Primitive-type Spermatozoa" in the journal The Biological Bulletin. The paper's co-author was W. Ross Ellington of Florida State University.

Wei Feng and Xin Lu, mathematics and statistics, had their research article "On Diffusive Population Models with Toxicants and Time Delays" accepted for publication in the Journal of Mathematical Analysis and Applications.

Antonio Puente, psychology, received $3,250 from Plenum Publishing Corporation for his project "Neuropsychology Review."

Richard D. Dixon, sociology and anthropology, delivered the invited presentation of a one-day workshop on the design and delivery of Web-enhanced and online courses at Florida State University. The workshop, attended by FSU faculty, staff and graduate students, was co-sponsored by the FSU Department of Sociology, Center for the Study of Population, College of Social Sciences and Program on Instructional Excellence.

Wendy Brenner, English, had her short story "Mr. Puniverse" published in the January/February issue of The Oxford American, for which Brenner now serves as a contributing writer.

Joanne E. Nottingham, education, published the chapter "Using Self-Reflection for Personal and Professional Development in Student Affairs" in Strategies for Staff Development: Personal and Professional Education in the 21st Century, vol. 84. which is the latest edition of the New Directions for Student Services series by Jossey-Bass Publishers. She also presented an overview of this chapter and demonstrated the application of the research instruments in a workshop conducted with Helen Saulny of George Washington University at the annual University of Miami Academic Affairs-Student Affairs Conference, Creating Synergy for Learning.

Exempt Withholding Certificate Expires

For employees currently claiming exempt from withholding, 1998 W-4 and NC-4 tax withholding certificates will expire Feb. 16. Employees who wish to claim an exemption after Feb. 16 must submit a new W-4 and NC-4 to the payroll office prior to Feb. 16 to be reflected in the February paycheck.

Custom Regalia

Faculty interested in purchasing custom regalia should contact Jessiebeth at ext. 3054. Orders must be placed by March 1 for delivery by May 15.

Faculty who need to rent regalia should also call ext. 3054. The rental cost for doctoral regalia is $32 plus tax and master's regalia is $29 plus tax.

Password Reminder

An audit of passwords on the VAX/Alpha computer systems (e-mail, SIS, FRS, HRS, ADS, etc.) revealed 164 passwords that are easily guessed. To make sure that your password is secure avoid proper names (i.e. family names), whole words, consecutive numbers or letters, significant dates (i.e. birthdays and holidays), etc. A good practice is to use two or more words or syllables with a number inserted at the beginning, middle and/or end with a minimum of six characters. Anyone who needs help changing a password should call OIT computer operations at ext. 3541.

Motor Pool News

The UNCW motor pool fueling station will be closed Feb. 16 due to the conversion of gas tanks. Anyone who uses this facility should fill up prior to this date. Instructions on using the new pumps will be sent to departments with vehicles.

Eight-Page Communique

The Feb. 25 Campus Communique will be an eight-page issue with a submission deadline of 5 p.m. Feb. 22.

Work-study Students

The Financial Aid Office is offering departments with federal work-study allocations the opportunity to forward the names and social security numbers of selected students they would like to re-employ in the Federal Work-Study Program for 1999-2000. Departments should submit their lists to the Financial Aid Office via campus mail or e-mail (tysonp) by March 1.

Students submitted will receive priority consideration for federal work-study awards provided that they have completed and returned the 1999-2000 Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) by March 1.

Providing the names of students to re-employ does not guarantee a federal work-study award. Students must apply each year and continue to meet federal eligibility requirements. UNCW policy requires that jobs are posted through career services and undergraduate students must re-apply through the HR 1.60 process.

A "financial aid night" will be held for students and the public who need help completing the FAFSA at 7 p.m. Tuesday in Cameron Hall Auditorium. Students may also make an appointment to see their personal financial aid counselor for assistance completing FAFSA.

Students and their parents should file their 1998 IRS tax forms prior to completing the FAFSA. However, students and their parents may estimate tax information in order to meet the March 1 deadline.

Direct questions to Mark Williams at ext. 3176 or Pat Tyson at ext. 3177.

HR News

Effective Feb. 15, Peg Watson will assist human resources with employment services during Lori Preiss' leave of absence. Watson, who retired from the U.S. Postal Service, has more than nine years of experience in recruitment and selection at the postal service's Washington, D.C., administrative offices. Direct recruitment questions to Watson at ext. 3162 or Mike Bogan at ext. 3628.

Financial Planning

Michael Slaughter, a representative from Lincoln Life who is an accredited estate planner and a certified financial planner, will present the workshop "Accidental Disinheritance?" at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. Friday in the human resources training room. This session is designed to deal with common misconceptions or oversights in financial planning that accidentally "disinherit" spouse, children or family.

In addition, he will be available for personal appointments with employees enrolled in the Optional Retirement Plan who may be interested in investing a portion of their retirement contributions in Lincoln's products. Slaughter will also be available to meet with employees interested in investing in a tax-deferred annuity.

Contact Willina Mitchell at ext. 3006 to reserve a place in the workshop or to schedule an individual appointment.

Staff Training

Discipline, Demotion and Dismissal: Grievance and Appeals, 9 to 11 a.m. Feb. 16 (employees).

Maintaining and Reading Your Budget, 9 to 11 a.m. Feb. 25.

Managing Your Schedule Using OnTime, 2 to 4 p.m. Feb. 24.

Refer to the Staff Training and Development Booklet for registration information or call ext. 3274. To register for computer-related training call ext. 4357.

Paleoanthropologist Meave Leakey to Speak in Kenan Auditorium

Meave Leakey, noted paleoanthropologist and head of the Division of Paleoanthropology at the National Museum of Kenya, will speak at 7:30 p.m. March 2 in Kenan Auditorium.

"My Life in Science: An Evening with Meave Leakey" will include a slide presentation and information on Leakey's life in Africa.

Leakey is married to Richard, a member of the Leakey family which has a history of conducting research in Africa during the past 70 years. Their research has centered on trying to find fossils that would give evidence to man's ancestors. Maeve Leakey has conducted research at Lake Turkana, Kenya, since 1969. Her special areas of interest include monkeys, apes, hominids and carnivores. A portion of her research includes a new species that walked upright 4 million years ago, which is 500,000 years before the previously documented date.

This free program is sponsored by the Honors Scholars Program with assistance from the Office of Academic Affairs, the College of Arts and Sciences, the Departments of Sociology and Anthropology, Biological Sciences and Earth Sciences, the Office of International Programs, the Leadership Center and the Faculty Women's Network.

Nottingham Named Director of Minority Affairs

Joanne Nottingham, assistant professor in the Watson School of Education, has been appointed director of minority affairs effective June 1. She will also teach in the Department of Communication Studies.

"I am delighted with the appointment of Joanne Nottingham as the new director of the Office of Minority Affairs," said Denis Carter, associate provost for enrollment affairs. "She brings a vision as well as a wealth of experience to this office."

Nottingham received her bachelor of science degree in elementary and special education from Southern Connecticut State College. She earned her master's and doctorate degrees from the University of Connecticut.

Prior to joining UNCW's faculty in 1994, Nottingham was director of minority student affairs at the University of Miami, Coral Gables. She is a member of several professional and civic groups including the Association of Supervision and Curriculum Development, Communities in Schools Board of Directors, Eastern Educational Research Association, the National Social Science Association, Cape Fear Museum Board of Trustees and the Linda Lavin Arts Foundation Board of Directors.

University Theatre Produces Strindberg Play The Father

The Department of Art and Theatre will present The Father by August Strindberg. Performances, under the direction of Terry Theodore, will be at 8 p.m. Feb. 24-27 and 3 p.m. Feb. 28 in Kenan Hall, SRO Theatre. Admission is $8 for the general public and $4 for faculty and staff. Tickets are available at the Kenan Auditorium box office.

The Father, written in 1887, is the first of Strindberg's attempts to understand the compulsive nature of the destructive conflict between the sexes.

In Memorial

Dr. Will S. DeLoach

UNC Wilmington suffered a great loss with the death of Dr. Will S. DeLoach, professor emeritus and retired chair of the Chemistry Department, Feb. 3 in Orange City, Fla.

Dr. DeLoach received his bachelor's and master's degree in chemistry from Howard University, now Samford University in Birmingham, Ala. He earned his Ph.D. in chemistry from the University of Chicago.

A dedicated educator, Dr. DeLoach was a generous benefactor to the Chemistry Departments of Samford University and UNC Wilmington. His generosity led to the establishment of many student scholarships and faculty grants. The Will S. DeLoach Award was established in his honor, as well as the DeLoach professorship in chemistry.

UNCW awarded Dr. DeLoach an honorary doctorate degree in 1996, and DeLoach Hall was named in his honor.

Memorial donations may be made to the Chemistry Department.

UNCW School of Nursing Announces First Advocate Board

The University of North Carolina at Wilmington School of Nursing has named 11 area community, business and professional leaders to its first nurse advocate board.

The purpose of the school's nurse advocate board, which will meet four times a year, is to be a volunteer organization to increase public awareness and support for UNCW's School of Nursing.

"In light of the changing demands of the health care delivery system, it is in the best interest of the School of Nursing to stay in close contact with the community," said Virginia W. Adams, dean of the School of Nursing. "Community involvement in our curriculum will help us educate and prepare the best health care givers possible."

Members of the board, all from Wilmington, are:

- Allison Knight Atkinson, who previously worked as a nurse practitioner. She received a bachelor of science degree in nursing from the Medical University of South Carolina and master's degree in nursing from the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center.
- Liz Beckingham, who is executive director of United Health Care of N.C. She earned her registered nursing credentials from the University of Pennsylvania.
- Beth Herring Chadwick, who previously worked at Rex Hospital in Raleigh and Southeastern OB/GYN in Wilmington. She received her bachelor of science degree in nursing from UNC Chapel Hill and her associate degree in nursing from UNCW.
- Dr. Richard Corbett, who is semi-retired and teaches radiology with the New Hanover Medical Group. He attended Wake Forest University and the Bowman Gray School of Medicine.
- Richard Marks, who retired from Corning Inc. where he served as a labor lawyer and senior vice president of human resources. He received his bachelor's and law degrees from Cornell University.
- Carol Morris, who is director of New Hanover Home Health, JCAHO Accredited Home Health Agency. She received her bachelor of science degree in nursing from George Mason University and master's degree in nursing from East Carolina University.
- Sylvia Rountree, who is chair of the board of trustees at New Hanover Regional Medical Center. She was recently appointed to the N.C. House advisory committee on cancer coordination and control.
- Betty Ann Sanders, who is chair of the UNCW Foundation Board, member of Cape Fear Hospice and president of St. Thomas Preservation Society. She received her bachelor's degree from Marymount College and juris doctorate from the University of Dayton.
- Dr. Chip Stone, an exercise physiologist at Cape Fear Memorial Hospital who is also in charge of business and wellness services. He received his Ph.D. from UNC Chapel Hill.
- Rebecca Varner, a former teacher of health occupations in New Hanover County Schools. She received a bachelor of arts degree from Winthrop College and associate's degree in nursing from Baptist College, Charleston, S.C.
- Frances Woodbury, who previously taught school in Durham, Atlanta and Wilmington. She earned a bachelor of arts degree in education from Duke University and master's of education from UNC Chapel Hill.

The board members were identified and recruited to represent a link to the community, said Frank J. Russell, director of development for the School of Nursing. "These individuals will be effective and informed ambassadors for UNCW's nursing programs and students. They will open doors on behalf of the School of Nursing and help secure the necessary financial, political and human resources to accomplish its mission successfully."

Holman Reading

Fiction writer John William Holman will read from his work at 8 p.m. March 1 in Cameron Hall auditorium. A reception and book signing will follow. The event is sponsored by the Creative Writing Program and English Department and is free and open to the public.

A native of Durham, Holman is the author of two books, Luminous Mysteries and Squabble, both of which deal with the life of African-Americans in the new South. His work has appeared in The New Yorker, Oxford American, Mississippi Review and New Stories From the South.

UNCW

FINALISTS SELECTED FOR PROVOST & VICE CHANCELLOR FOR ACADEMIC AFFAIRS

The search for a new provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs will enter a critical final phase during March as four finalists are invited to visit UNC Wilmington for formal interviews with members of the university community.

Each visit will consist of an interview with search committee members and separate interviews with the council of deans, department chairs, senior faculty of the candidate's tenure discipline department, academic directors, vice chancellors, and the chancellor. The highlight of each visit will be a public presentation by the candidate on a topic of interest to higher education which will be open to all members of the university community – followed by a question and answer period. On the final day of each visit, a second informal question and answer period will be scheduled to afford members of the university community who may have been unable to attend the public presentation an opportunity to visit with the candidate. Detailed schedules and meeting locations will be announced.

Biographical sketches of the finalists are listed below (in order of their visits to campus). Complete copies of their letters of interest and curriculum vitae are available to members of the university community (with a UNCW ID card) at the reserve desk in Randall Library. Additionally, you may view these materials on Human Resources' Home Page under the local file Provost Search Committee News @ www.uncwil.edu/hr.

Dr. Christopher T. Baldwin is currently the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and a Professor in the Department of Geography and Geology at Sam Houston State University located in Huntsville, Texas – a position he has held since 1994. Sam Houston State University is a public, Master's I university with 12,500 students offering liberal arts and general, teacher preparatory, and professional programs. Dr. Baldwin received a B.Sc. in Geology and a Ph.D. in Geology -- both from the University of Liverpool, England. Prior to joining Sam Houston State University, Dr. Baldwin held administrative and faculty positions at Boston University, the University of Marseilles, and the University of East Anglia. Dr. Baldwin's Public Presentation will be Tuesday, March 2, from 4:00 - 5:30pm in Room 134 of the New Science Building; and his Informal Open Meeting will be Wednesday, March 3, from 1:30 to 2:30pm in Room 205 of the New Science Building.

Dr. Terry L. Hickey is presently the Dean of the College of Sciences and Professor of Psychology at Old Dominion University located in Norfolk, Virginia – a position he has held since 1997. Old Dominion is a public, Doctoral I institution with 17,800 students offering liberal arts and general, teacher preparatory, and professional programs. Dr. Hickey received a B.A. in Psychology from Southern Illinois University, an M.A. in Experimental Psychology from Michigan State University, and a Ph.D. in Physiological Psychology from the University of Miami, Coral Gables. Prior to joining Old Dominion, Dr. Hickey held administrative and faculty positions at the University of Alabama at Birmingham. Dr. Hickey's Public Presentation will be Thursday, March 4, from 4:00 - 5:30pm in Room 134 of the New Science Building; and his Informal Open Meeting will be Friday, March 5, from 1:30 to 2:30pm in Room 205 of the New Science Building.

Dr. Aaron Podolefsky is presently Interim Vice President for Academic Affairs and Provost and Professor of Anthropology at The University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls, Iowa. Concurrently, Dr. Podolefsky is serving as the Dean of the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences – a position he has held since 1990. The University of Northern Iowa is a public, Master's I institution with 12,957 students offering liberal arts, general, and teacher preparatory programs. Dr. Podolefsky received a B.A. in Mathematics from California State University at San Jose, an M.A. in Liberal Studies and Anthropology, and a Ph.D. in Anthropology – both from State University of New York at Stony Brook. Prior to joining the University of Northern Iowa, Dr. Podolefsky held administrative and faculty positions at Western Kentucky University, West Virginia University, and SUNY at Stony Brook. Dr. Podolefsky's Public Presentation will be Monday, March 15, from 4:00 - 5:30pm in Room 103 of the New Science Building; and his Informal Open Meeting will be Tuesday, March 16, from 11:00am to Noon in Room 205 of the New Science Building.

Dr. John C. Cavanaugh is presently Vice Provost for Academic Programs and Planning and Professor of Psychology and Individual and Family Studies at the University of Delaware – a position he has held since 1997. The University of Delaware is a public Research II institution with 21,380 students offering liberal arts and general, teacher preparatory, and professional programs. Dr. Cavanaugh received B.A. in Psychology from the University of Delaware, an M.A. and Ph.D. in Psychology – both from the University of Notre Dame. Prior to joining the University of Delaware, Dr. Cavanaugh held administrative and faculty positions at Bowling Green State University, the Medical College of Ohio at Toledo, Georgia Institute of Technology, and Indiana University at South Bend. Dr. Cavanaugh's Public Presentation will be Wednesday, March 24, from 4:00 - 5:30pm in Room 103 of the New Science Building; and his Informal Open Meeting will be Thursday, March 25, from 11:00am to Noon in Room 205 of the New Science Building.

Please mark your calendars now to participate in the public presentations, question and answer sessions, or informal open meetings. All meeting locations will be announced when confirmed. Questions concerning the Provost search may be directed to Dr. James Mc Nab, Search Committee Chair, at 962-3859 or mcnabj.

The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People

Session I: March 2, 9, 23, 30; April 6, 13, 20, 1999
(For Managers & Supervisors)

Session II: May 5, 12, 18; June 2, 9, 16, 23, 1999
(Open)

9am-1pm -- Human Resources Training Room
Presenter: Brenda Jordan, Director of Training
Cost: $75
TO REGISTER: CALL X3274

Habits are powerful factors in our lives. For our purposes we will define a habit as the intersection of knowledge, skill, and desire. Because they are consistent, often unconscious patterns, they constantly, daily, express our character and produce our effectiveness or ineffectiveness. (Stephen Covey)

Covey's leadership program focuses on an inside-out approach (from private victories to public victories). It is an integrated, principle-centered approach for solving personal and professional problems, for living with fairness, integrity, honesty, and human dignity—principles that give us the security to adapt to change, and the wisdom and power to take advantage of the opportunities that change creates." (Warren Bennis, author of On Becoming a Leader)

Join us for an inspirational, mind-expanding workshop as we explore:

Habit 1	Be Proactive
Habit 2	Begin with the End in Mind
Habit 3	Put First Things First
Habit 4	Think Win/Win
Habit 5	Seek First to Understand, Then to Be Understood
Habit 6	Synergize
Habit 7	Sharpen the Saw

Adult Scholars Dinner Programs

The Adult Scholars Signature Series, through the Division for Public Service and Extended Education, offers dinner programs followed by a lecture. The scheduled presentations are listed below, and an attendance fee is charged. For registration information, call ext. 3195.

- "Sir Walter Raleigh: Renaissance Man" presented by Elliot Engel at 6 p.m. April 5.
- "George and Ira Gershwin: A Centenary Celebration" presented by Phil Furia, creative writing, at 8 p.m. April 28.
- "Wilmington During the Civil War" presented by Chris Fonvielle, history, at 6 p.m. May 6.
- "Country Music and Social Class" presented by David Whisnant from UNC Chapel Hill at 6 p.m. May 18.

Camellia Club Show

The Tidewater Camellia Club's 49th annual camellia show will be held from 1 to 9 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday at Independence Mall.

Panhellenic Fund-raiser

The UNCW Panhellenic Council is sponsoring a walk-a-thon from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday at the "loop" at Wrightsville Beach. The Panhellenic Executive Board will attend the Southeastern Panhellenic Conference in Atlanta, Ga., where donated funds will be used to purchase supplies for needy schools in Atlanta.

Celebrating Women

Celebrating Women, a fund-raiser to kick off Women's History Month, will be held at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Bellamy Mansion. Local folk band Calamity will perform. Tickets are $5 for students, $10 non-students and are available from the Departments of History and English. Proceeds benefit the History Department and the Women's Studies Program.

Nominations Sought for Award for Faculty Scholarship

March 31 is the deadline for nominations for the Award for Faculty Scholarship. Nominees must be a full-time faculty member who has exhibited genuine interest in scholarship, research and creativity; earned the respect of colleagues and peers, maintained high standards of integrity; fostered interest and involvement of students and colleagues in scholarship and creative work; and demonstrated a significant contribution to scholarship, research and creativity at UNCW.

Letters of nomination are limited to one page and must indicate how the nominee satisfies the criteria for consideration. Submit letters to the chancellor's office.

The recipient of the 1999 Award for Faculty Scholarship will be announced at fall convocation.

Summer Swim Classes

The UNCW summer swim program will hold four sessions May 24 - June 4, June 7-18, June 21 - July 2 and July 12-23. Each session will have classes at 10 and 11 a.m. UNCW employees can pre-register their children or grandchildren only from 8 to 11 a.m. March 1-15 at the Trask Coliseum athletic ticket office.

National Geographic Editor to Speak

Bernard Ohanian, editorial director for international editions at National Geographic, will present "The Yellow Window on the World: Writing and Words at National Geographic" at noon March 5 in the University Union, Room 100. This free talk is sponsored by the Graduate English Association.

Hoggard Medal Nominees Sought

Nominations are sought for the Hoggard Medal of Achievement, awarded annually to the graduating senior, in the opinion of the faculty, who has shown the most improvement during his or her years at the university. Faculty who wish to nominate a student must submit a letter of nomination to the provost by March 12. Graduating seniors from August and December 1998 and May 1999 are eligible.

Engineering Lecture

Kenneth Diller, professor of biomedical and mechanical engineering at the University of Texas at Austin, will present "Engineering the Frozen Preservation of Living Tissues and Organs for Transplantation" at 6:30 p.m. March 11 in Wagoner Hall, Madeline Suite. The lecture is sponsored by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers Southeastern Region Chapter. The cost is $15 per person. RSVP by March 8 to Toni Bellingrath at ext. 4079.

Poetry Reading

Michael White, English, will read from his work at 2 p.m. Sunday at the New Hanover County Public Library, main meeting room.

Subjects Needed for Psychology Experiment

Males between the ages of 50 and 65 and postmenopausal females who are not taking hormone replacements are needed for a psychology study investigating hormones and learning. If interested, call Becky Reavis, a graduate student in psychology, at ext. 7147 or 254-4686.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

Randy Hanson and Jim Smith, accountancy and business law, had their article "A New Chapter in Bankruptcy Reform" published in the Journal of Accountancy.

Wade O. Watanabe, CMSR, had his research article "Progress in Controlled Maturation and Spawning of Summer Flounder Paralichthys dentatus Broodstock" published in the Journal of the World Aquaculture Society, vol. 29.

Andrew F. Clark, history, published his article "The Ties that Bind: Servility and Dependency Among the Fulbe of Bundu (Senegambia), 1930s to 1980s" in the edited volume, Slavery and Colonial Rule in Africa. The article is also reprinted in the journal Slavery and Abolition, vol. 19, no. 2. In addition, Clark's review essay "Africa's Development Crisis: A Failure of Economics or Ideology?" is in the Journal of Third World Studies, vol. 16, no. 1.

William Overman, psychology, received $6,500 from the National Institutes of Child Health and Human Development to continue his project "The Role of Gonadal Hormones on Cognition in Children, Adolescents and Adults." In addition, Overman and Kim Epting, a student in the psychology undergraduate and graduate program, had their article "Sex-sensitive Tasks in Men and Women: A Search for Performance Fluctuations Across the Menstrual Cycle" published in Behavioral Neuroscience.

Brooks Dodson, English, had his review of British Romantic Drama: Historical and Critical Essays published in the January issue of Choice.

Hunter Thompson, public service and extended education, delivered a presentation on SPIN NC, the Southeast Public Interest Network of North Carolina, at the 1999 N. C. Alliance of Information and Referral Services held in Wilmington.

Lance Horn, Ken Johns and Tom Potts, NURC; Greg McFall, biological sciences; Eddie Roggenstein, CMSR; and Kevin Violette, information technology, completed the National Association of Underwater Instructors scuba instructor training course and the Divers Alert Network oxygen administration instructor course. Frank Chapman and Doug Kesling, NURC, assisted in the instruction.

Warren Gulko, SBDTC, was named honorary life member of the board of directors of the Pamlico Partnership for Children. He was cited for "his untiring efforts to bring Smart Start to Pamlico County."

Bob Buerger, environmental studies, and Steve Robinson, economics and finance, had their paper "Reservation Gambling: Improving the Odds Through Natural Resources Recreation Management" published in the Journal of Recreation and Leisure, spring 99,vol.19 no.1.

Bob Buerger, environmental sciences, made the presentation "Re-emergence of Coastal Recreational Use Following Hurricanes" at the 1999 Southeast Recreation Research Symposium held in Gatlinburg, Tenn. The presentation was co-authored with Jeff Hill and Jim Herstine, HPER, and John Taggart, CMSR.

Stephen Harper, management and marketing, had his paper "Timing: The Essential Competence for 21st Century Firms" accepted for presentation at the general assembly of the World Future Society in Washington, D.C., July 31.

Michael J. Durako, biological sciences and CMSR, and graduate student Jill Paxson presented the paper "Systems-Level Changes in Florida Bay Seagrass Community Structure" at the 1999 Aquatic Sciences meeting of the American Society of Limnology and Oceanography held in Santa Fe, N.M. The paper was co-authored by M. O. Hall and M. Merello of the Florida Marine Research Institute.

David Donaldson, university police, received $50,000 from the N.C. Department of Transportation to fund the installation of additional bicycle racks on campus.

Mike Mallin, CMSR, presented "Influence of Land-Use Patterns on Enteric Bacterial Pollution in Estuarine Waters" at the annual meeting of the American Society for Limnology and Oceanography in Santa Fe, N.M.

Terry Theodore, art and theatre, had his article "Family Ratings" published in Encyclopedia of Family Life by Salem Press.

Andrew F. Clark, history, presented the lecture and led a group discussion on "The Crisis in Guinea-Bissau and Senegal" to the conference "Conflict in Africa" sponsored by the Triangle Institute of Security Studies at UNC Chapel Hill.

Laela S. Sayigh, biological sciences, published the paper "Individual Recognition in Wild Bottlenose Dolphins: A Field Test Using Playback Experiments" in the January 1999 issue of the journal Animal Behaviour. The article's co-authors were P. Tyack, R. Wells, A. Solow, M. Scott and A. Irvine.

Paul Shotsberger, mathematics and statistics, had his paper "The INSTRUCT Project: Web Professional Development for Mathematics Teachers" published in the latest edition of the Journal of Computers in Mathematics and Science Teaching.

Lou Buttino, communication studies, donated 12 copies of his documentary "Proyectos Comunitarios De Agua Y Saneamiento" to Honduras to be shown in schools, centers and churches. The documentary deals with water and drainage projects. William Bolduc, communication studies, served as director of photography and associate editor.

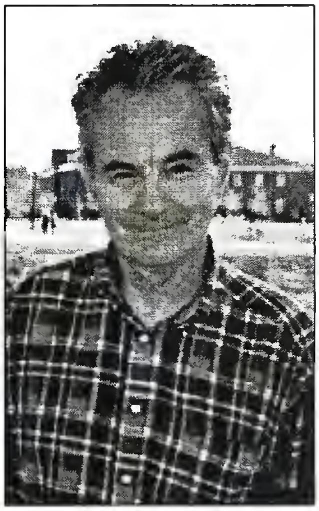
Kristin Howell, economics, served as president of the Academy of Economics and Finance at its annual meeting in Little Rock, Ark.

This is recyclable.

Paul Wilkes Seeks Role Models for Authentic Spirituality

by Linda Grattafiori

Using a $190,000 grant from the Lilly Endowment, Paul Wilkes wants to show how American Catholic parishes and Protestant congregations can be powerful influences in the lives of individual people, who in turn, take that spiritual power into the community.



Wilkes

The fruits of this study will be published in a book profiling six to eight Catholic parishes and Protestant congregations. Wilkes said he will answer essential questions such as how to maintain the vitality of a parish or congregation, how to get a spirituality group started, how to get a youth group started and the best ways to raise money.

"It's rare to get money like this in the humanities," Wilkes said. "But the backing is out there if you have a reasonable idea, and you're willing to take plenty of 'no's' before someone says 'yes!'"

Before Wilkes can conduct his research, he has to decide which parishes and congregations to study. "I travel this circuit of Catholic parishes and could name half a dozen right now that I could go to, do the book and not be wrong," Wilkes said. "But, we'll cast a wider net than that and spread it out for rural, suburban, Black, Hispanic, priestless - a broad cross-spectrum. When you walk in the door of these places, you know whether that spiritual influence is happening or not.

"There's a great hunger in our land for authentic spiritual experience and community, and that's what an effective parish or congregation does," Wilkes said. "It feeds your soul and you're in company with other people - so it's a perfect circumstance. And we're not using these role models well enough."

Prior to his four years as adjunct professor in UNCW's English Department, Wilkes witnessed effective parishes where he taught in places such as Boston University and Holy Cross at Worcester, Mass., Columbia University at New York City, and the University of Pittsburgh.

He sees Wilmington as a fertile community, ready to receive larger seeds for artistic, intellectual and spiritual growth, "a happy place to live."

"I swim every day at the YMCA and was talking to an Episcopal pastor who agrees that Wilmington has enough of the old South to give it stability and enough input from the North to make a very fluid mix," Wilkes said. "It's small enough that you can know people and get around. It's big enough with the university and film studio to draw people from around the country.

"My wife Tracy and I are both happy here," Wilkes said. "There's a community feeling of people wanting to make things happen." Tracy, a social worker, has received money from the N.C. Council for the Arts and the Junior League of Wilmington to fund a project called Dreams that provides a first-class arts experience for underprivileged children.

"However, for my own spiritual necessity, I need to get away from the day-to-day life and think and pray, and be in a religious community," said Wilkes who travels to Mepkin Abbey, a Trappist monastery in Monck's Corner, S.C., each month. Twice a year the entire Wilkes family goes to Monck's Corner, including sons Noah, 14, and Daniel, 12. "Trappists have a rich spiritual tradition, and I want to be a part of that."

Wilkes' latest book, Beyond the Walls: Monastic Spirituality for Everyday Life, due for publication by Doubleday in the fall, shows people that "you can visit a monastery and that's good," but what the monastery helps us "take into our lives, that's even more important."

This semester, Wilkes will have his usual full plate - this time revising Beyond the Walls, writing his new book for Lilly and commuting to Notre Dame as the Visiting W. Harold and Martha Welch Professor of American Studies.

Wilkes' published works include one novel, two children's books and 11 nonfiction books (the last published, The Good Enough Catholic). They all went through five revisions before being sent to his editor.

"I try to send the editor my best, hopefully nothing half-cooked," Wilkes said. "A writer must learn to send the absolute best you can do or else you're going to be in trouble."

"The logic behind Paul's religious positions is compelling," said Phil Furia, interim director of the Creative Writing Program. "His writing has made me rethink some of my liberal beliefs."

Furia says it's important for students to know writers who make their living mainly by teaching and writers who make their living mainly by writing. Those who fall in the latter category, "have to make important decisions" about what they choose to write.

Wilkes thinks UNCW provides a "community atmosphere" for both research and writing. This "pool of talent" in both academia and writing is essential to the success of a big project.

"The academic community is much more convivial here than other places I've taught," Wilkes said. "I lay this at the feet of people like Chancellor Jim Leutze and Phil Furia. They're open. They listen. And Marvin Moss. What provost takes the time today to read the books of his faculty members? He's read my books!"

Graduate Student Receives Colonial Dames History Scholarship

Wes Gantt, a second-year graduate student in history, received the American History Scholarship Award from the National Society of the Colonial Dames, District 8. The organization's North Carolina state patriotic chair, Connie Grine of Wilson, presented Gantt with a check for $1,900 Monday.

"I appreciate this support from the National Society of the Colonial Dames," said Gantt. "This award will enable me to travel and conduct research at state historical sites, archives and other resources across the state as I finalize my thesis."

A native of Albemarle, Gantt is focusing on colonial history and the Revolutionary War in North Carolina. He is scheduled to graduate May 1999. Alan Watson is his thesis advisor.

Four states, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, represent District 8 of the National Society of the Colonial Dames with North Carolina having the largest chapter in the organization.

University Theatre Presents Strindberg's The Father

The Department of Art and Theatre production The Father, directed by Terry Rogers, will be performed at 8 p.m. through Saturday with a 3 p.m. matinee Sunday in Kenan Hall SRO Theatre. Admission is $8 for the general public and $4 for faculty and staff. Tickets are available at the Kenan Auditorium box office.

The Father, written by August Strindberg in 1887, deals with the playwright's attempt to understand the destructive conflict between the sexes.

Celebrate! Wilmington Events for March

Play: Teens in Tinseltown, March 5-7 Community Arts Center. For more information, call 251-1788.

Event: Rodeo, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m March 6-7 Poplar Grove Plantation. For admission information, call 686-9518.

Dance: LEAHY, a nine member Celtic ensemble, 4 and 8 p.m. March 6 Thalian Hall Main Stage. For ticket information, call 343-3664.

Lecture: "Hidden Beneath the Waves - Underwater Archaeology," Gordon Watts discusses the CSS Alabama, 3 p.m. March 6 Cape Fear Museum. For more information on this free event, call 341-4350.

Theater: Beauty and the Beast, 3 p.m. March 7 Thalian Hall Main Stage. For ticket information, call 343-3664.

Exhibition: Jane Lawton Baldridge's "One Woman Show," March 11 - April 28 WHQR Gallery. For more information, call 343-1640.

Lecture: Donald Furst, art and theatre, speaks about show framing and judging decisions, 7 p.m. March 11 Cowan House Studio, St. John's Museum. For more information, call 791-5851 or 791-4393.

Musical: Street Dreams: The Inner City, 8 p.m. March 12 and 3 p.m. Saturday March 13, Thalian Hall Main Stage. For ticket information, call 763-1889.

Lecture: "Hidden Beneath the Waves - Underwater Archeology," Roger Smith discusses lost galleons off the Florida coast, 3 p.m. March 13 Cape Fear Museum. For more information on this free event, call 341-4350.

Concert: North Carolina Symphony Plays Classical Favorites, 8 p.m. March 13 Kenan Auditorium. For ticket information, call 962-3500.

Lecture: John Thompson presents "Life on the Lusitania," 4 p.m. March 14 St. John's Museum of Art, For ticket information, call 763-0281.

Play: Career, 8 p.m. March 17-21 and 24-28, Thalian Hall Studio Theatre. For ticket information, call 343-3664.

Dance: Neo Labos Dance Theater, 8 p.m. March 19 Thalian Hall Main Stage. For ticket information, call 343-3664.

Chancellor's Student Hours

The chancellor will hold student hours from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. March 4 in Alderman Hall, Room 110.

Awards Reception

The Chancellor's Achievement Awards reception will be held from 2 to 3 p.m. Friday in the Warwick Center Ballroom. The campus community is invited to attend the reception which honors students who received a 4.0 GPA while carrying a minimum of 15 credit hours for the fall 1998 semester.

YWCA Cape Fear Women of Achievement

Nominations for YWCA Cape Fear Women of Achievement awards and Certificates of Recognition are available in human resources. March 15 is the deadline for Women of Achievement awards, and April 1 is the deadline for certificates of recognition.

Custom Regalia

Faculty interested in purchasing custom regalia should place orders by March 1 for delivery by May 15.

For faculty interested in renting regalia, the cost for doctoral regalia is $32 plus tax and master's regalia is $29 plus tax. For more information, contact Jessiebeth in the bookstore at ext. 3054.

Volunteers Needed for Walking Tours

Volunteers are needed to assist with walking tours, used to welcome new employees to campus. The tours were implemented five years ago to enhance benefits enrollment sessions and are conducted from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. on the second Thursday of each month. Participants receive a complimentary lunch at the Hawk's Nest. Anyone interested in volunteering should contact Elizabeth at ext. 3713.

Shared Leave

Shared leave donations are needed for Tonya Ballard, systems and procedures; Betty Robinson, physical plant; and Mary Crookes, advancement. Send donated vacation leave to Willina in human resources.

Staff Training

Creating Web Pages Using Microsoft FrontPage, 2 to 4 p.m. March 2 and 3.

Introduction to Organizational Development, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. March 16.

Notary Public, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. March 10.

Seven Habits of Highly Effective People, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. March 2, 9, 23, 30 and April 6, 13, 20. This session is for managers and supervisors.

Travel Procedures, 9 to 11 a.m. March 24.

Understanding FRS Reports and Screens, 9 a.m. to noon March 16.

Refer to the Staff Training and Development Booklet for registration information or call ext. 3274. To register for computer-related training, call ext. 4357.

Welcome

Please welcome the following new employee: Mattie Blake, accounting.

Undergraduate Research Fellowship Competition

Any rising junior or senior who has completed at least one semester at UNCW is eligible to apply for undergraduate research fellowships for the 1999-2000 academic year. Fellowship awards consist of a partial tuition waiver of $1,000. The award is intended to stimulate original research among undergraduate students.

Proposed research projects may be in any academic area and should be completed by the end of the 1999-2000 academic year. Each student must have a faculty sponsor who serves as an advisor and assists in the selection of a project suitable to the student's abilities and the timing of the awards. Information packets and application forms are available from Cecile Patrick, Social and Behavioral Science Building, Room 110.

Candidates must file their applications with their respective department chairs by April 3. Department chairs should review the completed application and sign the information sheet indicating the availability of departmental resources for the project. Candidates should then deliver their application package by 9 a.m. April 12 to the Social Behavioral Science Building, Room 110 and register for an interview with the faculty research committee.

For more information, contact Steven Dworkin, research committee chair, at ext. 7378 or e-mail dworkins.

A Slave Ship Speaks

The Cape Fear Museum is hosting the traveling exhibition "A Slave Ship Speaks: The Wreck of the Henrietta Marie" through April 18 in its East Gallery. The critically acclaimed exhibition uses artifacts from the vessel as a focal point to examine the transatlantic slave trade. The Henrietta Marie wrecked off Florida's coast in 1700, and its remains were discovered in 1972. The national tour is sponsored by General Motors.

FACULTY PROFILE/ NED MARTIN:
His Research Excitement is Shared with Staff and Students

by Linda Grattafiori

With the pride of a toddler building his first block tower, Ned Martin shows the Buckminsterfullerene molecule, a new form of elemental carbon that he is studying on his computer. Similar to a soccer ball, the molecule resembles the geodesic dome structures architect Buckminster Fuller made popular in the 1960s.

One of five recipients of the Chancellor's Teaching Excellence Award at last year's convocation and author of 80 grants and publications, Martin still radiates a childlike exuberance for his latest studies in molecular modeling that show how molecules pack into crystals.

Scientists questioned whether or not computer modeling was sufficiently advanced to predict the crystal packing patterns in two different molecules that appear similar but pack differently.

"The computer model gives a very accurate prediction in one of these molecules," Martin said. "Once we've learned how to model these molecules, we could apply what we've learned to modeling the way a drug interacts with an active site, the way a molecule binds to an enzyme."

Computers allow chemists to explore the biochemical applications of drugs "much faster and with greater accuracy." After drugs are designed on a computer, chemists synthesize the computations and test the drugs in the laboratory.

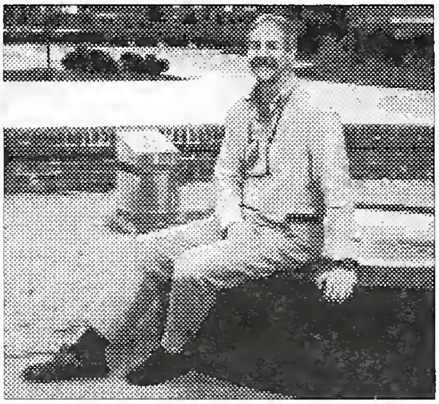
"The results of my theoretical calculations might allow chemists to develop more effective drugs that could combat a specific problem with minimal side effects," said Martin.

"As a chemist, I have a wide number of interests and a half dozen ongoing research projects in different areas."

For the past five years, one of these interests has focused on predicting the magnetic properties of molecules. One of the methods chemists used to determine the structure of a substance involves its interaction with magnets. This method is the basis for Magnetic Resonance Imaging or MRI used in medicine.

Martin's fascination for molecular research began, not with a child's chemistry set, but with a frog. During his senior year of high school, he won first place in a science fair for his research on the muscular physiology of this amphibian.

Martin enrolled in Denison University, Ohio, thinking he wanted to major in biology and be a doctor or dentist.



Martin

"I developed so much respect for my chemistry professors that I switched my major," said Martin.

After completing his Ph.D. in chemistry at Duke in 1972, he joined UNCW's faculty, in part due to its similarity in size to Denison.

"I've seen a lot of growth in the past 25 years," Martin said. "When I was chair of the Chemistry Department (1992-97), I worked with the architect and faculty to design the new Science Building. Although, I miss some aspects of a smaller university, growth definitely has its rewards. The advantages of a larger university include offering a greater variety of faculty and other resources to students."

Recipient of the Will S. DeLoach Endowed Professorship, Martin is delighted to teach molecular modeling and structural chemistry, a course that reflects his research interests.

"I'm team teaching with our first distinguished visiting professor Istvan Hargittai from Budapest, Hungary. We liked him so well, and he liked UNCW, we extended his time to one full year and two spring semesters. His wife, Magdi, a Ph.D. chemist, shares the same research interests as mine."

Proud of his department for the number of faculty members actively involving students in research, Martin cites Bill Cooper, current department chair, for bringing "a great deal of excitement" to the department.

"Bill has contacts all around the world and is very active in his own research," Martin said. "I think he will be taking us to the next level of excellence."

As much as Martin values research, he also regards it as an effective means for one-on-one teaching.

"Students are my raison d'etre and deserve my best," he said. "Listening to students is key."

Martin begins each class by asking what questions students have about the previous lecture, readings or work assignments. He gives mid-semester evaluations and asks students to jot down three things they like about the class and three things they would change. After compiling the responses, he summarizes them and responds in class, either making the requested changes for the remainder of the term, or in some cases explaining why he thinks it best not to make the suggested changes.

Students learn in different ways, so Martin presents class materials in different forms.

"The more students understand the reasoning behind why something behaves as it does, the more they're likely to learn it," he said. "I vary presentation techniques with some discussion, multimedia presentations and hand-held three dimensional models."

Martin continued the idea of "group learning assignments" in his organic chemistry course. Group learning fosters free exchange and builds confidence among students; it develops valuable skills of cooperation and collaboration, which are sought by future industrial employers.

Up-to-date computer modeling programs are employed during instruction, and students are required to do a computer modeling project as part of a team effort. The results are written as a research report. Most of Martin's classes have either some or all of the course materials available on the World Wide Web.

"I have provided on-line access (with a hot link in my lab section's homepage) to a Web site that contains safety information on all chemicals students might encounter in their laboratory experiments," he said. "Students in my lab sections are instructed how to access and use the information in these material safety data sheets, and they are required to utilize this resource to look up information about the hazards and handling precautions for all the chemicals they use in lab."

"To do well in chemistry, students are conditioned to learn facts in an organized way," Martin said. "Much like a foreign language, there are sets of rules which students need to learn to build upon.

"All students have potential to learn, and it's my job to unlock that potential," he said. "I try to treat students fairly. Those sitting on the back row are just as important as those on the front."

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement Vol. XXVIII, No. 31 March 4, 1999 Phillip Brown, editor

UNCW Names Arkansas Bladesmith, Jerry Fisk, National Living Treasure

Jerry Fisk, a Lockesburg, Ark., bladesmith/knifemaker, has been named the 1998-99 National Living Treasure by the UNCW Museum of World Cultures.

North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt solicited nominations from governors nationwide. Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee nominated Fisk for the honor.

UNCW Chancellor James R. Leutze will present the award to Fisk at a banquet 7 p.m. March 13 in the Warwick Center Ballroom.

As National Living Treasure, Fisk will receive a bronze medal designed by Stephen D. LeQuire, sculptor and associate professor of art. As with past medals, it will be custom-designed to specifically honor this year's recipient. There is also a monetary award.

Fisk, who became interested in the art of making knives and swords at age 10, is a perfectionist. An internationally respected craftsman of knives, swords, daggers and other decorative weaponry, he spends hundreds of hours hammering up to 20,000 layers of steel for each blade. Intricately detailed and ornate, each blade is functional and performance reliable. Occasionally, Fisk accents his creations with precious metals and gems.

Currently field editor for Blade magazine, Fisk has had knives featured on the cover of six publications including Knife World, Fighting Knives, Knives Illustrated and Ken Warner's Knife annual. In addition, he has written a book on Damascus steel which is used as a textbook at the Arkansas-based School of Bladesmithing.

The National Living Treasure award, presented every two years, was originated in 1992 by Gerald Shinn, former director of the Museum of World Cultures, and Estell Lee, former North Carolina secretary of economic and community development. Past recipients include Dale Chihuly, a Washington glassblower; Toshiko Takaezu, a New Jersey ceramic artist; and Nancy Crow, an Ohio quilt maker.

The National Living Treasure award is designed to honor Americans working in traditional handcrafts using wood, glass, ceramics, metal and textiles who transform them into art. It is an outgrowth of UNCW's North Carolina Living Treasure award.

Attendance to the banquet is by invitation only. Contact the Museum of World Cultures by March 11 at ext. 7233 for information on obtaining an invitation.

Jerry Fisk

This year's National Living Treasure recipient will speak at 10:30 a.m. March 15 in the University Union Living Room. He will discuss his weaponry designs and bladesmithing techniques. This reception is free and open to the public.

UNCW Partner of The Learning Network

UNCW-TV is one of four partners providing original programming for The Learning Network of the Cape Fear, which airs locally on Time Warner Cable Channel 5.

This collaborative effort between UNCW, Cape Fear Community College, New Hanover County Schools and New Hanover Regional Medical Center is designed to provide quality programming to educate, enrich and inform local residents. The station will broadcast original productions, the award-winning "Classic Arts Showcase," health programs for women, county school board meetings and a calendar of events and other activities.

UNCW coordinates and administers the Learning Network in conjunction with its partners. Programming is scheduled from noon to 8 p.m., Monday through Friday.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Jazz Concert

The Music Department will present a joint concert by the jazz combo and faculty jazz sextet at 8 p.m. tonight in Kenan Auditorium.

The jazz combo is a student ensemble directed by Rebecca Kane. Performing in the faculty sextet are Frank Bongiorno, saxophone; Jerald Shynett, trombone; Rebecca Kane, piano; Bob Russell, guitar; Vince Stout, bass; and Alvin Atkinson, drums. General admission is $4, faculty, staff and senior citizens, $2 and UNCW students with valid ID, free.

For more information, contact the Department of Music at ext. 3390.

Student Art Show

The Department of Art and Theatre will hold its annual juried student art show through March 24 in the Claude Howell Gallery, Kenan Hall. Wilmington artist Virginia Wright-Frierson will serve as the show's juror, and there will be a gallery reception from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. tonight.

For more information, contact the Department of Art and Theatre at ext. 3440.

Postal News

Departments that have extra inter-campus envelopes should contact postal services at ext. 3734 for redistribution.

UNC-TV Spotlights Lumina Pavilion

UNC-TV will air "Lumina . . . Remembering the Light" at 9 p.m. March 10. This hour-long program includes rare photographs of the Wrightsville Beach landmark concentrating on the 1920s, '30s and '40s.

Note of Appreciation

Barbara Woodbury, advancement, would like to "thank everyone for the flowers, cards, prayers and expressions of sympathy following the recent death of my father."

Graduate Thesis Defense

Janine Doyle, biological sciences, will defend her thesis "Ultrastructure of Recurrent Type I Interneurons of Callinectes sapidus" at 2 p.m. Friday in the new Science Building, Room 103.

Funding Faculty International Travel

March 22 is the deadline to submit proposals for faculty international travel funding for summer and fall 1999. Awards are available for up to $900, limited to one per 12-month period. Proposal forms are available from departmental offices or by calling ext. 3685.

Books for Belize

The Office of International Programs is seeking recent academic books in all fields to send as gifts to the library of the University of Belize. Deliver books to University Union, Room 103. UNCW has signed an exchange agreement with the University of Belize.

Art Exhibits

Arts in Action series will host the exhibits "Follow the Child" and "Nature's Fibers" in the Warwick Center and University Union Living Room respectively.

"Follow the Child" will be displayed March 9 through June 1. The exhibit will feature creative work by students of the Helen Alice Higgins Montessori School in Wilmington. The artists range in age from 18 months to 12 years old. There will be a "Meet the Artists" reception from 5 to 8 p.m. March 15 in the Warwick Center lobby.

"Nature's Fibers," featuring a collection of mixed media artwork by Jan Lewis, will be displayed March 8 through May 17. There will be a "Meet the Artist" reception from 6 to 8 p.m. March 9 in the University Union, Living Room. Lewis, a UNCW alumna, is a member of the Hampstead Artists League.

For more information, contact Arts in Action at ext. 3827.

Tony Hillerman to Present Reading

Mystery writer Tony Hillerman will read from his work at 8 p.m. March 19 in Kenan Auditorium. The best-selling author of Sacred Clowns, Coyote Waits and A Thief of Time, Hillerman sets his novels in the southwestern United States.

Hillerman was born in Sacred Heart, Okla., and grew up among the Pottawamie and Seminole Indians. He earned his bachelor's degree from the University of Oklahoma and master's degree from the University of New Mexico. A past president of the Mystery Writers of America, he won the group's Edgar and Grand Master awards.

This free event is open to the public and is sponsored by the Creative Writing and English Departments. A reception and book signing will follow. For more information, call ext. 3320.

Student Leader Recognition

April is student leader recognition month. Departments or organizations that are planning leadership recognition events and would like to publicize events honoring student leaders through campus recreation publications should submit a brief description to Amy Lanham at ext. 7393 or e-mail wittea. March 17 is the deadline for submissions.

Chemistry Seminars

Jeffrey Wright, candidate for the endowed chair in marine bio-organic chemistry, will present the following seminars: "Opportunities in Marine Biotechnology: From Therapeutics to Toxins" at 3 p.m. March 16 in the new Science Building, Room 202 and "Lethal Weapon 2: The Diol Ester of the Diarrhetic Shellfish Poisoning Toxins" at 3 p.m. March 17 in the new Science Building, Room 202.

Crime Prevention

FOR STAFF AND FACULTY

ALLTEL Cellular Service at UNCW

To better serve the university community, access to the University Police is now available to Alltel Cellular phone customers by dialing *27 (*CP). This is a free service. This service may be used any time while on University property to request police assistance and/or service.

Crimes Around Campus

So far, during the months of January and February, eight crimes have occurred that have affected staff and faculty members of the university community.

October 1, 1998

Between October 1st and February 16th a camera case, camera and several lenses were taken out of a locked cabinet located in a lab in the New Science Building. These items were valued at approximately $680.00.

January 5, 1999

Between January 5th and 8th an unknown subject entered Social & Behavior Room 105F and took computer software CDs valued at over $3600 from an unlocked office.

January 7, 1999

Between 1:45 p.m. and 3:00 p.m. a wallet was taken from Room 132 Kenan Hall. The wallet was later discovered in Wilmington with approximately $50 worth of items missing.

January 8, 1999

Between 12:22 p.m. and 12:55 p.m. an unknown person cut the locks off of three lockers in the Hanover Gym locker room and took approximately $96 in cash.

January 12, 1999

Between 11:00 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. an unknown person took the wallet and checkbook out of a purse belonging to a staff member at CMSR. The purse was located on top of the desk in the front office of the building. The items were valued at $50.00 .

January 14, 1999

During the day, an unknown person took a TV and VCR from a Mechanical Room in the Warwick Center.

February 12, 1999

Between 7:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. an unknown person took a wallet out of the purse of a staff member. The purse was located on the floor under a desk in Wagoner Dining Hall. The value of the wallet was $25.00.

February 17, 1999

Between February 17th at 11:45 a.m. and February 18th at 13:45 p.m. a laptop computer valued at $2800.00 was taken from a file cabinet in an office located in the Trask Auditorium.

If you believe you have become a victim of a crime on campus, call University Police at Ext. 3184 right away to report it.

Preventing Crimes

All of us expect to come to work and do our jobs without becoming a victim of crime. Did you know that there are some steps that you can take to lessen the possibility of a property crime occurring in your workplace?

Most property crimes occur because the suspect sees an easy opportunity to accomplish his or her task. They find an unlocked office door, a purse sitting underneath the desk, or keys in the desk drawer and act on that opportunity.

Some simple steps you can take to decrease this opportunity include:

•Always lock your office door, even if you are just stepping out for a few minutes.

•Never leave your purse sitting on the floor, under the desk or on top of it. Instead, lock it in the file cabinet or take it with you.

•Briefcases, laptop computers and software should be locked in a desk drawer or file cabinet.

•If you see a person who doesn't belong in the area, ask if you can help them.

•If someone seems suspicious, note a description and call the University Police. If possible, get a description of his or her automobile and a direction of travel.

For more information or to set up a crime prevention presentation, call University Police at Ext. 3184.

Crime Prevention Programs

The University Police Department offers a variety of crime prevention programs for the staff and faculty members of the university. These programs include:

- Operation ID: Learn how to keep your valuables out of the hands of thieves.
- Sexual Assault Awareness and Risk Reduction.
- Ride Along: Experience a patrol officer's daily routine.
- Alcohol and DWI education featuring "Fatal Vision" goggles.
- Think Smart: A convicted felon comes to your class and tells his or her story - A frank look at the other side.
- Employee Security: A video is available which covers safety and security issues for university employees.
- Personal Safety: Learn how to keep yourself safe during your day-to-day activities.
- RAD (Rape Aggression Defense) This class is offered for female staff and faculty members only.

We are soliciting interest in a RAD class to be held during summer session. This class would begin at 5:00 p.m. rather than the normal 7:30 p.m.

If any staff or faculty members would like to schedule a speaker from the University Police or Think Smart Program, please call the University Police at Ext. 3184.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Art Exhibit

The exhibit "Fish in Ink - Gyotaku: The Confluence of Art and Science" will be displayed through April 14 at Randall Library. The original artwork is by Mary Moser, fisheries biologist at CMSR.

A "Meet the Artist" reception will be held from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. March 15 in the library. For more information, contact Beth Roberts at ext. 3270.

Student Artwork at Restaurant

The Deluxe Restaurant at 114 Market Street will display student artwork March 8-31. Twelve students from one of Eric Lawing's painting classes contributed five paintings each for the display which may be viewed during the restaurant's business hours.

A "Meet the Artists" reception will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. March 16 at the restaurant. All paintings displayed will be for sale.

Watanabe to Lecture at Cape Fear Museum

Wade Watanabe, CMSR, will present "Farming of the Future: Mariculture" at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Cape Fear Museum. The program, part of the Sunday at the Museum lecture series, is free and open to the public.

Alumni Scholarship

The UNCW Alumni Association offers 11 scholarships to current or prospective UNCW students. The scholarships, awarded annually, are based upon academic achievement and school and community involvement. Applicants must have a minimum 3.0 GPA on all high school or college work. Completed application packages are due in the alumni relations office by March 12.

Students can obtain applications from the financial aid office, university advancement or the alumni relations office at the Wise Alumni House. For more information, contact Pat Corcoran at ext. 2682.

Relay for Life

For more information or to join the Relay for Life, a team event to raise money for the fight against cancer, contact Sharon Boyd, UNCW team captain, at ext. 3722, Diane Matthews at ext. 3065, Annie Aldrich at ext. 3099 or Jeff Stanfield at ext. 3928.

Participants form teams of 10 to 15 people who take turns walking or running in shifts. The 24-hour relay begins at 6 p.m. April 23 at the UNCW track. The event is sponsored by the New Hanover County chapter of the American Cancer Society.

Art to Learn Math

The Division for Public Service and Extended Education is offering "Art as Math" from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. March 12. The course, aimed at children ages seven to 10, is designed to understand math principles using such hands-on activities as drawing physical graphs and charting sizes and comparisons. The fee is $20 per person if enrolled by Friday and $30 after the deadline. The cost includes all supplies. For more information, call ext. 3195.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

Karen Shafer, SMEC, received $19,988 from the N.C. Science and Mathematics Association for her project "Technology Professional Development - Now."

Mary Moser, CMSR, received $32,136 from the Coastal Zoning Resource for her project "Monitoring of Sturgeon for Blast Effect Mitigation Tests."

Janet Ellerby and John Clifford, English, read papers at the annual meeting of the Modern Language Association in San Francisco. Ellerby's topic was "Finding a Place for Kristeva and Transference Love in Pedagogy." Clifford's was "Preparing Graduate Students for a Career in Literature."

Troy Alphin, biological sciences, received $22,085 from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for his project "Long-term Trends for Community Development in Created Wetlands."

Brooks Dodson, English, published the article "Colleen McCullough's Tim : A Literary Representation of Mental Retardation" in the February 1999 issue of Mental Retardation.

Steven Emslie, biological sciences, received $150,350 from NASA for his project "High-trophic Level Ecosystem Response to Climate Change in the Antartic Peninsula."

Kathy Rugoff, English, published "Ruth's Journey in the Fields: Feminism in Ozick's 'The Pagan Rabbi'" in the collection of essays Women on the Edge: Ethnicity and Gender in Short Stories, Garland Press.

Martin Posey and Troy Alphin, biological sciences, received $15,000 from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration for their project "Benthic Infaunal Communities in Phragmites australis and Spartina alterniflora Marshes: A Comparison of Resource Quality."

James Merritt, CMSR, received $7,500 from CP&L for his project "Sutton Lake Creel Survey."

Deborah Dowd and John Bennett, HPER, presented "North Carolina High School Physical Education in the Age of Educational Reform" at the Southern District and North Carolina Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance in Greensboro. Judy Peel from N.C. State University and Chris Luther from the University of Kentucky were co-presenters of the presentation.

OFFICIAL NOTICES

Pardon Our Dust

During spring break, Randall Library will move the general collection stacks holding books in the fields of education, music and art closer to the main staircase. The move is in preparation for an expansion of the special collections.

Randall Library Spring Break Hours

Randall Library will observe the following hours during spring break: 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, closed Sunday, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. March 8-11, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. March 12, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. March 13 and 1 p.m. to midnight March 14.

Ready to Retire

The State Retirement System Division will hold a pre-retirement conference from 9:30 a.m. to noon March 31 in the Warwick Center, Ballroom 1. The conference will provide information on retirement eligibility, selection of optional payment arrangements, designation of beneficiaries, hospital/medical coverage and other issues. Employees who are age 60 or older or who are otherwise eligible to retire are encouraged to attend. For more information, call Elizabeth at ext. 3713.

Reimbursement Deadline

March 31 is the deadline to submit all 1998 out-of-pocket expenses for health care and dependent day care spending accounts to Aon Consulting. Money not claimed by March 31 will be forfeited. For claim forms, call ext. 3006 or ext. 3713.

Chancellor Student Hour Canceled

The chancellor's student hour scheduled for 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. March 16 has been canceled.

Volunteers Needed for Walking Tours

Volunteers are needed to assist with walking tours, used to welcome new employees to campus. The tours were implemented five years ago to enhance benefits enrollment sessions and are conducted from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. on the second Thursday of each month. Participants receive a complimentary lunch at the Hawk's Nest. Anyone interested in volunteering should contact Elizabeth at ext. 3713.

YWCA Cape Fear Women of Achievement

Nominations for YWCA Cape Fear Women of Achievement awards and Certificates of Recognition are available in human resources. March 15 is the deadline for Women of Achievement awards, and April 1 is the deadline for certificates of recognition.

Shared Leave

Shared leave donations are needed for Tonya Ballard, systems and procedures; Mary Crookes, advancement; Lori Preiss, human resources; and Freedia Raynor and Betty Robinson, physical plant. Send donated vacation leave to Willina in human resources.

Staff Training

Introduction to Organizational Development, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. March 16.

Notary Public, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. March 10.

Travel Procedures, 9 to 11 a.m. March 24.

Emmy-Winning Director of Photography to Lecture at UNCW

Emmy Award-winning director of photography David Goulding will give a public presentation at 3 p.m. March 19 in Kenan Hall, Room 121. In addition to discussing filming techniques, his presentation will include scenes from several award-winning documentaries.

A freelance director of photography and cameraman who has won 13 regional Emmy awards, Goulding has worked on the documentaries The Idolmakers, a behind-the-scenes look at the cameramen of NFL Film, and Violent Volcano, about the destruction on Montserrat, for National Geographic TV. He also worked on Nature's Rage: In Harm's Way, a documentary on hurricanes, tornadoes and floods for Readers Digest television, as well as documentaries for 60 Minutes, ABC and the International Olympic Committee. Prior to his freelance work, Goulding worked as a photographer/editor for the CBS affiliates WUSA-TV in Washington, D.C., and WRAL-TV in Raleigh.

Goulding is also a member of the National Press Photographers Association and the White House News Photographers Association. He was named "Cameraman of the Year" in 1993 and 1994 by the White House News Photographers Association.

In addition to his public presentation, Goulding will lead a one-day workshop March 20 for students in the Communication Studies and Art and Theatre Departments. He will discuss and provide hands-on training about camera operation and camera and lighting techniques. He will also provide tips on acting from a cameraman's perspective.

Goulding

The public presentation and student workshops are sponsored by the Departments of Art and Theatre and Communication Studies. For more information, contact Tom Macie at ext. 3446.

Arts in Action Hosts Second Hand Dance

UNCW Arts in Action will host a performance by the Second Hand Dance company at 8 p.m. March 23 in Kenan Auditorium.

The dance company is a post-modern performance ensemble of three artists who use an odd assortment of props and costumes, such as cutting boards, popcorn poppers and vegetables, to create a blend of dance, wit and muscle. Performances include a human fly, flashlight tangos and other extraordinary transformations.

Tickets are $12 for the general public, $6 for faculty and staff and $4 for UNCW students with valid ID and are available from the Kenan Auditorium box office or the University Union Information Center.

For more information, call the Activities and Leadership Center at ext. 3827.

Career Services • Special Edition– Summer Job Fair '99

Thurs, Mar 18
10am-2pm

What will you be doing this summer? Will you retreat to the beach, or will you be one of the millions of other college students working this summer? Summer jobs and internships not only look great on a resume, but they also provide the opportunity to gain experience in fields that you are interested in pursuing after graduation; and, of course, they are always good for some cash.

The process of finding a good summer job or internship resembles the process of finding a permanent job in many ways, so much of what you learn about yourself and about job search strategies in seeking a summer job or internship will be helpful to you later.

First, set your priorities. What are you looking for in a summer job or internship? What kinds of things are important to you? An opportunity to test your career goals? Adventure? Money? An opportunity to serve others? Travel?

Obviously, the types of jobs or internships available to you depend to some extent upon your qualifications, your access to transportation, and your financial needs. As you begin to set your summer priorities, it is important to begin to think about what you have to offer a prospective employer. What personal traits, skills, education, and experience do you hope to "sell"?

Then begin networking with potential job or internship sites. Talk with Career Services staff and UNCW faculty about possibilities. Attend the Summer Job Fair. Use the web resources listed in the right column. Use the "Twelve Flavors" article on the reverse side of this newsletter to suggest more summer employment options. Use the telephone, the Yellow Pages, employer directories, parents, friends, parents of friends, and friends of parents. The more people you talk to, the more contacts you will develop for your employment network.

CAREER SERVICES

SUMMER HELP WANTED IN TWELVE DIFFERENT FLAVORS

Summer is a great time for you to gain valuable work experience. But which flavor would you like best?

• Get An Internship. The richest flavor would be an internship, a project-oriented experience with an emphasis on learning. Most interns earn academic credit as well as pay.

• Start Your Own Business. For a second flavor, you could try out your entrepreneurial skills and create your own job, such as yard work, childcare, fireworks stand, house/plant/pet setting, tour guide, rug cleaning, house painting or an ice cream wagon.

• Be A Temp. A third flavor option is temporary work through a temp agency, providing support services for several different organizations throughout the summer. Many organizations seek temporary help for employees who are on vacation. Many of these jobs include clerical and support functions, including word processing, filing, data entry, mailings and so on.

• Volunteer. Volunteering is an important fourth flavor, with many social service agencies, schools, churches and not-for-profit organizations very willing to exchange work hours for valuable experience opportunities.

• Be Amusing. Amusement and theme parks provide a fifth summer flavor, with typical jobs as concessionaires, groundskeepers, retail clerks, crafts demonstrators, entertainers, tour guides, animal keepers and parking attendants.

• Camp Out. Hello Mother. Hello Father. Don't forget Camp Granada. Camps can include single gender or coed, day camps or overnight, athletic camps, camps for physically or mentally challenged, church camps, and wilderness camps. Pay is relatively low, but most jobs include room and board. Jobs range from the ubiquitous camp counselor to kitchen worker, maintenance, musician, sports instructor, arts and crafts and nursing staff.

• Build Something. Construction is a favorite summer flavor for those seeking outdoor or physically challenging work. Pay is usually high, but the work may not be particularly exciting. Typical jobs include road crew, riveter, assembler, welder, concrete paver, sandblaster, carpenter's helper, plasterer electrician, drywall installer and roustabout.

• Serve Somebody. The eighth flavor comes in many flavors itself: food service. Jobs in the food industry are old standbys for college students because they are relatively easy to find, and often provide a great deal of scheduling flexibility. Typical jobs include: waiter/waitress, host, bartender, bus person, dishwasher, cook, cashier, manager, entertainer and maintenance.

• Uncle Sam & Company. Government– including federal, state, county and city– are another option, but are fewer in number because of budget cuts. These jobs are usually very competitive, so you should apply as early as possible.

• Park It. National and state parks are popular work sites, but competition for these jobs is usually keen. You should apply directly to the parks for park ranger, fire control, rescue, guide, conservation, maintenance, clerical, lifeguard, or food service jobs.

• Join the Country Club Set. Resorts, hotels, dude ranches and country clubs also provide attractive environments for summer jobs. Pay is often near minimum wage and room and board are occasionally included. Beaches attract many college students, so the jobs are filled quickly. Apply and arrive in the area as early as possible.

• There's No Place Like Home. The twelfth flavor for summer work is as a homemaker. Hire yourself out to your parents or others to keep a house clean, yard mowed, laundry done, and meals prepared. You will learn valuable life skills, as well as an appreciation for all your parents have been doing for years. Besides, you already know your supervisors and have a place to stay. Good luck with your interviews!

Tony Hillerman to Present Reading

Mystery writer Tony Hillerman will read from his work at 8 p.m. March 19 in Kenan Auditorium. The best-selling author of Sacred Clowns, Coyote Waits and A Thief of Time, Hillerman sets his novels in the southwestern United States.

Hillerman was born in Sacred Heart, Okla., and grew up among the Pottawamie and Seminole Indians. He earned his bachelor's degree from the University of Oklahoma and master's degree from the University of New Mexico. A past president of the Mystery Writers of America, he won the group's Edgar and Grand Master awards.

This free event is open to the public and is sponsored by the Creative Writing and the English Departments. A reception and book signing will follow. For more information, call ext. 3320.

Art Exhibits

Arts in Action series will host the exhibits "Follow the Child" and "Nature's Fibers" in the Warwick Center and University Union Living Room respectively.

"Follow the Child" will be displayed through June 1. The exhibit will feature creative work by students of the Helen Alice Higgins Montessori School in Wilmington. The artists range in age from 18 months to 12 years. There will be a "Meet the Artists" reception from 5 to 8 p.m. Monday in the Warwick Center lobby.

"Nature's Fibers," featuring a collection of mixed media artwork by Jan Lewis, will be displayed through May 17. Lewis, a UNCW alumna, is a member of the Hampstead Artists League.

For more information, contact Arts in Action at ext. 3827

Chemistry Camp

Positively Reactive, a one-week chemistry camp for youth ages eight to 15, will be offered by the Division for Public Service and Extended Education in two summer sessions. The first session, for ages eight to 11, will be held from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. June 14-18. The second session for ages 12 to 15 will run from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. July 26-30. For cost and registration deadlines, call ext. 3578.

Summer by the Sea Day Camp

UNCW's Summer by the Sea Day Camp will offer nine sessions for students ages seven to 11. The camp is cosponsored by UNCW, New Hanover County Schools, the N.C. Aquarium at Fort Fisher and the Fort Fisher recreation area.

Camp dates are May 31-June 4, June 7-11, June 14-18, June 21-25, June 28-July 2, July 12-16, July 19-23, July 26-30 and August 2-6. For cost and registration deadlines, call ext. 3578.

Chemistry Seminars

Jeffrey L. C. Wright, candidate for the endowed chair in marine bio-organic chemistry, will present the following seminars: "Opportunities in Marine Biotechnology: From Therapeutics to Toxins" at 3 p.m. Tuesday in the new Science Building, Room 202 and "Lethal Weapon 2: The Diol Ester of the Diarrhetic Shellfish Poisoning Toxins" at 3 p.m. Wednesday in the new Science Building, Room 202.

Steve Emslie, biological sciences, received $150,351 from NASA for his project "High-trophic Level Ecosystem Response to Climate Change in the Antarctic Peninsula." His co-investigators on the project are William Fraser, Montana State University; Gary Miller, University of New Mexico; and Eileen Hofmann, Old Dominion University. Emslie will complete field work for this project with a graduate student in spring 2000.

James J. Megivern, philosophy and religion, participated in the panel discussion "Sparing Cain: Executive Clemency in Capital Cases" sponsored by the Committee on Capital Punishment. The panel, held in New York, included Pat Robertson, chief executive officer of the Christian Broadcasting Network; Daniel Kobil, professor of law at Capital University School of Law; and Bianca Jagger, executive director's leadership council, Amnesty International.

Philip Gerard, creative writing, delivered the keynote address at the National Favorite Poem Project readings at Old Dominion University. In "The Courage of the Reader and the Writer," Gerard explored the risks readers and writers take in approaching the truth, especially the unpopular truth, and the necessity for honest writers and open-minded readers to the future of democracy. The event was part of a nationwide initiative headed by U.S. poet laureate Robert Pinsky to celebrate the tradition of poetry and its role in everyday life. In addition, Gerard's personal essay "What They Don't Tell You About Hurricanes" is in the current issue of the journal Creative Nonfiction.

Joanne E. Nottingham, education, published "The Use of Critical Thinking in the Decision to Teach: Ten Male Student Responses" in the National Social Science Association Journal, vol. 12, no. 1. This publication was also presented as a paper at the Eastern Educational Research Association annual conference in Hilton Head, S.C.

John Bennett, HPER, received an award from NCAHPERD/SDAHPERD for "Excellence in Teaching and Promoting Dance."

UNCW Celebrates Women's History Month

Kamenish

Lavin

Ferrato

UNCW is hosting its 18th annual celebration of National Women's History Month with several lectures discussing women in history and current issues.

Paula Kamenish from UNCW's English Department will present "Women and Violence: A True Crime of Passion," a lecture and slide presentation, at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Award-winning photojournalist Donna Ferrato will lecture on "When Love Hurts: Violence and Relationships" at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Warwick Center Ballroom. Ferrato is the author of Living with the Enemy, a book about domestic violence. Her photographs have been used by the White House for a national ad campaign addressing domestic violence and welfare reform and published in Life, USA Today and twice on the cover of Time.

Linda Lavin, actress and founder of the Linda Lavin Arts Foundation and "Girlfriends," will serve as keynote speaker. She will give "An Insider's View of Women, the Arts and Popular Culture" at 8 p.m. March 30 in Cameron Hall Auditorium.

All programs are free and open to the public and sponsored by the Office of the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, the Faculty Women's Network and the Office of the Chancellor.

Hillerman Reading in Kenan Auditorium

Mystery writer Tony Hillerman will read from his work at 8 p.m. Friday in Kenan Auditorium. The best-selling author of Sacred Clowns, Coyote Waits and A Thief of Time, Hillerman sets his novels in the southwestern United States.

This free event is open to the public and is sponsored by the Creative Writing and the English Departments. A reception and book signing will follow. For more information, call ext. 3320.

UNCW Hosts Annual Guest Artist Jazz Festival

The annual UNCW Guest Artist Jazz Festival is scheduled for March 26 and 27 in the Warwick Center Ballroom and will feature trumpeter Marvin Stamm and his quartet comprised of drummer Ed Soph, pianist Bill Mays and bassist Rufus Reid. Stamm and Soph will be soloists in a concert with the UNCW Big Band at 8 p.m. March 26. Stamm and his quartet will perform at 8 p.m. March 27.

While a student at North Texas State University, Stamm was discovered by orchestra leader Stan Kenton. Following graduation, Stamm worked as Kenton's trumpet soloist for two years, recording five albums with the orchestra. After moving to New York in 1966, Stamm established a career as a jazz and studio trumpeter. He has performed and recorded with Quincy Jones, Paul McCartney, the Rolling Stones, Frank Sinatra and others. His solo recordings include Machinations, Stammpede, Bob Boy and Mystery Man.

Additional events for the festival include local and statewide high school and college jazz band performances with clinics by Stamm from noon to 5 p.m. March 26 and 27. These afternoon clinics are free and open to the public.

General admission for the two evening concerts is $10, $5 for faculty and staff, senior citizens and children under 12. Admission is free for UNCW students with a valid ID. For more information, call the Music Department at ext. 3390.

Seminar on Southern Africa

Because UNCW is a member of the South Atlantic States Association for Asian and African Studies (SASASAAS), faculty and students are invited to participate in a two-day SASASAAS-sponsored seminar on Southern Africa April 1 and 2 at UNC Charlotte. The seminar includes lectures by Randall Robinson, TransAfrica president, and Mark Mathanabe, author of Kaffir Boy. For more information, contact Paula Kamenish at ext. 3617 or e-mail kamenishp.

Feminist Colloquium

The feminist colloquium will meet noon Monday in the Morton Hall Faculty Common to discuss the chapter "Giving White Men (and Other Supposed Oppressors) a Break" from Michael Lerner's The Politics of Meaning. A copy of the reading is on reserve in Randall Library.

Biological Sciences Seminar

Robert George will present "Ongoing Studies on Crustacea: Swedish and U.S. East Coast and Updating ASB 1999" at 2 p.m. Friday in the new Science Building, Room 103.

Secretary's Day

The bookstore is stocked with balloons, candy and mugs for Secretary's Day, April 21. In addition the bookstore can deliver cakes and balloons. Cakes must be ordered by April 14.

ACE Films Sponsoring Night at the Oscars

ACE Films is sponsoring "A Night at the Oscars" at 7 p.m. Sunday in the University Union, Union Station. In addition to viewing the Academy Awards presentation, there will be free food, contests and prizes. For more information, contact the Association for Campus Entertainment at ext. 3842 or call the ACELine at ext. 7788.

Nominations Sought for Award for Faculty Scholarship

March 31 is the deadline for nominations for the Award for Faculty Scholarship. Nominees must be a full-time faculty member who has exhibited genuine interest in scholarship, research and creativity; earned the respect of colleagues and peers, maintained high standards of integrity; fostered interest and involvement of students and colleagues in scholarship and creative work; and demonstrated a significant contribution to scholarship, research and creativity at UNCW.

Letters of nomination are limited to one page and must indicate how the nominee satisfies the criteria for consideration. Submit letters to the chancellor's office.

The recipient of the 1999 Award for Faculty Scholarship will be announced at fall convocation.

UNCW Mixed Bowling League Ends Season

The UNCW Mixed Bowling League ended its second season March 4. The six-team league started last September and competed for 23 weeks.

The first-place team was Tighten Up. Team members were Phillip Brown and Becky Chilcote, advancement, Liz Johnson, accounting, and Brenda Teague, admissions. In second place was Ne'er a Doubt comprised of Lynn DiFiore, Muriel Rockwell, academic support, Vera Sykes and Harry Whitted, auxiliary services. The Wizards finished in third place. Team members were Larry Ferrell, Linda Ferrell, enrollment affairs, and Barbara and Leo Hammond.

In addition to team awards, individual efforts were also recognized. Liz Johnson received awards for highest individual average and high series scratch. Ray Pitts, psychology, received an award for most improved. Carol Pilgrim, psychology, received an award for high series handicap. Mike Abernathy, financial aid, and Debbie Easterling, auxiliary services, received awards for high game scratch. Phillip Brown, advancement, received an award for high game handicap.

This year's league officers, Linda Ferrell, president; Brenda Teague, vice-president; and Phillip Brown, secretary/treasurer, were re-elected.

"League officers are already planning for the start of our third year in late August," said Ferrell, adding that the league may switch from Cardinal Lanes on Shipyard Boulevard and bowl at Ten Pin Alley in the Marketplace Mall off South College Road.

"Ten Pin Alley's proximity to campus would be the main reason to switch," said Ferrell. "We had a fantastic season, and I think everyone who participated had a great time. By moving closer to campus, league officers hope to increase the number of teams for the next league."

Free Babysitting

The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with Theta Chi, Delta Tau Delta and Kappa Sigma fraternities, will provide a night of free babysitting for all faculty and staff from 6 to 11 p.m. March 30 in King Hall, Room 100. Sorority and fraternity members will provide games, videos and constructive play for children attending. Interested faculty and staff should RSVP by March 26 and provide the age and number of children to the Office of the Dean of Students at ext. 3119.

Informational Meeting

Faculty are encouraged to announce that an informational meeting on the 1999 summer session at Universidad San Francisco de Quito in Ecuador will be held from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. Wednesday in the University Union, Room 103B. Refreshments will be served.

For more information, contact Melinda Johansson at 251-5944 or e-mail her at duende@coastalnet.com. The application deadline for this program has been extended to March 31.

Farewell Reception

A farewell reception for Brock Snyder, campus recreation assistant director for outdoor programs, will be held from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. March 30 in the University Union Glass Room.

Business Week

Some 60 business executives and professionals will gather at the Cameron School of Business March 24 and 25 to present students and faculty with insights on current business issues and career opportunities.

This year's theme is "20 Years of Business Excellence" as the Cameron School of Business celebrates its 20th anniversary.

Howard Rockness, dean of the Cameron School of Business, will serve as moderator of the panel discussion "Career Development and Placement," the kickoff event for Business Week at 9 a.m. Wednesday. Panelists will be Ken Bouyer, assistant director of national recruiting, Ernst and Young; Tom Prichard, retired senior executive, Eli Lilly and Co.; Rick Sears, president, the Wilmington Group; and Jeff Stocks, executive vice president, Manpower Companies of Eastern N.C.

The keynote speaker is Nathan Morton, chair of BuildNet. His presentation will be at 11 a.m. March 25 in Cameron Hall Auditorium.

Presentations by, and talks with, business executives and professionals from a wide variety of fields will be conducted for students from 10:10 a.m. to 3:50 p.m. Wednesday and 9 a.m. to 3:20 p.m. March 25.

Business Week events are free and open to the public on a space available basis. The activities were organized and planned by a student and faculty committee, chaired by Randy Hanson, in cooperation with alumni and the business community. For more information, contact Hanson at ext. 3801.

Acclaimed Pianist to Perform in Kenan Auditorium

Edwards

Concert pianist Sharyn Edwards will perform at 8 p.m. March 30 at Kenan Auditorium. Her program will include works of Haydn and Debussy, as well as the powerful, rarely-played Sonata #1 by Brahms.

Edwards has played extensively throughout the Carolinas and Southeastern United States in solo and chamber recitals. She has been a soloist with the Charlotte Symphony, the Charleston Symphony and the Wilmington Symphony Orchestras.

In April, Edwards will perform at New York's Carnegie Recital Hall, which will mark her debut in that city. Her forthcoming CD features performances of Scarlatti, Debussy and Liszt compositions.

Peace Corps Visit

A Peace Corps representative will be on campus Wednesday. The representative will be at an informational table from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the University Union and give a formal presentation at 5 p.m. in Morton Hall, Room 106. Faculty are encouraged to announce this visit during classes.

History Lecture

William Leuchtenburg, Distinguished Kenan Professor of History at UNC Chapel Hill, will present "Bill and Hillary Clinton: In the Shadow of Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt" at 8 p.m. tonight in the new Science Building, Room 134.

Tyndall Named Vice Chancellor for Information Technology Systems

> "While I have great respect for the ways in which technology can enhance learning opportunities, I am convinced that at the heart of quality education is the competent faculty member."
> Robert E. Tyndall

Robert Tyndall, dean of the Watson School of Education, was named vice chancellor for information technology systems when the UNC Board of Governors met Friday in Raleigh.

Tyndall, who began his tenure at UNCW in 1988, has been dean of the Watson School of Education since 1991. In leading this new division, he will report directly to the chancellor, working in close coordination with the provost and other divisions.

Over the next few months, Tyndall will be working with people across campus to bring all information technology systems together into a unified approach to focus the university resources and talents. It will put most information technology functions across campus together under one umbrella, while a few will remain in their current location, tightly coordinated with the new program. Tyndall expects to have a plan to present to the chancellor by early May.

"Our ultimate vision is to position UNCW to utilize the full range and power of information technology to achieve our stated scholarly research and teaching mission," Tyndall said.

He hopes to create an "area of innovation and experimentation in technology" by pooling resources for people who want to develop new technologies and programs that will have a high return for UNCW. "We're not just looking at maintaining wires, but at innovation on a small scale, and that will be fun," Tyndall said. "The ultimate test will be, 'does it provide greater opportunity and enhance the experience for students, faculty and the general public?'"

"While I have great respect for the ways in which technology can enhance learning opportunities, I am convinced that at the heart of quality education is the competent faculty member. Technology can't do anything without the vision and skills of faculty," Tyndall said.

During Tyndall's tenure as dean of the Watson School of Education, the demand for access to teacher preparation has grown significantly. There has been a 45 percent increase in undergraduate enrollment, a 42 percent increase in graduate enrollment and a nearly 400 percent increase in participation in the licensure program, Tyndall said. In addition, the school of education has seen a steady rise in both the grade point average and SAT scores of students entering the teacher education program.

Making the transition to his new position as vice chancellor of technology will not be difficult. Tyndall has been involved in the constantly changing world of technology for many years. He wrote a grant for FiberNET (Networking Educational Technology) which laid the foundation for the Vision North Carolina project linking UNCW and 21 institutions. This project allowed UNCW to become the first university to sign onto the N.C. Information Highway.

The Watson School of Education has been actively developing web resources. It is the only school of education in North Carolina that requires its students take a technology course as part of their basic curriculum and pass technology skills examination.

Tyndall most recently chaired the Chancellor's Steering Committee on Information Technologies which took a comprehensive look at managing the necessary changes in information technology at UNCW. Its recommendations were adopted by the chancellor and the board of trustees and will be used as a blueprint for the next phase of technology development on campus.

His broad perspective may result from the fact that he has been a public school teacher, a principal at every level, an associate superintendent, a superintendent, a professor of education, an associate dean, dean and now vice chancellor.

The Affairs of Race in America:

A Conversation in Black and White

featuring

Shay Banks-Young and Julia Jefferson Westerinen

Descendants of President Thomas Jefferson and Sally Hemings, his Slave

Recent genetic testing strongly suggests that Founding Father, Thomas Jefferson, one of our nations most respected Presidents, bore children with Sally Hemings, one of his slaves. This was shocking news for many historians, who for years had denied the possibility that Jefferson was capable of such "immoral" behavior. It was NOT shocking to Julia Jefferson Westerinen and Shay Banks Young and their families, who have always been confident that their great great grandfathers, Eston and Madison, were, in fact, the sons of Jefferson and Hemings. The proof of this relationship, which seems to have lasted 38 years, leaves us with a great number of questions about race relations in the United States. It also raises certain ironic questions in light of the recent scandals involving the current resident of the White House. Julia Jefferson Westerinen is a former educator turned business woman and her "new" cousin Shay Banks-Young is a poet/playwright who has hosted her own public affairs talk show. Julia is white and Shay is black. Now, they are looking forward to their role as a focal point for what they hope will be an honest new dialogue on these very important issues we face as a society. In this unique presentation, the audience will have the opportunity to listen in on their conversation, hearing these articulate women discuss the many differences and similarities they share. They are anxious to engage the audience in their discussion which makes for a very interactive program. Together and separately, Shay and Julia have appeared on The OPRAH WINFREY SHOW, BET Tonight with Tavis Smiley, Sally Jesse Raphael and have been interviewed by TIME, US NEWS and WORLD REPORT and PEOPLE. Cosmopolitan has recently named Shay as one of their 1999 FUN, FEARLESS FEMALES for her community building efforts. Anne Gordon-Reed, author of "THOMAS JEFFERSON AND SALLY HEMINGS:AN AMERICAN CONTROVERSY said on 'The News Hour with Jim Leher' that "the thing this shows very clearly is that we're not two separate people, black and white; we are a people who share a common culture, a common land, and it turns out a common blood line, and this is something we haven't wanted to deal with openly."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

African-American Scholar Houston Baker to Speak

Houston Baker, distinguished scholar of African-American literature and advocate of blues and rap, will speak on "Booker T. Washington and the Performance of Modernism" at 8 p.m. April 16 in Cameron Hall Auditorium. A reception and book signing will follow the reading.

Baker is the author of nine books, including Modernism and the Harlem Renaissance, Workings of the Spirit, Afro-American Poetics and Black Studies, Rap and the Academy. He has also published three volumes of poetry including Blues Journeys Home and No Matter Where You Travel, You Still Be Black. In addition, he is the editor of the Anthology of Black Literature and the Norton Anthology of African-American Literature.

A proponent of blues and rap music as two uniquely African-American art forms, Baker presents rap as not only a valid expressive cultural form worthy of serious scholarly consideration but also as a potential tool for classroom teachers.

According to Baker, "Young people ... understand rap music. They understand MTV. Teachers can use rap to teach Shakespeare, Homer or Sophocles."

A visiting professor at Duke University, Baker is the director of the Center for the Study of Black Literature and Culture, a professor of English and the Albert M. Greenfield Professor of Human Relations at the University of Pennsylvania.

This free lecture is sponsored by the Buckner Lecture Series and the Association for Campus Entertainment. The Katherine K. Buckner Distinguished Lecture Series was established by Charles F. Green III to bring distinguished scholars and writers to UNCW. The Buckner Series is named in honor of his friend, Katherine K. Buckner.

For more information, contact the Department of English at ext. 3320.

UNCW Hosting City/County Consolidation Forum

UNCW will host a one-day public forum exploring city/county consolidation at 9 a.m. April 1 in the Warwick Center Ballroom.

Panelists include Dan Durning from the Vinson Institute of Government, University of Georgia; Warren Jake Wicker, professor emeritus of public law and government, UNC Chapel Hill; and William H. Carstarphen, former city manager of Greensboro. The panel moderator will be Joseph Augustine, local businessman and former chamber of commerce executive.

Durning was involved with the review of consolidation efforts in Georgia concentrating on the financing issues related to consolidation. Wicker, who advised local governments throughout North Carolina regarding consolidation, provided Wilmington and New Hanover County assistance during the last two consolidation attempts. Carstarphen served as a consultant to the mayor and elected board in the consolidation of the city of Augusta and Richmond County, Georgia.

UNCW officials were asked by citizens representing various New Hanover County neighborhoods to organize this forum.

Art and Theatre Hosts Dance Performance

Modern dancer Kimberly Bartosik will present "AsoOO, First Edition (A Space of One's Own)," a series of dance solos based upon the lives of women writers at 8 p.m. April 11 in Kenan Auditorium. Students from the dance techniques class taught by Nancy Carson will perform the modern dances choreographed by Bartosik, a former Wilmington resident and graduate of the North Carolina School of the Arts.

The solos were inspired by the creative lives of Virginia Woolf and writers Jane Austen, George Eliot and Charlotte Bronte, who are referenced in Woolf's A Room of One's Own.

"The solos address the adversity that 18th and 19th century women writers faced in their literary and social worlds and which continues today," said Bartosik.

A member of the Wally Cordona Quartet which performs in the United States and Europe, Bartosik received the Bessie Award for outstanding dancers in New York City in 1997. She was with the Merce Cunningham Dance Company for nine years.

This free performance, in celebration of Women's History Month, is sponsored by the Department of Art and Theatre. For more information, call ext. 3440.

Award-winning Play Coming to UNCW

The Obie award-winning one-man play A Huey P. Newton Story based on the life of Huey P. Newton, co-founder of the Black Panther Party, will be performed at 8 p.m. April 24 in Kenan Auditorium.

Smith

Performer and playwright Roger Guenveur Smith assembled the play largely from the late Newton's own writings and interviews. Smith's monologue is complemented by a mix of archival and original music composed by Marc Anthony Thompson. The play follows Newton's life starting from the creation of the Black Panther Party for Self-defense until his exile and death.

The play's off-Broadway performance earned Obie Awards for Smith and Thompson, along with two Drama Desk nominations. Smith also received the Helen Hayes Award and three NAACP awards, including "Production of the Year." Smith appeared in the films Eve's Bayou, Get on the Bus and Do the Right Thing.

This event is sponsored by Sen. Luther H. Jordon, Jr. and the Upperman African-American Cultural Center. Tickets are $10 in advance, $12 at the doors. Faculty and staff can purchase tickets for $5. For more information, contact Linda Upperman Smith, acting director of minority affairs, at ext. 3832.

The Commons Concert Series
Thursdays
11:30 AM - 1:00 PM

April 8 - Michael Gulezian - Four-time UNCW performer

Michael Gulezian is one of the finest solo acoustic instrumental guitarists of our time. His music is so unique and original that it simply defies categorization.

April 15 - MoJo Collins - Most prolific 90's local recording artist

MoJo Collins' guitar playing and vocal style stem directly from the Southern-fried school of hard rockin' blues, but he minors in the making of interesting blends of surf and funk styles.

April 22 - Rockwell Church - Earth Day

A perfect teaming of virtuoso and front man, Rockwell Church is one of the most promising voices on the acoustic folk/rock scene. The duo has released two CDs... "Inches From the Ground" and "Through the Distinguished". Producers John Alagia and Doug Derryberry (Dave Matthews Band) were called on for both projects.

April 29 - Faculty-Staff Jam - Third Annual

The faculty-staff jam has become a campus favorite and a great way to end the year. Faculty and staff are invited to share their talents with a support band that features faculty/ staff from the Communications Department, Cameron School of Business, and the Division of Student Affairs.

University of North Carolina at Wilmington

CAMPUS COMMUNIQUE

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement Vol. XXVIII, No. 36 April 8, 1999 Phillip Brown, editor

Nobel Peace Prize-Winner Jose Ramos-Horta to Speak at UNCW

José Ramos-Horta, the 1996 recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize, will lecture on "Peacemaking: The Power of Non-Violence" at 7 p.m. Monday in Kenan Auditorium.

Ramos-Horta

Ramos-Horta has spent more than 20 years denouncing the illegal invasion and annexation of East Timor by Indonesia. In 1996, Ramos-Horta and fellow East Timoresean Bishop Carlos Filipe Ximenes Belo shared the Nobel Peace Prize. The Nobel Committee recognized "their sustained efforts to hinder the oppression of a small people."

Born on Dec. 26, 1949, in Dili, East Timor, Ramos-Horta was a journalist in East Timor from 1969-74. He was also public affairs and media director at the Embassy of Mozambique in Washington, D.C., from 1987-88. East Timor, a former Portuguese colony, is located 650 km northwest of Darwin, Australia. On Dec. 7, 1975, after nine days of independence, East Timor was invaded and occupied by Indonesia. It is believed that more than 200,000 East Timorese deaths occurred between 1976 and 1981.

Chosen by pro-independence parties to represent East Timor abroad, Ramos-Horta addressed the United Nations Security Council in December 1975 urging them to take action in the face of the Indonesian military onslaught. Since 1975, he has defended the right of East Timorese people to self-determination and has presented the case of East Timor before the Fourth Committee of the UN General Assembly, the UN Special Committee on Decolonization, the UN Commission on Human Rights, the Council on Foreign Relations and the European Parliament.

Ramos-Horta studied public international law at the Hague Academy of International Law and at Antioch University where he completed his master's degree in peace studies in 1984. He trained in human rights law at the International Institute of Human Rights in Strasbourg, France, and attended post-graduate courses in American foreign policy at Columbia University in New York. He is a senior associate member of St. Anthony's College, Oxford, England.

This free lecture is sponsored by the Office of the Chancellor, the Division for Student Affairs, University Union and the Activities and Leadership Center. For more information, call ext. 3877.

Scholar on African-American Health Issues to Lecture April 15

Lee Green, a scholar in the area of African-Americans and their resistance to health promotion efforts, will speak at the second annual Healthy People Lecture Series at 7:30 p.m. April 15 in the Cameron Hall Auditorium.

Green was one of the first researchers to connect the Tuskegee syphilis study to the unwillingness of African-Americans to consider health advise from the U.S. government. A special area of interest for Green is cancer indicators among African-Americans. He has written on such topics as smoking initiation among African-American adolescents, a comparison of dietary factors contributing to colo-rectal cancer among blacks and whites and dietary intake differences among black and white female smokers.

The Healthy People Lecture series hosts nationally recognized leaders in health and wellness annually each spring and fall. Previous speakers include David Hunnicutt, president of the Wellness Councils of America; Mark Kittleson, owner of the world's largest health education director; and Glen Gilbert, one the the country's leaders in school health education. This free lecture is sponsored by the Office of the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

THE THREE R'S OF JOB INTERVIEWING– RESEARCH, REHEARSE & RELAX

Okay, you're revving up for the big interview. What important details do you need to know? First of all, you need to understand what the interview is all about.

Your winning resume, cover letter and good use of your networking contacts have won you entree into the potential employer's office. The interviewer will already have reviewed your resume, which basically provides the hard facts of your education, employment history and skills. The interview is a subtler, more subjective aspect of the job-hunting process.

Frequently, an interviewer (sometimes without even realizing it) will form an opinion of you based on the nuances of your interaction. You're trying to make a good impression here. You need to portray sincerely, politely and enthusiastically that you are knowledgeable about the organization and have something to offer it. Your resume may well have shown examples of your skills as a team player, but now you need to convince them that you fit their team. In order to make the best impression you can, you need to be prepared, know what you can expect, and know how to handle it if things don't go quite as you had planned.

• RESEARCH

Know how to keep yourself calm. The best way to do this is to be prepared!

Research the organization. Have you done any informational interviews about this industry? Know why you want the job. Identify your wants and your needs—and know the difference! Be able to express, specifically, the marketable skills you have to offer the organization.

• REHEARSE

Be prepared for the standard interview questions and know your answers to them—try taking the Virtual Interview on the web. This Virtual Interview contains actual interview questions ranging from puff ball to killer. This interactive site gives you the opportunity to test your answers in a safe environment so that when the real thing comes along you can engage in a meaningful exchange rather than grope for a clumsy comeback.

The Virtual Interview <http://www.aboutwork.com/ace/virtual.html>

General questions can range from "Why do you want to work for us?" and "What about the job offered do you find the most attractive? Least attractive?" to the ever popular "Tell me about you!" Visit this web site to see a list of potential interview questions. <http://www.aboutwork.com/ace/questions/index.html>

Prepare questions you wish to ask the interviewer—only ask questions you can't find answers to yourself.

• RELAX

No matter how well qualified you are for a job or how articulate you are about your strengths and experience, there is nothing that can replace preparation. Once you have researched the organization and practiced asking and answering questions, the next step is to relax and remind yourself that:

- There is no question you cannot answer,
- You are well suited to the position, and
- You would be an asset to the organization.

Visualize yourself sitting in the interview feeling serene and confident. Get a good night's sleep before the interview, arrive a few minutes early, take a few deep breaths and seize the day.

JOB INTERVIEW PLANNER

- Identify your basic interview wardrobe: select one or two outfits or suits that are considered fairly conservative for your field. Polish your business shoes.
- Create a folder to bring with you on interviews. It should contain: a few extra resumes in a plastic sleeve, some reminders for yourself about your skills and goals, and a pen and paper to make notes before and after the interview.
- Bring to the interview: your interview folder, the names of the people you are meeting and the address with directions. You may also want: a comb, tissues, breath mints.
- Know where you're going in advance. Leave yourself plenty of time to get there. You want to arrive a little bit early, not just on time and never late.
- Be polite to everyone you meet there. They all count.
- Be personable as well as professional.
- Take time to formulate your answers before you speak. You may ask for clarification before answering a question.
- Answer all questions honestly, but in the best, most positive light.
- Do not bad mouth old employers.
- Follow up with thank you letters immediately. Be sure to know how to spell all names and know correct titles.
- Make sure you can be reached, whether by phone, fax or email.

Jose Ramos-Horta

"Peacemaking:
The Power of Non-Violence"

Monday, April 12, 1999
7 p.m. • Kenan Auditorium
Free Admission

In December 1996, Jose Ramos-Horta shared the Nobel Peace Prize with his fellow East Timoresean, Bishop Carlos Filipe Ximenes Belo. His efforts on behalf of his own country and the rights of others continued as he served as a negotiator for the release of hostages in Columbia. His speech has been described as "inspiring and unique."

Campus Leaders Make History

Nominated students will become a part of history when their images are captured for future generations of UNCW student leaders. The photo will take place on April 22 at 4 p.m. on the Campus Commons. Chosen students will also receive a special commemorative T-shirt and refreshments.

Walk of Fame Inductee

The Celebrate Wilmington! Steering Committee will announce its next inductee into the Walk of Fame at 10 a.m. April 14 at Cape Fear Museum. Induction ceremonies are scheduled for 2 p.m. May 8 at the Walk of Fame Plaza at the Cotton Exchange.

Celebrate Wilmington! is a joint partnership between the Arts Council of the Lower Cape Fear and UNCW to celebrate the arts and promote Wilmington's Walk of Fame, which recognizes the contributions of citizens who have lived, worked and/or enriched the Cape Fear region. The Walk of Fame honors those who have attained national recognition in the arts, business, education, literature, broadcasting/television/journalism, sports, science, medicine, politics/government and the military.

Previous inductees include professional football player Roman Gabriel, visual artist Minnie Evans, preservationist Hugh Morton and architect Henry Bacon.

For more information, contact Annette Coneglio Anderson, public service and extended education, at ext. 3547.

Rotary Scholarships Available for Study Abroad

Applications for 2000-2001 Rotary Foundation Ambassadorial Scholarships are available from the Rotary Club of Wilmington. The scholarships, awarded worldwide, are designed to further international understanding and goodwill and provide for study abroad in one of 150 countries where Rotary Clubs are located. Academic-Year Ambassadorial Scholarships provide up to $23,000 for one academic year abroad. Cultural Ambassadorial Scholarships provide up to $11,000 for three months and $17,000 for six months of intensive language study in another country. For an application, contact Mimi Cunningham, university relations, at ext. 3171.

UNCW Theatre to Perform Black Comedy

The Department of Art and Theatre will present Black Comedy at 8 p.m. April 21-24 and 3 p.m. April 25 in Kenan Hall, SRO Theatre.

Directed by Donald Hawley, Black Comedy is about young artist Brindsley Miller and Carol, his very pretty, spoiled and silly fiance. Carol convinces Miller to decorate his poor artist apartment by "borrowing" a few of his neighbor's best antiques to impress her father Colonel Melkett and the important art collector who are visiting to view his work. As the guests arrive, the lights go out and the supposed-to-be-out-of-town antique dealer and neighbor Harold arrives. As Miller attempts to keep the lights out, remove the borrowed antiques and keep up appearances, his forgot-to-tell-her-it-was-over old flame Clea shows up and turns up the heat on a romantic complication to the chaos in the dark.

Admission is $8 for the general public, $4 for faculty and staff. For tickets call the Kenan Auditorium box office at ext. 3500.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

Susan F. Crampton, foreign languages and literatures, presented the paper "Rewriting Recovery: Insanity in Marceline Desbordes-Valmore's Les Pleurs" in the French literature session of the 23rd annual Philological Association of the Carolinas conference held at UNCW. The French session was chaired by P.J. Lapaire, foreign languages and literatures. This paper examines how Desbordes-Valmore, a 19th century French romantic poet, takes full advantage of the curative aspects of poetic expression as she writes her own recovery from melancholia.

Brooks Dodson, English, had his review of Noah Webster: The Life and Times of an American Patriot by Harlow G. Unger published in CHOICE.

Robert Toplin, history, provided commentary on the film Bonnie and Clyde for the History Channel. He also presented two lectures at universities in Arkansas which raised $1,800 for the Organization of American Historians.

Jeff Hill, Bob Buerger, Jim Herstine, HPER, and Rudi Kiefer, earth sciences, presented their paper "Digital Mentoring in Virtual Environments: A Case Study in Coastal Science Education" at the International Conference on Mathematics/Science Education and Technology in San Antonio.

Ed Graham, economics and finance, presented "Why All the Short Interest?" at the annual sessions of the Southern Finance Association in Marco Island, Fla. At the annual meeting of the Academy of Economics and Finance in Little Rock, Graham served as a session chair, discussant and presenter with his theoretical paper "The Capital Structure of a Stockholder-Owned Insurance Company." Another of his studies, "The Varying Risk Market Model: A Re-examination Based on Heteroskedastic Conditions and Other Statistical Robustness Tests," is in the current issue of The Quarterly Journal of Business and Economics.

Robert Kieber and Joan Willey, chemistry, presented the talk "Cycling of Dissolved Organic Carbon and Inorganic Nitrogen Compounds in Atmospheric and Surface Waters" at the marine science seminar series at the University of Otago in Dunedin, New Zealand.

Terry Theodore, art and theatre, will conduct research on the impact of Griffith's The Birth of a Nation to be published by Marshall Cavendish.

Ned H. Martin, chemistry, presented the poster "An Improved Model for Predicting NMR Shielding by Alkenes Based on Ab Initio GIAO Calculations" at the 217th national meeting of the American Chemical Society Anaheim, Calif. The poster was co-authored by former students Noah W. Allen III, Sal T. Ingrassia, Everett K. Minga and Justin D. Brown. Martin was co-author with A. A. Rodriguez and Mervat H. Issa of East Carolina University on another poster "Investigation into the Rotational Dynamics of C60 in Various Organic Solvents" presented at the same meeting.

Tim Beach-Verhey, philosophy and religion, received the Best Student Essay Award at the annual meeting of the southeastern region of the American Academy of Religion for his paper "Calvin on Natural Law, Sin and Politics: A Critique of Michael Walzer's Revolution of the Saints." It was presented as part of a panel discussion on religion and politics in the modern world.

Geology Professors Picked for Elite Science Mission in Pacific Ocean

Lew Abrams and Arthur Spivack, earth sciences, will spend two months as shipboard scientists aboard the vessel JOIDES Resolution as part of the Ocean Drilling Program (ODP), which conducts basic research on the history of ocean basins and the crust beneath the ocean floor.

As members of an elite international team of 25 scientists, Abrams and Spivack will study earth samples from drilling sites west of the Mariana Trench, approximately 450 miles west of Guam, and the Izu-Bonin Trench 308 miles southwest of Tokyo, Japan. They will study the relationship between the destruction or recycling of the sea floor and construction of continental crust. Their research will help scientists understand how continents were formed and how the Earth evolved.

"Geologists are Earth's historians; sediments on the ocean floor contain a more continuous record of earth's climate and evolutionary history over the past 180 million years than any land core samples," said Abrams.

"Scientists have been studying deep ocean basins by drilling into the sea floor over the last 30 years, and in that time the ODP has drilled more than 1,000 sites which is less than the total number of drill sites in the state of Texas. Considering that 70 percent of the earth's surface is covered with water, it is clear that scientists are only just beginning to extract the secrets held in the rocks and sediment of the deep sea."

Abrams, who helped ODP select this mission's drilling sites, said the location west of the Mariana Trench was chosen because it is considered the world's oldest oceanic crust. Abrams co-wrote the proposal for the drilling location and compiled and presented site survey data to two different ODP committees, the Site Survey Panel and the Pollution Prevention and Safety Panel. He had to verify the drilling target location, document any potential safety or pollution hazards and calculate the necessary drilling time within the allotted 60-day mission period. Abrams said he has worked more than four years on the site survey for this particular mission.

The scientists leave this month for Hong Kong to board the research vessel JOIDES Resolution and will return in mid-June.

Only top scientists in their field from the 21 member countries are selected by ODP for each mission aboard the JOIDES Resolution drillship. This will be Spivack's first voyage as part of the ODP, while Abrams has participated on two previous ODP expeditions. On a previous mission, Abrams helped discover evidence of what caused the mass extinction of the dinosaurs - a giant meteor impact in the Yucatan Peninsula.

The vessel chartered by ODP, the 470-foot JOIDES Resolution, can drill in

Furst Receives BOG Teaching Award

Donald Furst, professor of art, received the UNC Board of Governors Award for Excellence in Teaching Thursday during a special convocation at UNC Greensboro.

Furst was one of 16 faculty members, one from each UNC system institution, to receive the annual award which includes $7,500 and a bronze medallion.

Recipients must be tenured faculty who have taught for at least seven years at their current institution while maintaining a normal teaching load.

Furst

UNCW has honored Furst previously with three teaching awards: the Distinguished Professorship from 1996-98, the Board of Trustees Teaching Excellence Award in 1996 and the College of Arts and Sciences Excellence in Teaching in 1992.

As an artist Furst has displayed his work worldwide in numerous group exhibitions. He has also exhibited works in one-man shows in Texas, Wisconsin, Alabama, California, Virginia and other states.

As a teacher, Furst said he believes the best learning is when he can show his students how to teach themselves. Wanting students to learn confidently and aggressively forge their own discoveries, Furst said he "emphasizes disciplined craftsmanship, problem-solving and acquisition of specific skills. This foundation will pay off later as students gradually develop the ability to tap their distinctive responses to the world."

Postal News

Buttino Receives Screenplay Award

Lou Buttino, communication studies, won the Worldfest Houston International Film Festival's Bronze Prize for Best Screenplay/Biography for Carmen Basilio! Basilio!

Buttino's screenplay is the true story of boxing welterweight and middleweight champion Carmen Basilio. Buttino, who as a child was Basilio's neighbor, witnessed the boxer "put honor ahead of the drive for money or glory."

The Worldfest Houston International Film Festival honors filmmakers worldwide in categories such as best screenplay, documentary and feature film. Filmmakers honored over the festival's 30-plus year history include George Lucas and Oliver Stone.

Career Services to Honor Internship Organizations

The Office of Career Services will hold a reception from 3 to 4:30 p.m. today in the University Union Living Room to recognize the more than 200 businesses, nonprofit organizations and educational institutions that hosted a UNCW student intern this year.

1898 Symposium Tapes on Sale

The bookstore is selling videotapes of the symposium, "The 1898 Wilmington Racial Violence and Its Legacy," held last fall. The five-tape series can be purchased individually for $15 per tape. FACULTY PROFILE:
Roy Harkin Teaches the Fine Art of Listening

by Linda Grattafiori

Above Roy Harkin's writing desk hangs a portrait of Erasmus, the Dutch scholar who said, "That which is forced cannot be sincere (The Praise of Follie, c. 1511)."

"In our humanities seminar, Roy creates an atmosphere in which each student is so deeply respected that she or he is free to grow - which means thinking and questioning before speaking," said co-instructor Jim McGowan. "He helps these (graduate administration) students explore the very foundations of their own commitment to truth in education. Roy is a marvelous listener in this class. Students sense they are free to be open. No one in there is faking it. When issues are forced, there is no truthful search for knowledge."

One of five 1998 recipients of the Chancellor's Teaching Excellence Awards, Harkin, a professor in the Watson School of Education, started teaching in 1959 at a junior high school in Muncie, Ind.

"We had no services for special students at that time," he said. "Students were grouped according to ability in 16 different sections. I had a deaf student named Herbie in my eight to 14 class." Harkin said he struggled to communicate with Herbie, a situation that haunted him even last year. He reflected upon the situation in the following poem:

I say a word twice and pause and he bends over lined paper and frowning scrawls
a thick black string of anxious letters.
I speak the last and say them all again and he hands in twenty-four numbered groups of cold war code and I don't know and never will what grade to give.

Forty years later, Harkin makes it clear that he does not have all the answers to the ills of public education. He does not preach and believes that a person usually learns more by listening than speaking if he is "respectful of what he hears.

"I've taught in small town-, big city-, suburban- and inner city schools and have experienced little problem with student behavior," he said. "I think discipline problems depend upon the individual teacher's perception."

Harkin under the watchful eye of Dutch scholar Erasmus.

Harkin does not believe that the subject matter taught need be considered "fun" by students to require their attention.

"You don't have any business expecting students to sit still unless they can see the value to be gained," he said. "But some things that are worth doing are not fun and their inherent value is not immediately apparent. Consider the study of Emerson. Sometimes the value to be obtained requires thought and effort. I don't think we should throw out everything a 12-year-old or college sophomore says isn't fun."

In the sections Harkin teaches of EDN 301 Instructional Design and Evaluation, he feels strongly committed to the teaching principles employed.

"It is the obligation of the teacher to be specific, precise, to be clear about what's expected, and to set favorable conditions for students to learn these things," he said. "I'm in a very happy position for a teacher because all of the students who come to me are there by choice. They're serious about finding out how people learn. I'm convinced that what we're doing is meaningful, and the students can see that."

One of the eight quotes from Harkin's philosophy of beliefs reads: "A teacher distills what is to be learned to its essential nature, clearing away the verbal debris often loaded on a useful idea to permit the idea to be seen. If there is value in the verbal load, the teacher knows it is best and most easily obtained after the idea is mastered."

All the sections of EDN 301 have a common syllabus in hopes that students who have different instructors will have similar skills. Harkin continues to help revise and evaluate the undergraduate program.

Recruited from UNC Chapel Hill in 1976 to chair the education department and to develop graduate programs. He was dean of the Watson School of Education from 1979-90. In 1982, the School of Education became the first school on campus to achieve national accreditation in part, due to the development of master's programs in educational administration, reading, elementary, secondary and special education.

In 1990, Harkin passed the dean's hat to Bob Tyndall to teach full time.

"The students I teach are a pleasure to work with," Harkin said. "They are capable and committed, and their responses are gratifying. I like to see people able to do something they weren't able to do before they started my course."

FACULTY PROFILE/ TAMMY HUNT:

Teaching Students the Importance of Ethical Business Decisions

by Linda Grattafiori

Hunt

Tammy G. Hunt likes studying business concepts, but likes studying people more. Thus, for her and husband/ colleague James Hunt, concentrating on the management and marketing aspects of business makes sense.

"I found as a FSU graduate teaching assistant that I loved teaching," Hunt said. "But I loved business research, too. My studies have focused on the ethics of managers, both individually and in teams. Does being in a top management team make you less ethical or more ethical in making a decision at the firm?"

Hunt, an associate professor in the Cameron School of Business and one of five recipients of the Chancellor's Teaching Excellence Awards, helped develop the ethics and social responsibility module for the school's MBA program.

"This module helps students look at the corporate environment and determine what large firms might do to improve their social image," Hunt said. "In the March issue of Fortune magazine, America's most admired companies, including General Electric, Wal-Mart and Disney, all do well in financial performance and returns to their investors, but also believe that business is about making complex decisions that involve a lot of people. So, they're big on employee relations, customer service and community action. For example, in Wilmington, General Electric and Corning support the symphony; McDonalds helps underprivileged children. I believe people are investing in companies that are corporate citizens and want to make the world a better place."

Some companies write a check or release employees to do volunteer work in the community. Volunteers have talked about entrepreneurship concepts to high school students who might not otherwise get that exposure.

One of Hunt's studies "Ethics and Performance: A Simulation Analysis of Team Decision Making" was published in the Journal of Business Ethics, February 1997.

"I think business in the 1990s are becoming more altruistic and aware that you don't just make a business decision to make an economic return to your employees," Hunt said. "Every decision impacts so many different people, foreign as well as domestic constituents. That's why I push in my classes the social aspect of decisions businesses make."

Hunt, who served as chair of the Cameron School of Business Management and Marketing Department from 1994-97, is teaching a reduced schedule while she serves as program chair for the Southern Management Association's conference to be held Oct. 27-30 in Atlanta, Ga. She is also overseeing the search committee for the new management and marketing chair.

This semester, Hunt is teaching Business Policy, a required case course for all business seniors. Students analyze financial statements, marketing information systems, employee relations, management structure and ownership. Based upon this information, the students make recommendations about how a company can maintain or increase its success.

"This course allows students to present on their feet and integrate all their business courses," Hunt said. "They work in teams on long-term strategic actions. It's fascinating to see the case analyses the students produce. It's also nice to see how students' critical analytical skills have developed during their years at UNCW. They've learned so much about the implications that one decision can have on financial performance."

Hunt encourages students to think about their own strategic future. They need to understand their strengths and weaknesses to determine how their career might develop, she said.

In addition to providing students classroom support, the Hunts come to sporting events, art exhibits and festivals on campus.

"Our kids, Allyson and Stephen, want to be Seahawks when they grow up," said Hunt.

"I spend a lot of time mentoring students," Hunt said. "I have a stack of resumes to go through this weekend. Part of our job is to help students work with career services and get those first interviews. It's fun to see them find their niche and blossom into young managers."

In return, students are teaching faculty about sources of information they find on the World Wide Web.

"Technology helps us present better visually in class," Hunt said. "But technology can't replace the student's need to critically analyze decisions and defend them. Managers need to take a lot of data, make ethical choices and defend those to different groups to insure high standards for American business."

CAMPUS COMMUNIQUE

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement Vol. XXVIII, No. 38 April 22, 1999 Phillip Brown, editor

Ted Kennedy, Jr. to Deliver Commencement Address May 15

Ted Kennedy, Jr. will deliver the commencement address at 10 a.m. May 15 in Trask Coliseum. This year's graduation will feature an estimated 1,053 bachelor's degree candidates and 167 master's degree candidates. Kennedy's selection as speaker was recommended by the Student Government Association.

Kennedy, who lost a leg to bone cancer at age 12, has devoted much of his professional and personal energy to working as an advocate for people with disabilities. A graduate of Wesleyan University, Kennedy received his master's degree from Yale University's School of Forestry and Environmental Studies in 1991. Since 1992, he has been on the research faculty of the Yale University School of Medicine and is director of the New Haven Lead Safe Home and Community Health Project, a comprehensive community-based initiative addressing lead poisoning, one of the leading known causes of mental retardation.

Kennedy has served as executive director of Facing the Challenge, a nonprofit advocacy and public policy office on disability-related issues, and as a teaching fellow on disability policy at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government. In addition, he worked for the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission as marketing director of the Massachusetts Corporate Partnership Program. On the national level, Kennedy served on the executive committee of the 1995 Special Olympics World Summer Games.

Most recently, he was appointed by Connecticut Gov. John Rowland to the state board of the Office of Protection and Advocacy for Persons with Disabilities.

A 1997 graduate of the University of Connecticut School of Law, Kennedy now practices in the areas of health and disability law at a New Haven, Conn., law firm.

UNCW-TV will broadcast live coverage of the May 15 commencement on The Learning Network seen locally on Time Warner Cable Channel 5.

Cox to Chair Creative Writing Department

Poet Mark Cox, currently director of creative writing at Oklahoma University, was selected to chair the Creative Writing Department, effective July 1.

"Mark is taking over our creative writing department at a point where it can take its place among nationally distinguished programs," said Jo Ann Seiple, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. "He has impressive experience in building a sense of community among writing students and faculty, in opening up the program to people outside the university community and in dealing with other writing programs nationwide."

Cox holds a bachelor's degree in English composition and his Master of Fine Arts degree in creative writing. He has taught creative writing classes, contemporary literature and poetry and creative writing workshops for master's and doctoral students. He is the author of two books of poetry, Thirty-Seven Years from the Stone and Smoulder. His work has appeared in the American Poetry Review, Chicago Review, Harvard Review and Pushcart Prize XVIII, a text used on campus.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Brunson House Dedicated

Ceremonies dedicating the Brunson House, 1700 Princess Street, were held April 15. The property, purchased from Carl and Veronica McLaurin Brown '72, was named in honor of her grandparents, Lawrence "Buck" and Hattie Brunson, in recognition of their more than 27 years of combined service to UNCW as members of the housekeeping staff.

More than 50 family members and current and former university employees attended the dedication where Veronica Brown and Ralph Parker, retired director of the Office of Minority Affairs, shared memories of the Brunsons.

The Brunson House, which is adjacent to property owned by the university near the Kenan House and the Wise Alumni House, is the first university property to be named in honor of staff employees. It is used as a guest house for visiting professors.

Golf Tournament

The fourth annual Earl Allen Memorial Golf Tournament will be held at 1:30 p.m. May 6 at the Olde Point Golf Course in Hampstead. The cost is $65 per player if registered by April 29, $75 afterward. For more information, contact MaLou Stokes at ext. 3587.

Changing World of Work

Faculty interested in learning more about the changing world of work should sign up for a summer program sponsored by the New Hanover/Pender JobReady Partnership, Cape Fear Partners for Career Success. The five-day program, scheduled for June 21-25, will provide the opportunity to spend a week in a business or industry related to a faculty member's teaching area. In addition, faculty will learn ways to integrate work experience in the classroom, gain knowledge of the necessary work skills and technology utilized on the job and provide employers with relevant classroom information. There is a $250 stipend for participants. Interested faculty should contact Karen Thompson, career services, University Union, Room 106, for an application.

Symposium Tapes on Sale

The bookstore is selling videotapes of the symposium, "The 1898 Wilmington Racial Violence and Its Legacy," held last fall. The entire series consists of five tapes, which can be purchased individually. Each tape is $15. Tapes are also available for viewing at Randall Library and the Upperman African-American Cultural Center.

Interest Meeting

The UNCW Mixed Bowling League will hold an interest meeting at 6 p.m. May 3 at Ten Pin Alley in the Marketplace Mall to plan its fall league which is expected to begin in late August. The league is open to all UNCW employees, their spouses and adult family members. For more information, contact Linda Ferrell at ext 3540 or Phillip Brown at ext. 7223.

Art Exhibit

Randall Library will host the exhibit "Inquiry & Expression" through May 20. This display includes original works by UNCW students, Laurel Keesee and Shaun Richards who are scholarship recipients sponsored by the Wilmington Art Association. A "Meet the Artists" reception will be held from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Monday in the library. For more information, call ext. 3270.

UNCW Theatre Production

The Department of Art and Theatre will present Black Comedy at 8 p.m. through Saturday and 3 p.m. Sunday in Kenan Hall, SRO Theatre. Admission is $8 for the general public, $4 for faculty and staff. For tickets call the Kenan Auditorium box office at ext. 3500.

FOCUS ON FACULTY AND STAFF

Submissions for this section are published in order received. Due to the volume of submissions, there can be a two- to three-week delay in publication. Your patience is appreciated.

David Lindquist, biological sciences and CMSR, had his paper "A Comparison of Two Light-trap Designs for Sampling Larval and Presettlement Juvenile Fish Above a Reef in Onslow Bay, North Carolina" published in the current issue of the international journal Bulletin of Marine Science. The paper is co-authored with former graduate student Frank Hernandez, and the research was sponsored by an award from the Charles L. Cahill Faculty Research and Development Fund.

Suzanne "Sam" Shover, CROSSROADS, presented the workshop "Challenging Decisions: Mandatory Educational Sessions for University Students Sanctioned for Alcohol and Drug-Related Violations" at the American College Personnel Association annual conference in Atlanta. In addition, Shover was elected to the association's Commission XVIII Directorate for Alcohol and Other Drug Issues.

Eleanor Covan, sociology and gerontology coordinator, collaborated with faculty from around the country to lead the discussion "The Need for Internal Consistency in Defining the Verb to Age: Distinguishing a Framework that Contributes to the Dichotomy from a Framework that Contributes to the Solution" at the 25th annual meeting of the Association for Gerontology in Higher Education in St. Louis.

Lindsay Pentolfe Aegerter, English, chaired the panel "Everyday Use: Ways of Remembering" and delivered the paper "Memory in Toni Morrison's Beloved" at the Southern American Studies Association biennial conference in Wilmington.

Susan Bullers, sciology and anthropology, had the paper "Selection Effects in the Relationship Between Women's Work/Family Status and Perceived Control" published in Family Relations.

Paul Shotsberger, mathematics and statistics, and Ann Crawford, education, had their article "On the Elusive Nature of Measuring Teacher Change: An Examination of the Stages of Concern Questionnaire" published in the most recent edition of Evaluation and Research in Education. A World Wide Web version of the article can be viewed at http://www.uncwil.edu/people/shotsbergerp/socq_art.html.

Maurice Martinez, specialty studies, presented the paper "African-American Males: Endangered People?" at the annual conference of the National Association for Ethnic Studies. The paper documents the disbursement of taxpayer dollars from higher education into the criminal justice system and prisons and the increase in arrests of black males.

Purchasing Reminders

UNCW is not obligated to support purchases billed directly to the university without a purchase order number. These "confirming" orders are contradictory to university policy unless a purchasing officer has either telephoned an order or issued a PO number to the department for a telephone order. The only exception is for travel commodities.

Duplicating an order by telephone and sending a PO causes double shipments. A check request is the correct method of payment for offices and departments that have received goods and an invoice without issuing a purchase order. A written explanation stating why the purchasing procedure was not originally followed is required along with approval from purchasing services in order for accounting to process the check request.

When creating electronic requisitions for equipment charged to a 5XXX object code, the account must be entered on the line item. Direct questions to Diana or Phyllis.

When creating electronic requisitions, include a name and phone number appropriate for that specific order in the "contact" field on screen 250. Also, in the field "needed by," list the date the merchandise or service is required, not the creation date of the purchase order. Note that this field relates to the "expected delivery date" on the purchase order.

Insurance is a non-reimbursable expense for car rentals within the United States. However, it is appropriate for rentals outside the country since the state's insurance does not cover claims outside the United States. Note this distinction for any future international travel needs.

Shared Leave

Shared leave donations are needed for Betty Robinson and Norval Smith, physical plant. Send donated vacation leave to Willina in human resources.

Regalia Rental

Faculty who need to rent regalia for commencement May 15 should contact Jessiebeth Geddie at ext. 3054.

This Week on UNCW-TV

Program highlights on UNCW-TV this week include the lecture "Starting at the Finish Line" by entrepreneur David Glickman at 7 p.m. Monday and a presentation by National Living Treasure recipient Jerry Fisk at noon Wednesday.

For a complete schedule of this week's UNCW-TV programming, visit the World Wide Web address http://www.uncwil.edu/uniadv/relations/uncwtv.html.

Volunteers Needed for Walking Tours

Volunteers are needed to assist with walking tours used to welcome new employees to campus. The tours were implemented five years ago to enhance benefits enrollment sessions and are conducted from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. on the second Thursday of each month. Participants receive a complimentary lunch at the Hawk's Nest. Anyone interested in volunteering should contact Elizabeth at ext. 3713.

Frank Capra, Jr. Named to Walk of Fame

Capra

Frank Capra, Jr., a second-generation professional filmmaker, will be the fifth inductee on the Celebrate Wilmington! Walk of Fame at 2 p.m. May 8 at the Walk of Fame plaza behind the Cotton Exchange. He joins professional football player Roman Gabriel, visual artist Minnie Evans, preservationist Hugh Morton and architect Henry Bacon.

Capra, president and CEO of EUE Screen Gems Studios Ltd., lives in Wilmington and is one of the film industry's most well-known figures.

A second-generation filmmaker, Capra is the son of the late Lucille Rayburn Warner Capra and world-renowned director, Frank Capra, Sr., who is best known as director of It's a Wonderful Life. He is the eldest of three children that include his brother Tom and a sister Lucille.

Capra did not start out to be a filmmaker. It wasn't until after he studied at the California Institute of Technology and later graduated from Pomona College with a degree in geology that he chose moviemaking as a career. Choosing the best of both worlds, he decided to combine his interest in film with his scientific background to make films documenting government research programs conducted by Hughes Tool Company (the parent company of Hughes Aircraft).

During his time with Hughes Tool Company, Capra made films on the construction of torpedoes and helicopters contracted by U.S. military branches. With the Vietnam draft imminent, Capra enlisted in the army's film unit, the United States Army Signal Corps, and for the next three years taught combat motion picture photography to soldiers stationed in New Jersey. He also taught techniques of combat motion picture photography from land and air while serving in Vietnam.

After his discharge from the Army, Capra worked on a number of shows including Dennis the Menace, Hazel, Gunsmoke, The Rifleman, Zane Grey Theatre and Wanted: Dead or Alive. Working his way to assistant director, Capra continued to work in television and eventually migrated to producing feature films that included Born Again, Black Marble and An Eye for an Eye.

In 1983, Capra was sent to Wilmington by director Dino DeLaurentis to find a location for the feature film Firestarter. In 1996, Capra was appointed president and CEO of EUE Screen Gems Studios. Capra also teaches film classes at UNCW and was part of the Fall Cinema Symposium held in 1998 at Cape Fear Community College.

Capra's induction is scheduled for May 8 at the Walk of Fame Plaza at the Cotton Exchange. A pre-induction reception is scheduled from 7 to 9 p.m. May 7 in the Warwick Center. Both events are open to the public. There is no charge to attend the induction ceremonies. Reception tickets are $50 per person and can be purchased from the Arts Council of the Lower Cape Fear, The Cotton Exchange Executive Office or the Kenan Auditorium box office Purchase deadline is Tuesday.

Rowell Named Army Ambassador

M. Tyrone Rowell, associate vice chancellor for university advancement, has been appointed as a U.S. Army Reserve ambassador to assist with the reserve's Community Outreach Program.

One of 28 initial ambassadors selected nationwide, Rowell will serve a three-year term as an adviser and consultant on the current and future direction of the U.S. Army Reserves. Appointed by Maj. Gen. Thomas J. Plewes, chief of the U.S. Army Reserves, Rowell and other ambassadors will meet at least twice a year with reserve officials to review programs. According to information provided by the U.S. Army Reserves, Gen. Plewes intends to appoint two ambassadors per state. Rowell in currently the only appointee for North Carolina.

Rowell

Rowell has more than 25 years of service in the military in a combination of active duty and reserve assignments including activation in 1990 during Operation Desert Storm. He was recommended for this ambassador assignment by Brig. Gen. Michael R. Mayo, commander of the 81st Regional Support Command in Birmingham, Ala., which commands U.S. Army Reserve activities in eight southeastern states and Puerto Rico.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Master of Liberal Studies Approved

The UNC Board of Governors approved UNCW's request to establish a Master of Arts in Liberal Studies starting in fall 1999.

The Masters of Arts in Liberal Studies is a multi-disciplinary program that targets adult learners in the greater Wilmington community. Students will have an opportunity to explore questions and issues important to them and society by selecting courses from the arts and sciences, business, education and nursing.

According to Neil F. Hadley, dean of the Graduate School and Research, "The MALS program is intended to serve as an alternative to standard professional/vocational degree programs that prepare one for an immediate job or train candidates for future research. Instead, the liberal studies graduate program reflects an older, cultural tradition of scholarship, which educates the whole person, providing depth and breadth."

For more information, contact the Graduate School at ext. 4117.

Italian Heritage Society Meeting

The second organizational meeting of the Italian Heritage Society will be at 3 p.m. May 16 in Morton Hall, Bryan Auditorium. The society is open to anyone of Italian heritage, and its goal is to recognize all aspects of Italian heritage. For more information, contact Annette Coneglio Anderson at ext. 3547.

ECO Club Adopts a Spot

The Environmental Concerns Organization has "adopted" Anne McCreary Park as part of the "Adopt-a-Spot" program sponsored by the Greater Wilmington Chamber of Commerce and Keep America Beautiful. Program participants volunteer to keep a small part of the community neat and clean. For more information on the "Adopt-a-Spot" program, contact Nancy Pritchett at 762-0965.

Style Guide Finalized

When it comes to print and World Wide Web publications, everyone can now be on the same page. The Guidelines for Publications and News, detailing the university's official graphic standards and manual of editorial style, has been approved by university administrators and will be mailed in the next few weeks to all offices and departments, as well as off-campus print and design vendors. Developed by the Publications Roundtable, whose members represent departments and offices university-wide, the guidelines will ensure that all publications representing the university have a consistent image.

"Publications don't need to be identical," said Mimi Cunningham, assistant vice chancellor for university relations. "They do need to incorporate certain identifying icons in specific ways to present an organized and consistent look."

The guidelines will also be available on the World Wide Web. Print and Web versions of the university's official logos are available at http://www.uncwil.edu/printsrv/logos.

Summer Research Awards

Seven students received summer research awards from the Graduate School: Sean Ahlum, creative writing; Susan Avau, earth sciences; Heather McCreery, chemistry; Nancy Norcross and Kristin Rauscher, biological sciences; Jessica Symons, psychology; and Hontao Xu, mathematics and statistics.

Commencement Volunteers

Volunteers assisting with commencement May 15 should attend an informational breakfast at 8 a.m. Wednesday in Wagoner Hall, Madeline Suite. Assignments, name tags and special parking passes will be given out. Anyone unable to attend this meeting should contact Mary Crookes at ext. 7231.

Bennett Receives National Award

John Bennett, HPER, received the 1999 Margie R. Hanson Distinguished Service Award from the Council on Physical Education for Children at the national convention for the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance held in Boston.

Bennett was recognized by the council for "his outstanding contributions and leadership on behalf of quality physical education programs for children."

The award is named in honor of Margie Hanson, retired vice president of AAHPERD who specialized in teaching physical education and dance for children - 10 years at the elementary school level and 12 years at the university level. In addition, she was a staff member with AAHPERD for 26 years working to develop programs for children.

Grad Student Leads Tour

Jenny Edwards, a first-year graduate student in history, led a tour of historic Seabreeze for approximately 70 third-graders from Greensboro. Following the tour, she gave a presentation based upon her research which is the basis of her honors thesis. Her research on Seabreeze is the topic of the paper "Living on the Edge: The African-American Coastal Environment at Seabreeze" which she will present at the annual conference of the Oral History Society at Sussex University, Brighton, England.

Retirement Reception

The Department of Physics and Physical Oceanography will hold a retirement reception for Hildelisa Hernandez at noon May 7 in DeLoach Hall, Room 224.

UNCW-TV Announces Premiere of Let's Talk! UNCW & You

UNCW-TV announces the premiere of Let's Talk! UNCW & You, an hour-long television program highlighting the university and greater Wilmington community. The show will air at noon Wednesdays and at 7 p.m. Fridays and Mondays on UNCW-TV and The Learning Network of the Cape Fear, seen on Time-Warner Cable Channel 5 in the Wilmington area.

Hosted by Betty Ann Sanders, the show "will be about our town, about life in our community, what's happening, interviews about Wilmington," said Kate Walsh, director of UNCW-TV and producer-director of the show for the Division for Public Service and Extended Education.

The show is produced by UNCW-TV and will include regular segments on Seahawk sports by Joe Browning, sports information director; business tips by Louis H. Rogers III, Small Business and Technology Development Center counselor; and UNCW news and upcoming events by Mimi Cunningham, assistant vice chancellor for university relations.

Sanders, a Wilmington resident and UNCW volunteer, will interview university and community sources and cover a wide range of topics from faculty research and outstanding community volunteers to cooking and health tips.

Sanders brings to the show a wealth of experience from a 20-year broadcasting career that began with daily radio and television talk shows in Dayton, Ohio, and included NBC's Today Show.

OFFICIAL NOTICES

Graduate School Position

The Graduate School is accepting applications for the position of associate dean. The primary responsibilities of this position include recruitment and enrollment management of graduate students, financial aid, student affairs and fund-raising. The associate dean will also assist the dean with special projects.

The position is intended for a UNCW graduate faculty member who has the appropriate mix of experience, skills and enthusiasm to carry out these responsibilities. The successful candidate will be a tenured full or associate professor with extensive experience in graduate education, a strong record of research or other creative activity and excellent communication skills. Prior administrative experience, service on the graduate council or as a graduate coordinator and existing working relationships with the broader Wilmington community are desired.

This is a half-time position which allows the continuation of some departmental teaching responsibilities and research. A July 1 start date is preferred. The work schedule during summer and the academic year is flexible and negotiable.

To apply, send a letter of application addressing the above qualifications and reason for seeking the position, along with a vitae, to Neil F. Hadley, dean, Graduate School and Research, by May 17. Minorities and women are encouraged to apply.

Alumni Association Wins National Award

The "Seal of Excellence" will be awarded to the UNCW Alumni Association at the 1999 Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) International Assembly this summer in Boston. It is one of 13 to be presented nationwide and only one of two to universities in the South.

This national award recognizes the alumni association for its "Hog Wild for the Hawks" fund-raiser which generated more than $22,000 for alumni programs and outreach. The UNCW Alumni Association's entry in the 1999 CASE Circle of Excellence Awards was in the "Alumni Relations - Other Revenue Generation" category; it was the only one to receive an award. In making their decision, Marianne Breen, awards chair, said the judges "looked first and foremost for alumni programs that can be used as models for other associations and incorporated into the core curriculum framework developed by the three professional area commissions," one of which is alumni relations.

"Our association experienced the joy of raising money for alumni programs that we believe in while having a blast with the Harley-Davidson ... owning one is a real fantasy for most of us," said Patricia A. Corcoran, executive director of UNCW Alumni Relations.

Robert J. Williams IV, a 1977 graduate of UNCW and owner of Cape Fear Harley-Davidson in Fayetteville, donated a 1999 Harley-Davidson Sportster to the alumni association to aid its fund-raising efforts.

The four-month promotional effort used the theme "Hog Wild for the Hawks" which incorporated the nickname for the Harley-Davidson motorcycle (Hog) with the idea of excitement and linked it to the university's mascot. That theme was also incorporated into alumni activities throughout the fall and winter, including homecoming in January when the motorcycle was awarded.

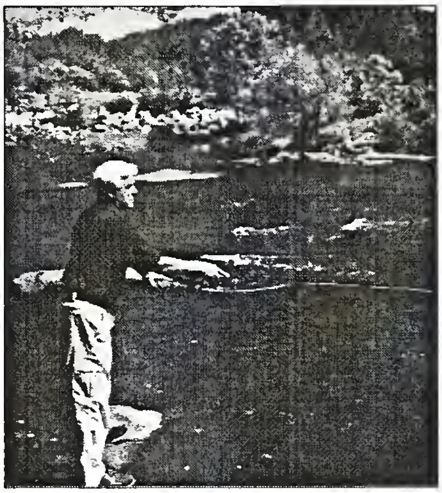
New UNCW Documentary to Premiere on UNC Television May 26

One of the state's most beautiful and controversial rivers is the subject of UNCW's latest documentary which airs at 8 p.m. May 26 on UNC-TV. Currents of Hope: Reclaiming the Neuse River was filmed over the past year by UNCW and NC State University. It is narrated by Chancellor James R. Leutze. This documentary is the third such collaborative effort by the two schools. Their previous works on the Cape Fear River and the N.C. coast received critical acclaim and numerous awards.

The Neuse River, nearly two million years old, is a vital part of the second largest estuarine system in the United States, the Albemarle-Pamlico. She begins nears Greensboro with the Eno and Flat rivers which converge west of Raleigh to form the headwaters of the Neuse. She remains a free-flowing freshwater river until she reaches the western Craven County border where she becomes a shallow, slow-moving brackish estuary. The estuary extends to the five-mile mouth of the Neuse, the widest in the continental United States, where the river meets the Pamlico Sound. Along the way, the Neuse supports residential developments, provides a source of irrigation for farm operations as well as drinking water for several cities and towns including Raleigh and supports all types of recreational activities and businesses.

Through the documentary, viewers are taken the entire length of the river, along the way meeting people who make their livings on the river as well as those who enjoy her beauty and the scientists, citizens and government officials who are working to save her."



A scene from Currents of Hope shows Chancellor Leutze fishing in the Neuse River.

"We're examining the river with good science," Leutze said during a filming session in New Bern. "We're examining the history, the culture, the issues and problems of the river. There are many culprits in the water quality issues. It's an addictive effect. Even if there were no hog farms and no Kinston and no Raleigh, there would still be problems on the river."

While the documentary will not present a miracle cure for the Neuse's problems, it makes clear that everyone who lives in the basin must take responsibility for its health. One problem is simply the number of people who have moved into this watershed over the past 25 to 30 years. "Obviously, you can't ask these people to leave, the golf courses to close down, the shopping centers to go out of business, the farmers to stop producing goods and livestock or the shopping centers to rip up their parking lots. Just as clearly, if we're going to find a solution, all these contributors must work collectively to that end. What this all adds up to is a complex web of contributing factors, and what we need is a complex web of solutions," said Leutze.

Executive producer Elaine Penn calls the documentary and the preparation for it "Neuse River 101." In her discussions with potential underwriters, she found businesses were excited by the balanced educational approach that was being taken.

"We're talking about many of the positive things people are doing. For instance, Weyerhauser spent $120 million taking pipes out of the water and redirecting them, reduced their discharge by 50 percent. Weyerhauser has a real estate division; they make people sign contracts not to destroy wetlands. CP&L paid for Quaker Neck Dam to be taken down near Waynesboro. There's a lot of hard work being done to lower nutrient levels in wastewater treatment plants in Zebulon, Cary, Havelock and Raleigh."

UNCW, UNC Chapel Hill and NC State scientists are at the forefront of Neuse River studies. One of the film's strengths is that it presents science in a very understandable way. Later this summer, an educational guide for North Carolina school teachers will be released and distributed free to anyone who wishes to use it in the classroom.

Currents of Hope was produced with private funding including major underwriting by the Weyerhauser Company Foundation, Bank of America, CP&L and the Lower Neuse Basin Association.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fate of Children Panel Discussion

"The Fate of Children: From Kosovo to Columbine High," a panel discussion with film presentations, will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Morton Hall, Bryan Auditorium.

Panelists are Donald Bergstrom, former United Nations and State Department official; James Johnson, psychology; Donna King, sociology; James McNab, international programs; and Patricia Simmons Taylor, a teacher and administrator. Bergstrom is currently working to monitor election results in Bosnia. Taylor, who was on the faculty of UNCW and UCLA, has a long-term interest in expanding opportunities for minorities. She received a $20 million grant for her proposal targeting improvements for inner-city youth in Los Angeles.

This free program is sponsored by the Coastal Carolina Chapter of the United Nations Association and the Office of International Programs.

Fulbright Program

The USIA Fulbright Scholar Program is offering an award for a professor or associate professor at a college or university in North Carolina to teach and do research in Israel beginning in October 2000 or February 2001. It is open to applicants in any field. The application deadline is Aug. 1. For more information and applications, contact Gary Garrison at 202-686-4019 or e-mail ggarrison@cies.iie.org.

Computer Science Fax

Capra and Colbert to Receive Honorary Degrees Saturday

Two individuals who have helped UNCW's film studies and creative writing programs will be honored for their contributions at commencement Saturday.

Honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degrees will be presented to Frank W. Capra, Jr. and Stanley L. Colbert.

The son of legendary director Frank Capra will be honored, not only for his achievements in the film industry, but for his work at UNCW where he was instrumental in the establishment of the film studies program. He continues to shares his expertise as a distinguished visiting professor and opens his studio doors to students who want to learn the industry from the ground up.

With his arrival in Wilmington 1983, Capra became one of the pioneers of the local film industry, working with director Dino De Laurentiis. He returned in 1996 as president and CEO of EUE Screen Gems Studios Ltd. and has taken an active role recruiting major productions to the Cape Fear area, thereby boosting the local economy. As an advocate on the Governor's Film Council he looks for ways to keep Wilmington and North Carolina competitive as film locations and production sites. Capra is also a member of the Wilmington Rotary Club, the UNCW Board of Visitors, the Cape Fear Council of the Boy Scouts of America and Friends of the Bellamy Mansion Museum.

Stanley L. Colbert is being recognized for his notable accomplishments in publishing and film and his contributions to UNCW's creative writing program. His ties to North Carolina date back to 1944 when he enrolled at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, leaving his junior year to enlist in the U.S. Air Force. As the co-founder of Lord & Colbert, he shepherded Jack Kerouac's On the Road to publication, thereby ushering in the Beat Generation of American literature. At the William Morris Agency in California, he rescued the classic Lilies of the Field from obscurity and saw it become a major motion picture. He later worked on film and television classics like The Greatest Show on Earth, Flipper, Gentle Ben and James Bond's Thunderball. He went on to become the head of Light Entertainment Programs for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the president of HarperCollins Publishers in Canada as well as group vice president of the company in New York.

Throughout his career he found time to follow his early ambition to be a teacher. When he retired to Wilmington in 1994, he immediately began supporting UNCW's developing creative writing program and volunteered as adviser to the Seahawk. As a visiting distinguished professor he serves as a mentor to aspiring student writers and a "godfather" to faculty writers.

Ted Kennedy, Jr. to Speak at Commencement

Ted Kennedy, Jr. will address graduates at graduation ceremonies at 10 a.m. Saturday in Trask Coliseum. This year's graduation will feature an estimated 1,053 bachelor's degree candidates and 167 master's degree candidates. Kennedy's selection as speaker was recommended by the Student Government Association.

Kennedy

Kennedy, who lost a leg to bone cancer at age 12, has devoted much of his professional and personal energy working as an advocate for people with disabilities. A graduate of Wesleyan University, Kennedy received his master's degree from Yale University's School of Forestry and Environmental Studies in 1991. Since 1992, he has worked on the research faculty of th e Yale University School of Medicine and as director of the New Haven Lead Safe Home and Community Health Project, a comprehensive community-based initiative addressing lead poisoning, one of the leading known causes of mental retardation.

Kennedy worked for the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission as marketing director of the Massachusetts Corporate Partnership Program. On the national level, Kennedy served on the executive committee of the 1995 Special Olympics World Summer Games.

Most recently, he was appointed by Connecticut Gov. John Rowland to the state's board of Protection and Advocacy for Persons with Disabilities.

A 1997 graduate of the University of Connecticut School of Law, Kennedy now practices in the areas of health and disability law at a New Haven, Conn., law firm.

Warwick Center Ballroom Will Host Overflow Crowd

The Warwick Center Ballroom will serve as an overflow site for commencement guests unable to attend the ceremony in Trask Coliseum. They can view UNCW-TV's live coverage of the ceremonies via The Learning Network seen locally on Time Warner Cable Channel 5.

This is recyclable.

Teaching Students Life Skills on the Dance Floor

by Phillip Brown

John Bennett teaches dance. But for Bennett, dance is more than physical movement to music, it is a metaphor for life.

Bennett is on the job teaching life lessons through dance.

Dance lets everyone experience feeling good about themselves physically," said Bennett. "Through dance, my students learn that they can accomplish something that they have never thought possible. It shows them that they can succeed."

An associate professor in the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Department, Bennett is in his 30th year as an educator. During the past academic year he received three teaching awards including the Chancellor's Teaching Excellence Award and a national award from the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

"It's very humbling for me to receive such recognition," said Bennett, adding he was honored to be singled out by his peers. At a time when many colleagues are retiring, Bennett relishes his job helping students achieve new levels of competence. It is part of his philosophy of striving to get "better and better."

Students enrolled in PED 235 Introduction to Physical Education or one of Bennett's dance classes learn that Bennett values his "three R's - respect for one's self, respect for others and respect for the environment."

The tragedy at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., reinforces that philosophy.

"If these young people had been living balanced, healthy lives, had respect for themselves and others, then they would never have considered striking out at others," said Bennett.

In addition to stressing his three R's, Bennett extols the virtue of the power of one.

"One person can make a difference. By controlling one's own actions, anyone can affect change in the life of others," said Bennett. "When someone has acquired the ability to control attitude and desire, then he or she can work in unison with others.

"Life is working with other people and groups," said Bennett, which is the essence of dance.

In virtually every culture, dance embodies the belief in inclusion and equality, Bennett explained.

"Early folk dances were performed in circles," said Bennett. "There was no lead couple, everybody was equal."

This promotion of equality in dance is a powerful model, said Bennett. It shows up in regions worldwide. Contra dances, often called "dances for as many as will," can grow to hundreds of people joining the end of the line, said Bennett.

"In Africa, the majority of dances are performed without partners. All individuals, all ages come together and dance," said Bennett.

Perpetuating this design for inclusion in his classes, Bennett said, "I love to see a student who might be introverted or uncomfortable leave class a social and physical extrovert. Students learn the social aspect of dance. We constantly switch partners, so students must learn to appreciate one another and accept each other's physical limitations."

Dance also gives an opportunity to practice verbal and non-verbal communications skills, said Bennett. Students learn how to meet people, invite someone to dance and other skills necessary to work in tandem with others. His classes have become so popular that he often lets in twice the number he should, many of them non-PE majors.

"Communication studies and business students often tell me that dance should be required for their majors," said Bennett. "They point out that we put into practice many of the skills which are only discussed."

This belief in practicing a skill is important to Bennett. "Skills don't develop by osmosis. Skills are skills are skills. If you don't practice them, you lose them. That goes for all skills - physical, mental and social."

Keeping skills in shape isn't just talk. During his classes, Bennett hits the floor with his students. In every class, there are some who are reluctant participants.

"I dance with my students. It's tough to tell a guy who's 30 years older than you and who's out on the floor that you can't dance," said Bennett. "I think students respect and appreciate how active I am."

And just how active? At 49 years of age, Bennett decided to take up surfing. He's been surfing for a few years, and he's getting "better and better."

He and his daughter, Rebecca, a rising senior at New Hanover High School, surf together.

"I love it. Surfing is an explosive sport," said Bennett who not only continues to take dance lessons but has participated in international competitions.

"I'm committed to improving my level of performance. I'm not willing to admit that being over 50 means it's time to slow down."

In fact, Bennett plans to pursue new interests and activities. "I'm excited about using technology in the classroom," said Bennett who has his own personal World Wide Web page and incorporates the Web in many of his classes.

At a point in his career when others might consider retiring, Bennett said he has adopted a motto from a friend: don't retire - re-fire.

"I still have the drive to do better, and I'm gratified to see my students achieve a new level of success," said Bennett. "It's not my success, it's their success."

UNC Board of Governors Appoint John Cavanaugh Provost

Cavanaugh

Acting on the recommendation of Chancellor James R. Leutze, the UNC Board of Governors approved John C. Cavanaugh as provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs effective July 1. He will replace Marvin K. Moss who is resigning from the position at the end of the current academic year and will to return to teaching.

Cavanaugh has been vice provost for academic programs and planning and professor of psychology and individual and family studies at the University of Delaware since 1997.

"I am very appreciative of all the hard work of Marvin Moss and of all the wonderful things he has done for the university," said Chancellor Leutze. "While I am disappointed to lose the services of Dr. Moss, I am really very pleased that we were able to attract someone of John Cavanaugh's stature and experience to UNCW. His academic reputation, his administrative ability, his knowledge of technology and his ability to work with people will serve the university well as we enter the next century."

Among Cavanaugh's administrative achievements while at the University of Delaware are his experiences relating to teaching and technology, especially in creating a Teaching, Learning and Technology Roundtable and the nation's first electronic graduate admissions processing system; receiving a grant from the Pew Charitable Trusts for a very large initiative on problem-based learning and working with the faculty on the faculty development program that led to the university winning a Theodore M. Hesburgh Award Certificate of Excellence for Faculty Development to Enhance Undergraduate Teaching.

"I believe Dr. John Cavanaugh will be a good provost and vice chancellor for UNCW and its academic programs," Moss said of his successor. "UNCW has developed a tremendous amount of 'academic momentum.' Its payoff can be seen in the highly visible academic standing of UNCW and the university's attraction of so many high ability students and faculty. Cavanaugh will maintain this momentum and also, I believe, bring excellent direction and leadership to our future development."

Cavanaugh is the former president of Division 20 (Adult Development and Aging) of the American Psychological Association, a fellow of the American Psychological Association, a charter fellow of the American Psychological Society and fellow of the Gerontological Society of America.

In accepting the position, Cavanaugh said, "I am extremely excited about coming to UNCW. I was searching for an institution with vitality and a clear sense of purpose; one with excellent leadership, a strong faculty and staff, and students who are serious about learning; and one that is on a steep trajectory upward. The deep commitment of students, faculty and staff to the mission of UNCW was clear to me from the beginning. UNCW is exactly the kind of institution I was seeking."

McDowell Named Vice Chancellor for Advancement

McDowell

The UNC Board of Governors approved the appointment of Patton McDowell as vice chancellor for university advancement effective June 1. He has served as interim vice chancellor for university advancement since July 1, 1998.

As the university's chief fund raiser this past year, he has initiated the first UNCW Board of Visitors, a group of distinguished individuals from across the state and nation tapped to assist UNCW in public affairs and development activities, to act as image ambassadors for the institution and to provide feedback on university issues to senior leadership. He has also revitalized the university's Foundation Board and overseen the implementation of a constituency-based fund raising effort, placing development officers within college and school administrative units.

McDowell came to UNCW in January 1997 as executive director of the Seahawk Club. During his tenure there, he led volunteers in their best fund raising year ever, achieving $550,000 in pledges and increasing membership significantly. With the Seahawk Club, he launched Project 2002 to raise $4 million for athletics facility enhancements. To date, more than $2 million has been committed.

"As interim vice chancellor, Patton McDowell has demonstrated strong leadership in a rapidly evolving and expanding fund-raising organization," said Chancellor James R. Leutze. "I had confidence in his abilities when I appointed him interim, and after working with him for nearly a year, I recommended that the UNCW Board of Trustees forward his nomination to the UNC Board of Governors for permanent appointment.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UNCW Offering Graduate Program in Gerontology Fall 1999

UNCW will offer a new post-baccalaureate certificate program in gerontology beginning fall 1999. The establishment of this new graduate program follows approval in April by the UNC Board of Governors.

The UNCW graduate certificate in gerontology was developed in response to a need identified by professionals in the greater Wilmington area. The university has been offering a multidisciplinary undergraduate minor in gerontology since 1992, and students graduating with the minor have found the local job market receptive to their training. In this year alone, six graduates with the gerontology minor have been employed in nursing homes, hospitals, home health agencies and the Cape Fear Area Agency on Aging. Three hundred and eighty-one students were enrolled in the undergraduate gerontology courses in the 1998-99 school year, and 27 students selected the undergraduate gerontology minor.

In the past, students wishing to pursue graduate coursework in gerontology have had to travel to Boone, Charlotte, Greensboro or Greenville to study. This new program will offer them the opportunity to remain employed in the community while furthering their education. In response to the schedules of working adults, UNCW graduate courses in gerontology will be offered in the late afternoons or early evenings.

This multidisciplinary program will include a core of 15-18 semester hours that will present information needed by anyone who plans to work with aging adults, including social workers, nurses, program directors and retirement planners. Core courses include Biology of Aging, Sociology of Aging, Psychology of Aging and an applied gerontology practicum. Students will also be expected to complete a graduate course in research methods, selected in accordance with their own career development plans. Students will also select elective courses to complete the 21-24 hour certificate program.

"What makes UNCW's graduate certificate in gerontology unique is its rich elective course offerings," said Dr. Eleanor Krassen Covan, director of UNCW Gerontology Programs. Faculty from within all schools of the university will teach courses. Currently students may study The Literature of Aging, Women and Aging, Psycho-social Adjustment to Retirement and Adult Development and Life Transitions. Additional graduate coursework is being developed in economics, communication, ethics and the impact of developmental disabilities on old age.

"The UNCW Post-baccalaureate Certificate in Gerontology was developed in accordance with guidelines suggested by the Association for Gerontology in Higher Education. The program will provide documentation that students have completed a program of instruction and educational experiences in the field of gerontology at the graduate level," she said.

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

University Advancement Vol. XXVIII, No. 44 June 3, 1999 Phillip Brown, editor

Gloria Crowell Named 1999 Staff Award of Excellence Recipient

Gloria Crowell, office assistant at the Center for Marine Science Research, received the 1999 UNCW Staff Award of Excellence. Chancellor James R. Leutze presented the award at the university's 24th annual Service Awards Program May 26 in Wagoner Hall.

Crowell, one of nine nominees, was nominated in the "outstanding state service" category. The honor recognized her "loyalty, concern and devotion to students" and her "invaluable assistance in the administration of the Lower Cape Fear River Program," according to a letter of nomination. In addition to 26 years of state service, Crowell has worked as a commencement volunteer for the past 15 years and assisted with freshman "Move-In" since its inception in 1992.

The UNCW Staff Award of Excellence is presented to an employee whose service to the university exemplifies either outstanding state service, innovations, public service, human relations or safety/heroism. Other nominees were Robert Brickels, Jr., assistant director of athletics marketing and promotions; Dianne Jones, assistant director, Student Academic Support Programs; Janice Keller, administrative secretary, English Department; Amy Lanham, campus recreation special events coordinator; Dianne Matthews, administrative assistant, Student Development Services; Bobby Miller, director of information technology; Richard Scott, assistant vice chancellor for business affairs; and Mark Williams, director of financial aid and veteran services.

As this year's recipient, Crowell received a $1,500 cash award presented on behalf of the UNCW Board of Trustees, a reserved parking space for one year, three days of vacation leave, a presentation clock, a framed certificate and her name on a perpetual plaque in the chancellor's office. The recipient of the UNCW Staff Award of Excellence becomes the university's nominee for the Governor's Award of Excellence which is presented in September.

Dr. Robert Woods, speaking fellow at the Morris Institute for Human Values, served as guest speaker. Patton McDowell, vice chancellor for university advancement, acted as the master of ceremonies.

NURC/UNCW Wins Environmental Award

The National Undersea Research Center at UNCW (NURC/UNCW) won an Environmental Hero Award from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA). The award was presented May 27 during ceremonies at The Mariners' Museum in Newport News, Va. Ken Johns and Glenn Taylor accepted the award on behalf of NURC/UNCW.

The award recognized NURC/UNCW, along with the U.S. Navy's Mobile Diving and Salvage Unit Two, the Cambrian Foundation and The Mariners' Museum, for their partnership efforts during a month-long expedition in June 1998. The four organizations participated in the initial stages of a long-range preservation plan for the Civil War ironclad USS Monitor.

"This award is great news for the NURC/UNCW staff, along with the Navy, Cambrian Foundation and The Mariners' Museum," said Dr. Steven Miller, NURC/UNCW director. "All who share in this award should be commended for a job well done."

NURC/UNCW provided divers and specialized equipment for the mission and was responsible for the operation of the recompression chamber. In addition, NURC/UNCW divers took photographs and measurements of wreck areas and mapped and recovered artifacts. NURC/UNCW also provided the research vessel, RV Seahawk.

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF UNCW

Farr Endowed Scholarship Established

A familiar face to television viewers in southeastern North Carolina, Shirley Gilbert Farr died earlier this year following an extended illness. In recognition of her belief in education, her husband Joe Farr and their children, Melanie and Shawn Gilbert, have established the Shirley Gilbert Farr Scholarship in Communication Studies at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

This annual $1,000 scholarship will be awarded to an undergraduate student who is majoring in communication studies with a minimum 2.5 GPA. In addition, a special requirement of the scholarship will give preference to a single parent. This requirement reflects on the struggle Farr experienced as a student at UNCW. She graduated in 1976 earning a bachelor's degree in art.

Farr served as executive producer and co-anchor for the Carolina in the Morning program on WECT-TV for nine years. Before that, she was a reporter and weather announcer for WWAY-TV for eight years.

Family, friends and colleagues remember Farr as a hard worker who placed great importance on helping others and giving back to a community that had been kind to her during both professional years, as well as her years as a single parent working toward her degree at UNCW. As a television personality, Farr relied upon graciousness, a friendly smile and sense of humor as her trademarks, said Wayne Jackson. "Shirley was the consummate professional." Jackson, who retired from WECT-TV in 1989, worked with Farr on the program Carolina in the Morning.

Contributions to the Shirley Gilbert Farr Scholarship in Communication Studies endowed fund can be made payable to UNCW and sent to the Department of Advancement Services.

Leutze Recognized by Economic Organization

Chancellor James R. Leutze was recognized for his accomplishments in community service at the Partners for Economic Inclusion Conference held at the Coast Line Convention Center.

In presenting the award, Bertha Todd, co-chair of the 1898 Centennial Foundation, said Leutze has "a lifetime record of attention and constructive action in the areas of advancing equal opportunity and improving race relations." She added that the chancellor "has vigorously recruited minority students, faculty and staff." According to Todd, among the achievements that led to Leutze's nomination were his efforts at UNCW to expand opportunities for minority contracting, support of the establishment of the North Carolina Black Chamber of Commerce and host the symposium on the events of 1898.

Partners for Economic Inclusion facilitates the development of strategies for economic inclusiveness of the African-American community in the Lower Cape Fear Region, particularly through creating new partnerships in the business community.

UNCW Graduate Awarded Fulbright

Head

Jennifer Head, a 1997 graduate of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington who earned a bachelor's degree in biological sciences and French, received a Fulbright grant for the 1999-2000 academic year. The award will fund her to study with Dr. Andre Pequeux, an internationally known animal physiologist, while attending the L'Universite de Liege in Belgium. The award was announced by the U.S. Information Agency and the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board.

Head, who is the daughter of Frank and Mary Head of Bayonne, N.J., is the first UNCW graduate to receive a full Fulbright Fellowship. Last year, Teresa Krebs, a Spanish major, won a Fulbright Teaching Assistantship to Korea.

Currently a substitute teacher in Bayonne, Head said she is excited at the prospect of working at a foreign research laboratory.

"Working at a biological research laboratory in another country will give me an opportunity to observe similarities between American and foreign research labs," said Head.

Following her year abroad, Head said she intends to continue her graduate school studies with the goal of becoming a university professor.

The Fulbright Program, America's flagship educational exchange program, is sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency, an independent foreign affairs agency within the executive branch of the U.S. government.

OFFICIAL NOTICES

Receiving Goods

Timely processing of paperwork is critical near the end of the fiscal year. Be attentive to receiving goods and sign purchase order pink copies quickly. "Expected Delivery" dates should be printed in the upper right-hand corner of the PO copy. Purchasing staff will look at all open purchase orders particularly those with exceeded delivery dates.

Departments concerned with a particular order should call the appropriate agent for that order; do not call the vendor. When receiving goods, inspect and install merchandise the day received if possible. Many vendors have a 30-day exchange policy to resolve problems. Save all boxes and packaging materials for at least four weeks to ensure that any discrepancy in orders or defective items can be returned without complication. Address receiving discrepancies to Rhonda at ext. 3156.

Fixed Assets Tagging Change

Effective July 1, the dollar value used by fixed assets will increase from $500 to $1,000. When ordering equipment, remember that the object codes stay the same, but the dollar value associated with 5X5X codes will be a minimum of $1,000. Direct questions to Carol Offredo Sgambati at ext. 3875 or offredoc.

Work Assistants and Work-study Students

Departments who have hired work assistant and work-study students should submit payroll action paperwork (HR 1.60) to career services by June 16 to meet the deadline for month-end payroll. Late paperwork will be held until the following month's payroll.

Petty Cash Reimbursements

All petty cash reimbursements to be paid from 1998-99 fiscal year's budget should be in the Cashier's Office by noon on June 23.

Volunteers Needed for Walking Tours

Volunteers are needed to assist with walking tours used to welcome new employees to campus. The tours were implemented five years ago to enhance benefits enrollment sessions and are conducted from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. on the second Thursday of each month. Participants receive a complimentary lunch at the Hawk's Nest. Anyone interested in volunteering should contact Elizabeth at ext. 3713.

Invoice Deadline

All interdepartmental invoices to be paid for fiscal year 1998-99 must be processed and forwarded to accounting by June 24. Direct questions to Glenda Tomasiello at ext. 3150.

Travel Reimbursements

Submit all travel reimbursements to be paid from 1998-99 fiscal year's budget to accounting by June 24.

Travel Advances

All travel advances for fiscal year 1998-99 must be satisfied prior to June 30. For questions concerning year-end procedures, call Jan Riemersma at ext. 3227.

Travel for Fiscal Year 1999-2000

Travel taking place in fiscal year 1999-2000 that does not require payment from this year's budget may be entered as a future requisition "FR." Direct questions to Betty Mills at ext. 3149.

Check Requests

Check requests to be paid from the 1998-99 budget should be submitted to accounting by June 24. Direct questions to Cindy Hucks at ext. 3143.

Facilities Reservations Reminder

All questions from external groups concerning reserving UNCW facilities should be directed to the Facilities Reservations Office, University Union, Room 108 or ext. 7098.

CCB Donates $10,000 to Watson School of Education Tutorial Lab

Central Carolina Bank donated $10,000 to the Watson School of Education Wednesday to fund tutoring scholarships for economically disadvantaged children at The Educational Laboratory, an instructional workshop sponsored by the school.

"CCB strives to be a model corporate citizen," said Spence Broadhurst, CCB senior vice president and community executive. "We are compelled to invest in our next generation as well as our community. Scholarships for the Ed Lab allow us to do both."

The Ed Lab provides teachers-in-training an opportunity to practice their strategies and methodologies while providing affordable, one-on-one tutoring in reading/language arts and mathematics to local students in a supportive learning environment. After an initial assessment, the tutor develops a lesson plan to coach the child, focusing on the child's individual strengths.

More than 250 K-12 students are tutored by education majors in the Ed Lab each year.

"The tutoring program supported by the CCB donation is an initial and most crucial building block in helping our students learn to diagnose and teach to individual student needs," said Robert Tyndall, dean of the Watson School of Education.

"We are excited to support our teachers and children - especially the children of families in poor economic situations - through this progressive and important program. By enriching the lives of these children, we help to build productive citizens and a strong community," Broadhurst added.

UNCW Distinguished Visiting Professor Wins National Award

Otis L. Graham, a distinguished visiting professor at UNCW, received the third Robert Kelley Memorial Award from the National Council on Public History at its annual meeting in Lowell, Mass.

Graham was recognized by the organization for "his major contributions to the public history movement in the United States as a teacher, scholar and tireless advocate of the importance of history in the public life of the nation and for his leading role as editor of The Public Historian from 1989-97, making it the premier journal in public history and an important journal within the wider field of history."

Graham, who joined UNCW's faculty in 1994, teaches in the History Department and the Cameron School of Business. As instructor of the course Introduction to Public History in fall 1997, Graham and his students completed the manuscript "UNCW's First 50 Years, 1947-97." The manuscript includes a historical timeline of the university and a preliminary exhibition plan to display university artifacts.

"This manuscript is a good example of the excellent work being done by undergraduate and graduate students in the public history track," said Larry Usilton, chair of the History Department.

In May 1997, students under Graham's direction researched and wrote 40 pages of text to accompany graphics for the Wrightsville Beach Museum's World Wide Web site.

The Kelley Memorial Award was named in honor of Dr. Robert Kelley, a distinguished U.S. historian who founded the world's first graduate program in public history at the University of California at Santa Barbara in 1977.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UNCW Ready for Year 2000

There are approximately 30 weeks, 210 days, 5,040 hours before the year 2000 begins, and UNCW is ready, said Nikki Howard, chair of the university's Y2K committee.

"All of the university's critical mission systems - FRS, HRS, SIS and ADS, have the latest Y2K compliant releases installed," said Howard. She said the committee and university administrators have been preparing for the year 2000 since fall 1997.

The committee continues to meet monthly and send progress reports to a statewide committee on Y2K compliance, said Howard. While the major systems are in compliance, Howard said individual computer users on campus must take responsibility to guarantee their computer hardware and software is ready for the year 2000.

"UNCW's Y2K committee has a World Wide Web site that supplies information for campus computer users to test hardware and software," said Bill Pate, director of management information support. "There are also a number of links to vendor Web sites and other recommended sites that have useful ideas for dealing with potential problems."

Even though many departments have purchased new equipment within the last two years, Pate and Howard both agreed not to assume the equipment and software is safe.

"Computers purchased since 1997 should be Y2K compliant," said Pate. "Even if the hardware meets Y2K standards, specialized software may cause a problem." Pate singled out researchers who have collected data for several years as individuals who should take steps immediately to insure compliance. Pate added the university will continue to conduct more testing and will provide new data as it is available.

For more information on the Y2K committee and information on testing hardware and software, visit the Web address http://www.uncwil.edu/mis/year2000.html.

Farewell Reception

Due to postal regulations, all international packages must be presented at the post office window for the appropriate customs forms to be completed and signed by the sender. International letters are acceptable for mail drop boxes.

SEANC Meeting

The State Employees Association of North Carolina will hold its annual meeting June 21 in Wagoner Hall, Madeline Suite. The social hour will begin at 6 p.m., and the meeting will be from 7 to 9 p.m. There will be an election for 1999-2000 officers. Also, SEANC District 62 will present its 1999-2000 scholarship award of $500 to Andrea Barham, the daughter of Terri and Jody McCall of Wilmington.

Volunteers Needed

The School of Nursing needs adult volunteers between 10 a.m. and noon and 1 to 3 p.m. Monday in Hoggard Hall, Room 111 for the Health Assessment course (NSG 250). Nursing students will take vital signs, health histories, and check hearts and lungs. Prospective participants should call Jaca Baynes at ext. 3206.

Honors Program Reception

The Honors Scholars Program will host a reception for Diane Levy from 2 to 4 p.m. June 24 in the program office in Randall Library. Levy, the program's founding director, will return to teaching in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology July 1.

Associate Director of Housing Named

Tierza Watts was named associate director of housing and residence life by the Division of Student Affairs. As associate director, Watts will supervise six residence coordinators and more than 100 student staff, design and implement comprehensive training programs, coordinate the development programs and services designed to promote community involvement and collaborate with other offices within the division. Prior to joining UNCW, Watts was assistant director for residence life at Appalachian State University. She earned a bachelor's degree in communication media and a master's degree in student development administration from ASU.

Gulko Wins Award

Warren Gulko, special assistant to the vice chancellor for public service and extended education, received the Coastal Entrepreneurial Council's Service to Entrepreneurs Award at the third annual Greater Wilmington Business Awards Gala. The event was hosted by the Coastal Entrepreneurial Council, Greater Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, Small Business and Technology Development Center, Cameron School of Business and Wilmington Small Business Coalition. Sponsors included Wilmington Star-News Inc., BB&T and CP&L.

Gulko, who broadcasts advice to small business owners on a bi-weekly radio show, also advises entrepreneurs through his consulting firm, Professional Associations of Wilmington.

SEANC Fund-raiser

The State Employees Association of North Carolina, District 62, is selling $1 raffle tickets to benefit its scholarship fund. LEADERSHIP is one of the most valuable assets of a community. Of equal importance is that these leaders be well trained and readily available. The mission of Leadership Wilmington is to provide a continuous, diverse supply of creative leaders to the community by developing their knowledge of the region and providing them the opportunity for meaningful action.
Wilmington '99

Volunteer Leadership

Objectives

❖ Educate program participants regarding the challenges and needs of the community as well as the dynamics of regional social and economic change.

❖ Facilitate the development of interpersonal relationships among the program participants and community leaders thereby enhancing their collective ability to undertake present and future community projects.

❖ Assist program participants in enhancing relevant leadership skills and in assuming leadership roles in the Wilmington community.

Participant Selection

Nominations are sought from corporate, business, education, professional, non-profit and governmental sectors. A committee of past participants will select 30 applicants for 1999 Leadership Wilmington. Leadership potential, community involvement, accomplishments and recommendations are among the criteria used for selection. The committee is responsible for assuring that Leadership Wilmington participants reflect the community's diversity.

Tuition

Tuition is $495 paid by the participant, the participant's sponsor or by scholarship. The fee covers expenses for opening retreat, classes, speakers, breaks, notebooks, materials and graduation program.

Note: Some candidates may not be able to take advantage of the Leadership Wilmington experience without assistance. To enable participation from all sectors, ALLTEL has provided scholarship assistance. Request information from the Leadership Wilmington program manager.

Schedule

Leadership Wilmington will open on August 31 - September 1 with a two-day overnight retreat. The program is divided into 11 weekly community sessions from 2-5 p.m. at various sites, a wrap-up session and graduation program in January. Leadership Wilmington requires a significant time commitment. Attendance is essential to receive maximum benefit from the program.

Academic Rigors

Participants must prepare for each session by reading material in their notebooks and by completing any assignments given by the session moderator. In addition, participants may wish to read local history available in the North Carolina Room of the New Hanover County Public Library. Some sessions may include a tour or demonstration.

Session Topics

Community Background and Vision • Community Diversity and Its Implications • Communications in the Wilmington Area • Effective Leadership in the Community • Health Care Trends, Challenges, and Implications • Law Enforcement and the Justice System • Community Cultural Life • Planning for Growth and Housing Challenges • Education in the Community • Transportation Challenges • The Realities of Business Growth • Developing Collective Conclusions • Leadership Wilmington Presentation to the Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors.

Nominations

Please complete and return the request form on the reverse side and an application will be mailed to you.

Note: Deadline for receipt of all Leadership Wilmington applications is July 30, 1999.

In Memorial

Dr. Charles M. Fugler

UNC Wilmington suffered a great loss with the death of Dr. Charles M. Fugler, professor emeritus in biological sciences, June 5 in Baton Rouge, La.

Dr. Fugler, 70, retired from UNCW in 1994 following 25 years of teaching, service and research. He received his bachelor's degree from Tulane University, master's degree from Louisiana State University and doctorate from Auburn University. At UNCW, Dr. Fugler authored or co-authored more than 50 articles or technical reports on tropical vertebrates and anthropology. He also undertook zoological research in Mexico, Guatemala, Ecuador, Costa Rica, Belize, Surinam and other locations worldwide. He was twice awarded Fulbright fellowships for study and teaching assignments in Bolivia and Cameroon.

Memorial donations may be made to the Fugler Fellowship in care of the LSU Museum of Natural Science in Baton Rouge.

The fund-raising effort to improve UNCW athletic facilities, Project 2002, is near the halfway point of a three-phased campaign designed to raise $4.4 million.

"We're very happy with the funding we have so far, but there's still some way to go," said Chris Delisio, executive director of the Seahawk Club. "The leadership that has been shown by Dr. William Nixon, Dr. Durwood Almkuist and the Wilmington Orthopaedic Group, along with other supporters, has allowed us to make this dream a reality. Now we need other contributors to step up and help us complete this much needed project."

Started two years ago, Project 2002 was initiated to upgrade existing athletic facilities to help the Seahawks remain competitive in the Colonial Athletic Association and increase recruiting appeal.

"This athletic program is a big asset to the university, as well as the community," Dr. Nixon said. "We need more benefactors and more contributors to make it even more successful."

Phase I of the project, which required $200,000, has been completed. It featured renovation of the softball field and construction of a new men's basketball locker room. Those projects have since been renamed Boseman Field and the Rountree-Jones Basketball Facility in honor of the Boseman family and the families of George Rountree and David Jones.

"Our women's softball field and men's basketball complex give us two of the finest facilities of their kind in the CAA," said Paul Miller, athletic director. "With the advent of the next two phases of the campaign, we should get a big boost for our program in the immediate future."

Phase II has two components. The first, an 18,000-square-foot sports medicine building to be located in the middle of the current athletic field, will have a large classroom, a 3,000-square-foot state-of-the-art sports medicine complex, dressing rooms and coaches offices for soccer, baseball, softball, track and field and golf. The second will be a substantial addition to the Nixon Annex that will double the size of the Golden Hawk Room and provide Seahawk Club and athletic offices.

The sports medicine building will be a valuable link to the university's academic program as well, said Marvin Moss, provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs. UNC General Administration has given UNCW approval to offer a degree program in athletic training. UNCW will be one of three universities in the system to offer such a program. The final phase of Project 2002 will take a comprehensive look at remaining facilities.

Razor Walker Award Winners Honored for Work with Youth

The Watson School of Education, the Consortium for the Advancement for Public Education and BellSouth recognized 14 honorees for their contributions to youth at the seventh annual Razor Walker Awards ceremony given June 17.

These prestigious awards, established in 1993 by Robert Tyndall, dean of the Watson School of Education, recognize individuals across the state who have made extraordinary contributions to the lives of children and youth of North Carolina. The recipients had the vision and courage to better the lives of the young people of this state. Honorees are selected by a committee that receives nominations statewide.

The 1999 Razor Walker Award winners are:

Leadership Wilmington Launches Search

Leadership Wilmington '99, a program whose mission for the past two decades has been to provide a continuous diverse supply of creative leaders to the community, is seeking candidates for its fall program.

Designed to educate participants about the challenges and needs of the community as well as the dynamics of social and economic change in the region, the program runs from Aug. 31 to Dec. 16 with a graduation ceremony scheduled Jan. 13.

Sponsored jointly by the Greater Wilmington Chamber Foundation Inc. and the Division for Public Service and Extended Education, its format includes a two-day overnight retreat slated for Aug. 31-Sept. 1, followed by 11 weekly community sessions from 2 to 5 p.m. at various sites, a wrap-up session and graduation.

Session topics include community background and vision, community diversity and its implications, communications, effective leadership, health care trends and challenges, law enforcement and justice system, cultural life, planning for growth, housing challenges, education and business growth.

Candidates are sought from corporate, business, educational, professional, non-profit and governmental sectors. Selection criteria include leadership potential, community involvement, accomplishments and recommendations.

Tuition is $495 and can be paid by the participant, a sponsor or through a Leadership Wilmington scholarship provided by ALLTEL. The fee includes the opening retreat, classes, speakers, breaks, notebooks, materials and graduation ceremony. Scholarships, which are provided to ensure participation from all sectors of the community, are based on financial need.

For an application or more information, contact Paul Laird, program manager, Greater Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, 762-2611, ext. 213.

Special Olympics Team China Heads to Raleigh

Special Olympics Team China will leave for the World Summer Olympics Games in Raleigh at 1 p.m. today from Schwartz Residence Hall. The campus and Wilmington community are encouraged to join in departure ceremonies to wish the athletes good luck in the World Games.

UNCW and Wilmington hosted the 75 Chinese athletes and coaches this week who lived in Schwartz Hall and trained at Trask Coliseum and the Greene Track and Field complex. Other community training venues were Laney High School, Trask Middle School and Gymnastics Unlimited.

Members of Wilmington's Chinese community, including seven UNCW faculty and staff, served as translators. Anping Wu, cataloging/reference librarian at Randall Library and member of the Wilmington Host Town Committee, organized the translators' schedule and coordinated each day's bus travel. She also prepared more than 100 name tags in English and Chinese and provided translations for banners and signs prepared to greet the delegation.

"I'm excited to have been a part of this week," said Wu. "This was a very meaningful thing to do, especially to assist with the delegation from China." Wu, who came to the United States in 1990, was born in the Hunan Province in south central China. She joined UNCW's library staff in 1998 after receiving a master's degree in library and information studies from the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

Wu said the support of university and library administrators made it possible for her to assist this week.

"I'm excited to be at UNCW and Randall Library," said Wu. "The level of support that I received made it possible to contribute to this important community project."

In addition to Wu, other faculty and staff translators were Yixin Chen, history; Yao Chang, Xin Lu and Wei Feng, mathematics and statistics; Li Shing Wang, student affairs; and Amy Zeng, production and decision sciences.

Chen, assistant professor of history, served as interpreter during the visit by Deng Pufang, chair of the China Disabled Persons Federation on Wednesday. A paraplegic, Deng is the principal leader of the disability movement in China and the son of Deng Xiaoping, the Chinese communist leader who was the most powerful figure in the People's Republic of China from the late 1970s until his death in 1997. He graduated from the Department of Technical Physics of Beijing University in 1966.
